As you shop, remember that veneer and solid wood are both good buys, because each is used where it serves best. Veneer is less likely to warp or crack; it makes beautifully figured wood patterns possible; that's why it's almost always used for big surfaces like the top of a dining table. Because it can be turned and shaped, solid wood is used for chair legs and rungs.

Solid wood means that all visible parts of the furniture are made from the solid-wood names—with no veneering. Hidden parts are usually made of less costly wood. Genuine wood means that all the visible solid parts and all veneers are made of the wood named. Hidden parts are of another wood. Wood finish means the furniture is made of other woods and finished (with stain and color) to look like the wood named. Birch and gumwood are most often used this way.

Grace

We thank Thee for the night and day:
For freedom here, to have our say.
For wind and fog and rain and sun—
We see Thy will on earth is done.
For those on whom high value's set,
The little children we beget.
For health, or courage to bear pain.
We're grateful in Thy Holy Name.
For ample food before us spread
In reverent thanks we bow our heads.
For work to do with hands and heart,
We're grateful for each active part.
For family ties—husband, wife—
We thank Thee for a cultured life.
Companionship, congenial friends;
It seems our blessings have no end.
For winter, autumn, summer, spring—
We thank Thee, God, for everything.

What? WASH BOTH SIDES IN 2 MINUTES?

Yes—IF YOU HAVE R·O·W REMOVABLE WINDOWS

Results of an independent research company's time test showed 2 minutes 30 seconds to wash both sides of an ordinary wood window; only 2 minutes for the removable R·O·W.

See R·O·W—the window that makes housekeeping easier—at your lumber dealer; or ask your builder.

A lady rested, cheery,

you drive down the mountain and turn right to Rincon, 10 miles north to Pala (an Indian reservation trading town and the site of the small Pala Mission). From Pala you go 9 miles north to Temecula, then take U.S. 395 north to Wildomar, and turn left along the western shore of Lake Elsinore. Turn left on California 74; drive 31 miles to Doheny Park and U.S. 101.

Have your dinner at Christian's Hut on the Balboa bay front tonight. You can look through big windows at white-hulled yachts and the deep blue of the bay while listening to South Sea music. Dinners at Christian's, which is run by two Frenchmen from Tahiti, run from $2 to $3.

Fourth day

Take California 55 east from Newport to Santa Ana and turn south on U. S. 101 (not the alternate but the main road) through Tustin, Irvine, and El Toro, the Marine aviation base.

You have been traveling through some of California's richest orange groves. Citrus culture is just about the most intensely developed farming in existence; the trees are pedigreed, and only high producers are used as parents. Six years of patient care are necessary before the first commercial crop is produced. Insects and disease must be fought throughout the tree's half century of life—but the big gamble is frost. Two or three degrees of temperature and the direction of a gentle wind can mean the difference between a good crop and bankruptcy. So the growers listen to the frost warnings like gamblers watching the turn of a card.

At San Juan Capistrano, you turn left on California 74 and go 65 miles to Hemet, heart of the Ramona country. Helen Hunt Jackson's tragic novel of the California Indians is re-enacted in a pageant every May.

At Hemet, you begin a 68-mile drive over the spectacular Pines-to-Palms Highway, through the heart of the San Bernardino National Forest. Stop near Keen Camp and take a little walk. You are almost a mile above the sea, there is snow on San Jacinto Peak 10 miles to the north, the air is winy and brisk, and you are at the center of 2,500 square miles of primitive forests.

Take a deep breath of this sharp, cool air before you start down the grade to Indian Wells and Indio, 22 feet below sea level in the middle of the red-hot Coachella Valley. The valley opens suddenly in front of you, like an unexpected vista of the Holy Land. It is all there—the date palms, the shimmering sandy wastes, the green oases, and the Dead Sea, only here it is the Salton Sea. This is where the soft dates ripen in September, fruits you probably have never tasted because they are so perishable. The familiar date is the firmer Deglet Noor which ripens later.

South of you is the Salton Sea, caused by a flood of the Colorado River 40-odd years ago, a bitter, dying lake 245 feet below sea level. South of it is irrigated Imperial Valley, bursting rich with crops.

But you turn north on California 111 through Palm Springs, a piece of Beverly Hills set in the desert, quiet and empty in the summer.

Turning left on U.S. 60, 11 miles north of Palm Springs, you climb into the windy gap between the giant peaks of San Gorgonio and San Jacinto. This is cherry country; if it is spring, stop at Banning or Beaumont for a sack of Bings.

At Riverside take U.S. 91 to California 39, five miles beyond Anaheim, and follow the signs to Knott's Berry Farm.

If you want to eat in the Ghost Town at Knott's, it is wise to phone in the morning for reservations. There are several eating houses in this big establishment, one for steaks, another for chicken, another for hamburgers. The whole thing began when a dissatisfied berry farmer didn't like selling his crop to middlemen. Mrs. Knott put the berries in home-baked pies, and that meant selling coffee along with the pie in a roadside stand. Now 2,000 people flock in for big, old-style dinners. Perhaps you will think Knott's is too big and busy now, but the wild-west mining camp and jail are a lot of fun.

From Knott's take California 39 south to the ocean and Newport Beach.

Fifth day

There's a lot to Los Angeles outside Hollywood, so you're going there again today. Go north on U. S. 101 Alternate to California 39, and then to 101 Bypass, which will bring you right into downtown Los Angeles.

From the Gray Line Sight-seeing Terminal (1207 West Third Street) or from in front of Clifton's Pacific Seas Cafeteria (Olive Street near 6th), you can take a sight-seeing bus tour lasting three hours. (Adults, $4; children, 5 to 12, half-fare.) It takes you through the Warner Brothers Studio and lets you visit Angelus Temple, founded by Aimee Semple McPherson, as well as showing you the old sections of Los Angeles. This is the best way of seeing a motion-picture studio unless you know a big shot.

Back from your tour, you can try Clifton's Cafeteria for lunch. The Pacific Seas, as this one is called, is a high-ceilinged jungle of tropic plants, neon tubing in pinks, purples, and greens, organ music: but a really good lunch will cost you only 60 cents apiece.

After lunch, take a ride up Angel's Flight, an inclined railway whose two little cars balance each other like the weights on a grandfather's clock as they go up and down the 33-percent grade to Bunker Hill. This is a 325-foot trip to an old neighborhood out of Los Angeles' past, which persists like an island on this hill in the heart of downtown. Round trip is a nickel.

Near the towering City Hall (464 feet high with an observation floor) are Olvera Street, the old Plaza with its Mission, the Pio Pico House (Pio Pico was the last Mexican governor of California), and the new Union Station, much in harmony with the lingering charm of the Plaza.

Olvera Street is a restoration of the old Pueblo of Los Angeles. It's cleaner and more expensive than Tijuana; the cantinas have excellent Spanish and Mexican food (not the same) and flamenco dancers, exultant string music, castanets clicking.

It is midafternoon now. If you want to visit the Huntington Library today, you will have to forego anything else after lunch. Take Aliso Street east from the Union Station to Mission Road, and the latter to Huntington Drive; it's about 11 miles to San Marino, home of the library.

The Huntington Library is a paradise of original manuscripts and rare books. Here you will see the originals of Benjamin Franklin's Autobiography, Robert Louis Stevenson's A Child's Garden of Verse, and Tennyson's Idylls of the King; there is a Gutenberg Bible five centuries old.

In the adjoining art gallery, are Gainsborough's Blue Boy, and Pinkie by Sir Thomas Lawrence. Outside you can wander about the Huntington estate. There is a rose garden, a cactus garden, a Japanese garden, and a tropical garden.

Pasadena, just north of San Marino, world-known for the Tournament of Roses and the Rose Bowl, is a city of fine homes—bright glass homes in the top layer of the hills, the next layer (the '30's) of big "period" houses, French Provincial and the like, an older layer from the rich '20's of ornate stucco, elephantine homes, and then the flowering gingerbread of old Pasadena, particularly on Orange Grove Avenue, the Beacon Hill of Southern California. Take Colorado Boulevard west to the Arroyo Seco bridge. The Rose Bowl is a mile north. It's a short, scenic trip past it to Devils' Gate dam.

Continue west on Colorado (U.S. 66 Alternate) to Glendale Avenue, about 3 miles, and turn left to Forest Lawn Memorial Park, the nation's best-known and most unusual cemetery. A guide will show you the splendid replicas of Michelangelo statues, the stained glass window of the Last Supper, the three small churches, including Annie Laurie's Wee Kirk o' the Heather, and the sumptuous Mausoleum.

After Forest Lawn, drive on Riverside Drive from Glendale Boulevard toward the forested hills northwest. They are in Griffith Park, 4,000 acres of municipal park, much of it wild and primitive, with a small zoo (closes at 4:30), and a miniature railroad for kids.

Returning home, drive south to U.S. 101. Take it east and south to Buena Park, then follow California 39 south to the ocean.

Sixth day

Go north on 101 Alternate, past Long Beach and the beach cities of Redondo, Hermosa, and Manhattan, the aging amusement town of Venice, and along the ocean below the Palisades at Santa Monica. You go past costly beach shacks of film stars at Malibu and along the curve of the sea at Port Hueneme, through Oxnard and Ventura to the millionaire homes of Montecito.

Stop in Montecito and toll-call the Santa Barbara G for information on to the gardens of some o wealthiest families. If available, your family There is a fee which va ing to the tour.

CIRCULATES HEAT!

The Heatilator Fireplace draws in air at floor level . . . heats it and circulates warm air to all corners of the room.

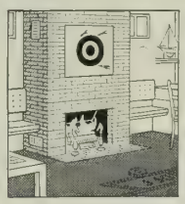
This FIREPLACE warms the whole room ...even adjoining rooms!

● Build your fireplace around a Heatilator* Fireplace unit — enjoy the cheer of an open fire plus cozy warmth in every corner of the room. Heat usually wasted up the chimney is put to work. Your fireplace becomes 100% useful, gives you room-wide comfort while reducing cost of furnace operation during cool weather—Spring and Fall!

WILL NOT SMOKE

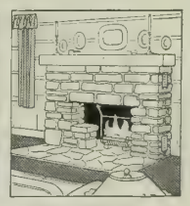
The Heatilator unit is a scientifically designed, heavy-gauge steel form, complete from floor to flue, around which any style fireplace can easily be built. It assures correct construction, eliminates smoking. Adds little to the cost of the completed fireplace. Best of all it provides all the vital parts of the fireplace— saves cost of a separate damper, firebrick and masonry. Reduces time and labor on most jobs.

CUTS FURNACE OPERATION



A Heatilator Fireplace makes furnace fires unnecessary on cool Spring and Fall days, cuts weeks from the furnace season, dollars from fuel bills. Use it to supplement furnace heat during severe weather, or in case of fuel shortages or emergencies. In mild climates, it supplies all the heat needed by many homes.

IDEAL FOR SUMMER CAMPS



Architects and builders agree that a Heatilator Fireplace is one of the wisest investments for camps or summer cottages. It makes them usable weeks longer in spring and fall, even on cold winter weekends.

PROVED BY 24 YEARS USE

Get the fireplace unit that has been proved in thousands of homes for 24 years. Make sure the name "Heatilator" is on the dome and damper handle of the unit you buy. Accept no substitute. See it at leading building material dealers everywhere.

Ideal for basement recreation rooms

Makes summer camps usable months longer

The MAN NEXT DOOR

These March days remind me of a driver who pulls into the middle of the street, points to the left, and then makes a right turn.

And March is also the month when our tax check buys us the privilege of cussing the government without being "subversive."

One of the most-pampered husbands I know is a fellow who never helps with the dishes, lets his wife change the storm windows, forgets anniversaries, and shaves every night.

I always pay attention to her mother's stories of what my wife was like as a child. It not only makes for better relations, but helps me understand how my wife got to be the girl that I married.

I can't deny that I enjoy the advantages of automatic heat, but I do miss the thrill I used to feel whenever I came across a board that would make a good piece of kindling.

The boy on the next block who went straight from high school to marriage is having a hard time figuring out why his mother was always able to feed him for nothing, but his wife can't.

A bachelor friend of mine has discovered a hobby that puts him in great demand as a house guest. His hobby is asking others to tell him about their hobbies.

My annual spring inspection of the house reveals that damage done to the exterior by winter weather is almost as severe as damage done to the interior by winter games.

"A brave man," said the retired colonel around the corner, "is one who buys the first television set in a neighborhood heavily populated with children."

At a recent gathering, it seemed to me that the married women were dressed in better taste than the single girls. Could it be because a married woman dresses to please one man, while the single girl tries to please them all?

I hope my daughter never marries a doctor or a lawyer. Not that they make bad husbands, but a wife whose husband is in on every tragedy in town is not apt to get much sympathy after a trying day with the children.

Our boy has become a creature who can't eat without dreaming at the table, and can't go to sleep without eating in bed.

Once a month I sleep in my son's room and he sleeps in mine. I don't know if my room has any effect on him, but a night among toys and childish totems, getting the lay of the house from his longitude and latitude, and I'm able to understand both of us a little better.

I find it hard to live down h been the youngest in the family. I find myself deciding that some job hard for a little boy like me, and t ought to wait until Ma tells one big boys to do it.

The best pets we ever had were stray animals who wandered int house of their own free will, looked t carefully, sampled our food, accom tions, and atmosphere, then decid were the right kind of people to ado

Whenever I am in the mood to hear w children did at school, they can't rem thing. But as soon as I settle down t newspaper to find out what happene world. I get a full report on what every the class has been doing for a week.

"I thought that when my boy
we'd have a man-to-man talk abou
Jim Hamilton said at lunch. "Bu wants to talk about is cars, and know how to change the subject."

If I had my choice of one p ment to live again, I would ch first time the touch of a girl's mine made my heart beat faste was at that moment I first fell i not with the girl, I realize n with new-found love itself. At t ment I faintly divined what n ings and emotions I had yet to ence. And I was like an explorer down a narrow stream who see through the trees the first shimm a mysterious, enchanting sea heard much about, but whose he has always doubted.

Tomorrow's Glamour Girl? . . . maybe!

You naturally want her to grow up to be attractive and sought-after, you hope she will meet nice boys and marry one of them. Of course you do.

When she's a little older you will encourage her to guard her charm and daintiness . . . you will, of course, see to it that, above all, her breath is sweet and wholesome. For, without such appealing freshness, her other good points may count for little.

Her best friend in this matter is Listerine Antiseptic. It has been a family standby for more than sixty years. Literally millions rely on it as the extra-careful precaution against halitosis (unpleasant breath). A night-and-morning "must" against offending and especially before any date.

You see, Listerine Antiseptic instantly freshens and sweetens the breath . . . and keeps it that way . . . not for mere minutes . . . but for hours, usually.

While some cases of halitosis are of systemic origin, most cases, say some authorities, are due to the bacterial fermentation of tiny food particles clinging to mouth surfaces. Listerine Antiseptic quickly halts such fermentation, then overcomes the odors fermentation causes.

Peace of mind in dianetics?

Professor Frederick L. Schuman, who has given the new, m discussed pyschiatric "science" a trial in his own home to explores dianetics as it might apply to you*

In such times as these, prescriptions for peace of mind, or peace of soul, or emotional maturity, or freedom from fear find a ready market. Some work. Some do not. No one really knows why—except that firm belief in any means of escape from worry seemingly helps to make it work, whether that escape be yogurt, canasta, or psychoanalysis.

During the past year, a new approach to personal insecurity has aroused wide attention. The problems it poses, and the claims it makes, are at least not dull. Can you, through it, help a delinquent boy or a chronic drunkard? Can you safeguard unborn babies from emotional upsets in later life? Can you, without drugs, ease a pain, cure a headache, or remove an allergy? Can you, by re-experiencing your past and talking about it to a listening friend, free yourself from outbursts of temper, moods of depression, or weird illnesses with no known physical cause? The new prescription—called dianetics—says definitely: "Yes, you can!"

Hailed as a science by its friends and as a hoax by its foes, dianetics offers fresh answers to old questions. Everyone would like to know whether the answers are any good. Along with my family and a few neighbors in a small college town nested in the purple hills of the Berkshires, I have tried to find out. My answers are at any rate intriguing, because—true or false—they raise more problems than they solve. But first, let me outline what the practice of dianetics is and what those who practice it believe:

The mind, say the disciples of dianetics, works on two levels. The Analytical Mind solves problems with the speed and accuracy of a business machine—or would if it were free to do so. It is often not free because of the Reactive Mind, where all pain, grief, and unconsciousness are recorded while the Analytical Mind is temporarily shut down. Such recordings are called "engrams." They are not memories, for they are ordinarily not recalled to the Analytical Mind. They are believed (by the dianeticists) to be recordings in living body necessarily nerve cells. They begi birth, but with conception.

Engrams, particularly those e corded before birth, are thought b titioners of dianetics to be the comm "aberrations," meaning all failures lytical Mind to work at top efficie inner conflicts and anxieties whic source in the real world or in phy Aberrations range from mental "bl tional upsets, and psychosomatic crime, madness, or early death. BOSS CAR in any man's language

THE first time you settle yourself in this strapping performer, that word "ROADMASTER" takes on a rich new meaning.

It's more than a name, chastely spelled out on the deck lid of a car.

It's a robust description of what this finest of all Buicks does to you.

You are the confident master of highway and byway, with the graceful wheel of this nimble beauty under your hand, and its 152-horsepower Fireball engine responding to your toe.

You can sprint, cruise, or gentle to a stop with serene and effortless ease—for here the unbroken surge of Dynaflow Drive is combined with the finest brakes that Buick has ever built.

You can enjoy the expansiveness of ample room, and the comfort of cushions almost voluptuous in their depth and softness.

But if you think that all this is an indulgence that few can afford, better see your Buick dealer. Unlike other fine cars, this ROADMASTER shares an advantage of volume production—an advantage which keeps its price per pound the lowest in its field.

Your Key to Greater Value

Who says a house doesn't grow?

TAKE your house, for instance. The money you put in it years ago wouldn't buy the same house today. Property values have increased steadily, more than 40% since 1940 alone. And there is the extra money you've spent in adding improvements—a new heating system perhaps, or a modern kitchen, or even a garage.

Yes, houses do grow—and the significant point is that many of them these days have grown right from under their insurance protection! Your home may well be one of them.

That's why we suggest that you see an Agent of the North America Companies now. He'll help you check your insurance in light of the increased value of your house and possessions. Well-trained, experienced, and one whose first duty is to the insured, he'll be able to show you planned protection—insurance tailored to your needs—can save you money, and stand between you and loss from fire, accident or lawsuit.

The full facilities of the North America Companies—one of America's strongest, oldest and most extensive insurance groups—are available to help you better. Field Service Offices in the United States and Canada supply our Agents with technical assistance and on-the-spot Head Office service. You get thorough attention, from writing of policy to settlement of claims. If you don't know an Agent of the North America Companies, write us, and we will be glad to introduce you.

Insurance Company of North America, founded 1792 in Independence Hall, is the oldest American stock fire and marine insurance company. It heads the "North America" Companies which meet the public demand for practically all types of Fire, Marine, Automobile, Accident, Aviation and Liability insurance; Fidelity and Surety Bonds. Sold only through Agents or Brokers.

re on quite excited, as if co upon a revelation.

Not that we did very well, at first. Dianetics may, or may not, become a science. But auditing is an art. We learned by trial and error. We compared notes. I was sufficiently impressed to visit the Hubbard Dianetic Research Foundation in Elizabeth, New Jersey. A professional auditors' course was under way. A co-auditors' course was flourishing. Publishing plans were being pushed. Eager and able young people, some of them with stars in their eyes, were working enthusiastically at what they plainly regarded as a great mission. Mr. Hubbard was on the eve of departure for California to direct and expand the work on the West Coast.

Back home, we argued, corresponded with critics and converts, and reread our books on psychoanalysis and psychiatry. The chairman of our Psychology Department pointed out some of Hubbard's crude errors and suggested that dianetic reverie was probably a form of light hypnosis. A younger psychologist was interested in trying it, but could not bear the thought of returning to a thing he had struggled hard to forget: a bomber crash in England in 1943 when, as the sole surviving flyer, he had screamed, "Let me out; let me out!" My wife's query to him—"Have you ever experienced any feelings of claustrophobia?"—brought the somewhat surprised reply that since the crash he had felt unhappy if he stayed very long in any one job. He left our town in September for a new teaching post.

By late autumn a small group of our local students, quite on their own initiative, were auditing one another. The Hubbard book was a national sensation. I had vainly tried to persuade various editors to permit me to review it. They preferred to ignore it, and when they could no longer do so, to assign it to "authorities" who denounced it with varying degrees of ridicule, anxiety, or apoplexy. I lectured on dianetics in Boston's Community Church, and met with what is usually called "a mixed reception."

Meanwhile, tens of thousands of Americans across the continent were taking up the "cause" or "cult" or "craze," or whatever it is, in some disrespect of authority. So what, in the name of common sense, can people who are as yet unacquainted with dianetics believe about it? Let's look at the record.

Aside from the treatment of psychotics under medical care, dianetics helps only those who help themselves. The search for engrams, whether helpful or not, is fascinating. All of us here, in our audited journeys into the past, have discovered a new dimension of memory. We have relived events of infancy of which we had no previous awareness. Most of us.

Extra years of fun when you're
RETIRED WITH $250 A MONTH

RETIRED to Southern California, Ann and I are having the time of our lives, with year-round sunshine, oranges growing in our back yard, and no worry about money or time clocks. You see we found out—back in 1929—how we could get $250 a month guaranteed as long as we'd live.

It started the winter when I was forty. Ann and I heard, like everybody else, how science—even in those days—was stretching a man's lifetime. Already, it had jumped ten years since I was born!

"Well, if we're going to live longer," Ann said, "I'd like to have some fun. I'd like you to be able to retire. Sell this house and go West." "Fine," I'd answer, "but what would we do for money?"

Ann showed me the way the night she cut out an ad and left it by my old chair. It told how an ordinary man, with a good salary, could guarantee himself a retirement income.

The income, the ad said, wouldn't depend on business ups and downs. It was steady, certain, guaranteed for life. Best of all, you didn't need a lot of money in the bank. All you did need was 15 or 20 good earning years ahead.

Ann looked at me. "Jim, you ought to look into that right now. You know we spend money as fast as we make it. And you're not one bit nearer being able to retire than when we were married." Well, that night I mailed the coupon.

And not long after, my mail brought a booklet telling all about Phoenix Mutual Plans. I could get $250 a month starting at 55 or 60 that would last as long as I lived—even if I lived to be 100!

As soon as I could, I applied and qualified for a Phoenix Mutual Plan. In 1949, I got my first Phoenix Mutual check and retired. Ann and I drove to California. We're enjoying every minute. Ann says they're our "extra years of fun." Month after month, we're thankful for that check for $250.

This story is typical. Assuming you begin at a young enough age, you can plan to have an income of $10 to $250 a month or more—starting at age 55, 60, 65 or older. Send the coupon and receive, by mail and without charge, a booklet which tells about Phoenix Mutual Plans. Similar plans are available for women. Don't delay. Send for your copy now.

It takes only a little remodeling to new grace and glamour to an old

By Dorothy McCullough

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Spence of Rockford, Illinois, is not an architectural gem, by today's standards. The windows with their curved tops are a bit old-fashioned, the chimney isn't high enough or big enough, and the front porch is a symbol of past years.

But in this same house, built some hundred years ago, you find other qualities that make it a good piece of architecture as a whole. It has a magnificent setting, sheltered by a cover of tall shade trees, and is natural in the farm landscape of which it is a part. The house is bright with color—strong reds and reflective whites that catch your eye, even when you're looking the other way. And the lines are straight, quite s pleasing.

A new, fast, low-cost way to build a house

Photographs, Guy Burgess

Here's your log cabin — 1951 style! Roof and walls of this handsome modern home were built of the revolutionary lumber product described below. Plan at right

By T. H. Kimble

The typical log cabin of the American frontier was a pretty fair solution to the housing problem of its era. If you had some trees, an ax, some land, and a helper, you could move your family into a snug house in a very few days.

The log-cabin idea — that of building a house by simply piling up chunks of wood — now has been revived, modernized, and improved upon by a forward-looking Denver firm, Apex Wood Products, Incorporated.

A solid, 4x8-inch, redcedar timber — tongued-and-grooved and end matched — is the basic unit of the Apex house. These "logs," anchored to each other and to the foundation and top plate by steel rods, are the finished walls — both inside and out. Covered with paper, tar, and gravel, they may also be the roof.

The cost-cutting factor works in two ways. First in the saving of time and labor in construction. The house above was erected by five unskilled workers in just four days. Second, the saving in material. When the walls are up — they're finished! You need no sheathing or siding outside, no lath or plaster inside.

For prices and further information, write to Apex Wood Products, Inc., 602 Umatilla Street, Denver, Colorado.

Cedar timbers can be used, too, for compl[ete] interior partitions. Here they separate din[ing] living room. The floor is of asphalt tile on a [slab]

Interior face of wall and ceiling timbers can be stained, varnished, painted. Insulating value is equal to standard frame construction plus two inches of insulation

"We're building all our houses this way now"

"Right now, my problem is to find building materials that help keep costs down...without sacrificing quality. That's what Temlok® Sheathing does, and that's why I use it on every house I build."

Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing does help to reduce the cost of building. At the same time, it actually makes the house stronger and adds insulation for year-round comfort. Temlok is an unusually strong building material made of wood fibers. By using these large, lightweight boards of Temlok, builders can make real savings in labor time. Usually, the house can be covered completely in a single day. With Temlok, there's little or no waste.

Temlok Sheathing saves money by saving fuel, too. The fibers that make Temlok strong also make it an excellent insulation.

Moisture resistance is especially important these days, for construction delays may mean that the sheathing will be exposed to the weather for a longer time. Every fiber of Temlok Sheathing is waterproofed by asphalt to protect against moisture damage.

Before ground is broken for your new home, be sure to ask your lumber dealer or builder for the complete details about Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing. You'll always be glad you did.

WRITE FOR FREE BOOKLET "How to Build a More Comfortable New Home." It's packed with ideas about building materials and methods, illustrated in color. Just write to Armstrong Cork Company, Building Materials Division, 5104 Farnum Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

s fertilizer needed in leaf feeding

Experiments with leaf feeding of plants seem to indicate that one ounce of phosphorus in a spray applied to leaves does the work of a pound applied to soil.

As to speed with which plants can absorb fertilizers through their leaves, Dr. S. H. Wittwer of Michigan State College says that an hour after radioactive phosphorus is applied to foliage, it can be detected in all growing parts of the plant. Radioactive potash moves with equal speed.

The new annual for 1951, Angel's Trumpet Ivory King, was found growing around an old temple site in the Andes mountains in South America.

A clearing where a temple once stood usually can be spotted by the Angel's Trumpet plants growing where medicine men performed the trepanning operation so conspicuous on old Inca skulls.

Instead of the single trumpet produced by the regular species, Ivory King has triple trumpets, one inside the other. Botanically, it is Datura metel.

n't "bite" on flowering fakes

If you are asked to buy the miraculous "Moonbeam Lily" that grows under water—don't.

Petty fakers take thousands of dollars away from innocent flower lovers with this humbug. If sold at fairs or flower shows, the plant is said to flower in a week—just long enough for the seller to get out of town. If vended from door to door, flowers are promised overnight.

The miraculous plant is achieved by taking almost any flower, from roses to carnations, and attaching it to the root of Trapa natans, a water weed. The fake is submerged in water and sold under any of a hundred intriguing names.

No flowering plants produce their blooms under water—there is no reason for a plant to do so.

Home, sweet home—the hard w

We built our own, we mean. And we'd do it again, too. Or would we?

By Alice M

The banking boys weren't too eager to go along with our scheme

During the past five years, you have heard and read many stories about families who built their own homes. Some of those stories were inspiring; some were incredible; some were funny. The one you're going to read now, ours, is a mixture—sort of—of all three.

Some people were smart to build their own homes. They got, that way, a home they couldn't otherwise have had. Others should never have tried it. They got only frustration, blisters, headaches, and less house for their money than they could have bought ready-made. We think we fall, mostly, in the first category.

We had friends, however, who asked us if we thought they should try building their own. We told 'em: "No." Why? Here were their qualifications:

1. They'd had their eviction notice for months, and the new tenants were gradually moving in on top of them.

2. They hated the place they were living in anyway, and swore they'd pitch a tent before paying more rent to any landlord.

3. They had only a couple of hundred dollars saved, and they expected the bank to say a few magic words over it and produce the rest for them.

4. They didn't think they could easily give up their weekend parties, their Saturday rounds of golf, their many other activities.

5. They thought that building a house would be a snap.

On the other hand, here were our qualifications, which we thought would enable us to become successful members of the build-your-own club:

1. We were living in a decent apartment, with no apparent danger of being ousted.

2. We had a few thousand dollars in the bank that we didn't plan to spend for luxuries just because our friends had them.

3. We had, we felt, plenty of ambition and stick-to-itiveness—plus our healthy, understanding (we hoped) father and father-in-law.

4. We were prepared to give up most of our social life for a long time, and to not feel too badly about living in a partially completed house.

5. We'd been looking for a really worthwhile, demanding hobby.

There were other important items that we didn't forget. First among those items was me.

If I'd been a social butterfly, or the "I'm-so-neglected" type of wife, my husband would have given up the building idea right quick—or he'd have found that after the house was finished, he'd be living in it all alone.

Another problem was how to handle friends and relatives who wailed "Gee, I wish I had your money" in louder and louder tones as our project progressed. What they didn't seem to realize was that the farther up the [illegible] the farther down the [illegible] came!

Even after I got out both bankbooks and showed my lord and master why we couldn't afford a house as fine as the one he'd drawn, he still wasn't convinced. Being endowed with neither time nor money, my husband is blessed with an overabundance of ambition. The only logical answer for him was, "I'll build it myself." So we did just exactly that.

want to miss a chance to say "I told you so" if anything went wrong. Plenty did. But as things sometimes turn out, Fate played a nasty trick on two of the doubters. Soon the two converts (our respective fathers) were working on our house every chance they got.

The first load of concrete blocks piled up beside that mammoth pit was enough to discourage even the stoutest of hearts. After trying to lift one, I, too, was almost convinced that "it couldn't be done." That night I brought home the first of many economy-size bottles of vitamin capsules.

(And a day is a long time when there are just two days each week to work.) But once we did get lined up, the rest of the foundation went smoothly. Ten weekends and $650 later, the last of the 1,038 blocks was laid. The first objective was taken.

After surveying all the trees on our lot, we decided they were all too crooked to make straight boards, so off we went to the lumberyard. We were ready to begin work that looked like something.

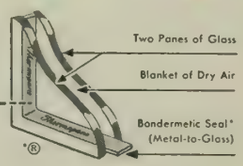
More spacious in feeling because the window wall "opens" the room to the outdoors . . .

More spacious to use because the window is *Thermopane insulating glass. With Thermopane you don't have to move away from windows in cold weather to avoid drafts. It's like adding a couple of feet to your rooms. Think what that means in small rooms particularly.



Thermopane saves fuel. And it helps you avoid frosted or steamed-up windows. Your old twice-a-year struggle with storm sash becomes a thing of the past.

When you build, include a lovely window wall like this. It can be done at surprisingly low cost by using a unique method of framing. If you want detail drawings for your builder, showing how to build it, write today. Ask for our Thermopane book, too. Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., 341 Nicholas Building, Toledo 3, Ohio.

"Show more oak" Is the Dominant Trend

By Everett Brown

I'm sure most decorators welcome, as I do, the overwhelming trend to oak flooring on the part of home owners. It gives us the ideal flooring for adaptability and beauty in the rooms we create.

Of course, we all know that no other flooring provides home owners with all the basic flooring needs. Oak is the most durable of all floors—it takes the wear of feet and the weight of furniture better than any other. And because of this, it is the economical floor, since it is truly the lifetime floor. There is no such thing as worn-out sections to be replaced.

Oak has wonderful natural insulating qualities to help keep rooms warm in winter and cool in summer. It's the flooring for health for that reason and also because it is so easy to keep clean.

I know of no other flooring so universally considered correct for any period of furnishings, any style of decorating, any type of house. And it has amazing variety in strip, plank, or parquetry treatments.

It's no wonder 85% of all prospective home owners prefer oak flooring. It has simply everything everyone wants.

Send for NEW Planning and Decorating Booklet!

Firmly and exactly you've told us what you want in your next home. And here is our answer:

Building Editor

It must have no fewer than three bedrooms.

It should be Contemporary in design, with a compact plan that will look well on a suburban lot (but fit on a small city lot, too).

It must have at least a partial basement.

It should be one-story, not too spread out.

It must have two bathrooms, or at least a compartmented bath.

It should have a living-dining combination, though it might have a separate dining room. But it must have eating space in the kitchen.

"It" is the house you readers want to build. You've given us these facts through your purchases of Five Star plans, and your preferences are definite and strong.

Better Homes & Gardens has published a number of fine houses that fit four or five of these six preferences. Now, on the next four pages, we bring you a house that fits your basic demands in every way—Five Star Home No. 2104.

The house you ordered

Beyond your basic demands, given on page 53, you aren't too specific. So the F. & R. Lazarus Company of Columbus, which owns and decorated the house, combined its talents with those of Architect Leon Seligson, A.I.A., Builders Robert Weiler and Ben Lurie to complete a home any family would be proud to have.

(The house, located at 2834 E. Broad Street in Columbus, will be open to the public beginning Sunday, March 25.)

Though designed for a corner lot, and admirably suited to one, Better Homes & Gardens Five Star Home No. 2104 can be readily adapted to any lot 70 feet wide or more. Garage doors are away from the street so that you don't leave a gaping hole in the house when you forget to close the double door. Assuming that you will use half the garage for storage space instead of a second car, it's far easier to get to the kitchen with bundles if the garage door is at the side of the house.

To make the transition from outdoors to indoors as slight as possible, both exterior materials and color scheme have been carried inside. The slate used for the entrance porch continues into the front hall, and is also carried from the porch and terrace into the living room as a fireplace hearth. Stone at the entrance reappears in the fireplace wall, on the porch, and in the chimney and planting box on the terrace. The low [Turn to page 56

Each wants year-round, easily kept, good looks.

Choosing the right plants has been the answer for the looks of it and to help reduce soil washing when plants are not in full leaf. For the two handlings of re

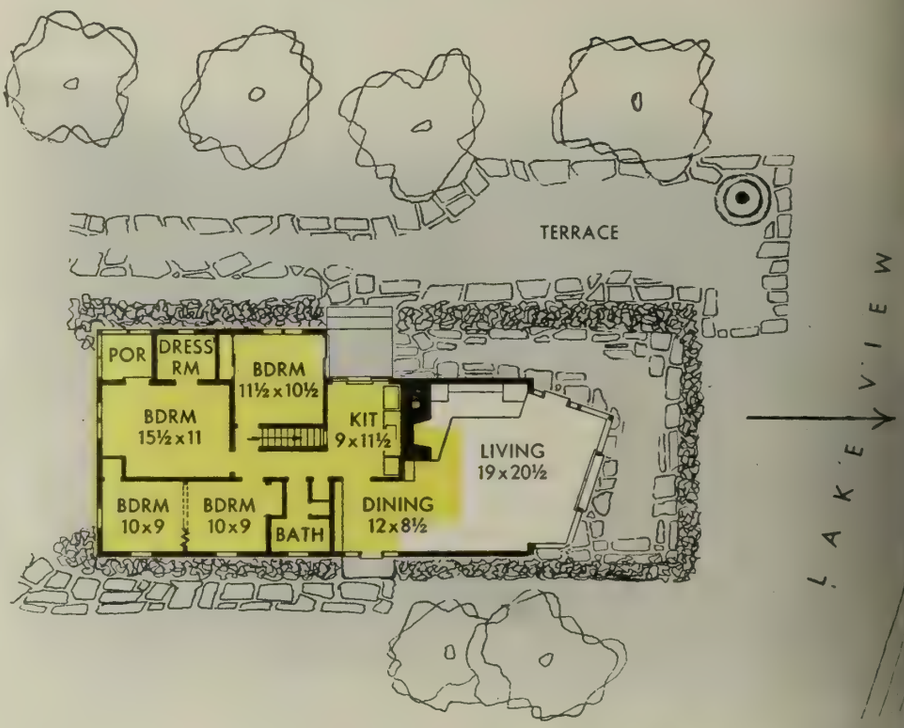
BEFORE No eyesore, this little house had a certain warm charm lost its charm when you walked inside and saw nothing



If it faces the wrong way,

You can "turn" your house around

By Jessie Walker

While changes in plan were extensive, positions of bathroom and kitchen were not moved, to cut plumbing costs. Color on "after" plan indicates shape and size of the house as it existed "before"

If you took the title of this story literally, it would cost you a fortune to fit a badly placed house to its setting. But the method Architect Martin Kermacy of Austin, Texas, used on the Andrew Johnson home in Barrington, Illinois, is much simpler. It doesn't require a hydraulic jack; all it takes is a little internal surgery and a good surgeon.

The Johnsons had a fine lot on a small lake. But the living room was on the road side, with no possible lake view. And since the house was originally built as a summer house, bedrooms and kitchen were aggravatingly small.

To correct all these faults, the plan was first reorganized within existing space, then extended toward the lake. In this extension is part of the living room, completely glassed and angled for shore-to-shore view. Behind it are dining space converted from a bedroom, and a rearranged kitchen. On the road side are four bedrooms, all larger than the three they replaced, and with improved storage space.

Yet except for the lakeside extension, the only structural work was addition of three partitions and removal of two.

By comparing trees here and in "before" picture, you can see how changes were made. Front and side walls were extended until they met; glassed portion was added beyond this extension. Smooth cypress replaced asbestos siding. Note how eave was broken to save life of a shade tree

Used often as a bedroom is this small den, which owes its 24-hour usefulness to a convertible love seat. For rooms even smaller, you can get a chair which unfolds to form a bed. Edge your drive and walks

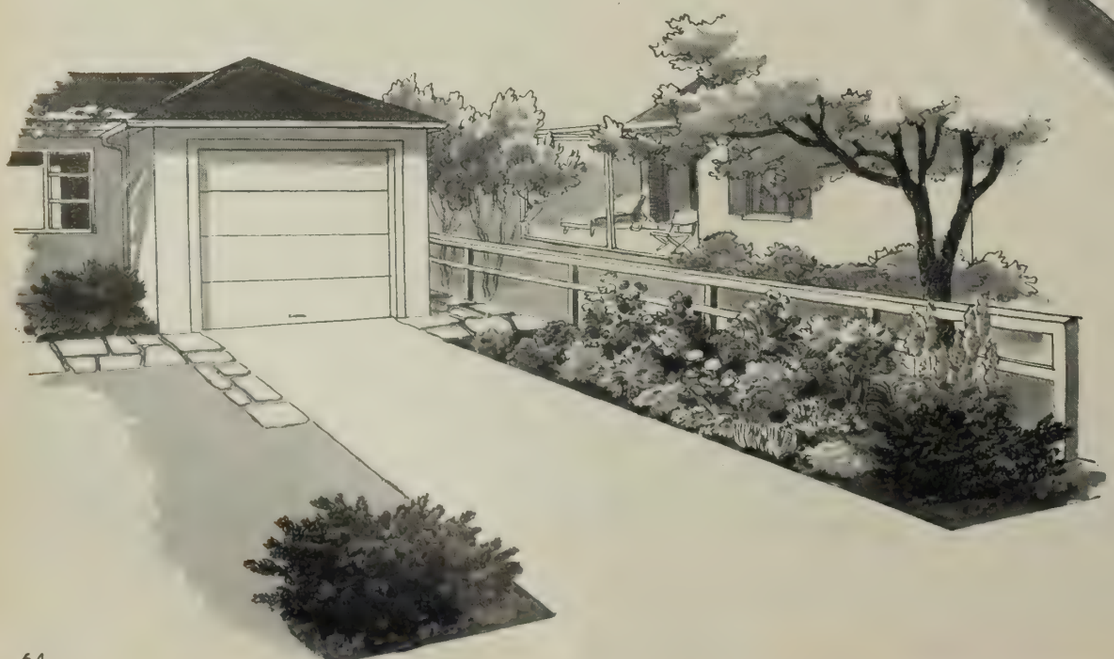
By Victor H. Ri

Getting the most in good looks from your home sett means making corners and narrow strips pay dividends, b their fair share in creating the over-all beauty you want.

The location of the buildings on your homesite, and its ele tion above the street, may have been the big factors in de mining the placement of your drive and walks. Several a ward angles and soil strips may be left. But they needn't c tinue to be unattractive.

Here's how to improve such strips with handsome plant s that adapt to dozens of situations:



Between your walk and house

Available space determines what you plant. If your space is only 2 or 3 feet wide, don't use shrubs which require 5 feet when full grown. Try tulips or spring-flowering bulbs, then geraniums or annual flowers. Or let the vines grow up two or three single strands of wire

LET THEM DRIVE— OR STAY ALIVE?

By Milton Mayer

This story has been told before. A thousand times before. But this time it has a "twist." Here's the story:

A new sedan is tearing down a Midwestern highway in the moonlight. The highway is level and straight for miles, and, best of all, apparently deserted. Then the night is shattered by a crash—then silence. The sedan has hit a truck going in the same direction, sliced its own top off, turned over and crushed the decapitated bodies in the tonneau. There are five dead, three boys and two girls 17 to 19 years old. The 19-year-old driver, thrown clear of the wreckage, is still alive on the roadside. Two days later there's a mass funeral in the high-school auditorium.

That's the story. Here's the "twist":

Exactly 60 minutes before the crash—the hands of the dashboard clock were jammed at 10:01—the six teen-agers were in the same auditorium, three of them, including the driver, on the stage in gray cap and gown. It was graduation night. The biggest night in a teen-ager's life, and the speaker, a college president, was spreading his blessing upon them:

"This," he was saying, "is really the beginning of your lives. May you live them well and joyously—but not too joyously. Don't celebrate your graduation by getting out on the road and driving 85 miles an hour."

The speedometer of the wrecked car was found the following day, jammed at 92 m.p.h.

That's the "twist."

Remonstrances, pleas, warnings, threats—nothing stops the killing. Speeches, pamphlets, posters—nothing stops the killing. Rapidly rising insurance rates—it now costs as much as 65-percent additional to insure a young driver—nothing stops the killing.

The killing goes up, up, up, and the youngsters kill a die and maim twice as fast as their elders. In 20 years, over-all highway death rate has risen 13 percent—and 86 p cent for drivers under 25. In 1949, 7,000 18-to-24-year-olds w killed, 300,000 injured. "Teenicide" has become a natio term, a national horror, and also, it would seem, a gr national pastime.

Nothing stops the killing. Fines don't stop it. (The year-old who sped his five companions to their death graduation night had been fined for speeding when he 16.) Driver licensing doesn't stop it. Cancellation of driv licenses doesn't stop it. Compulsory trips through the mor don't stop it. Above all, statistics—statistics showing pleasure driving is a bigger killer than war—don't sto Once every two minutes a young driver kills or maims so body somewhere in America.

Will anything stop it? Yes, there is something that and that, mothers and fathers, is the one short word, "N

Insurance companies do not expect to stop it by ra their rates for young drivers higher and higher. The A ican Automobile Association, the National Safety Cou the motor-vehicle authorities of the various states do no pect to stop it by their educational campaigns. Azaleas . . .

unbelievably bright and varied

Among the best of the azaleas winter-hardy through southern New York and westward is the Torch Azalea, Rhododendron abtuscum var. Kaempferi. Upright in growth, it is partially evergreen, except in exposed positions. The flowers are a brilliant salmon-rose, so superb as to be breath-taking where it rises above yellow and white Darwin tulips in May.

The Flame Azalea, R. calendulaceum, native to the Appalachian Mountains, is much like the Torch Azalea.

Other shrubs prodigal with spring bloom are:

Forsythias. Spring Glory has largest flowers of its family and the color of spring sunshine. Easy, will bloom in light shade.

Flowering Quince. Ask for new hybrids which have larger flowers, some close to pink.

Mockoranges. Minnesota Snowflake, Atlas, and Belle Etoile are superior varieties.

Pink Double-flowering Plum. In full sun and good soil, it loads itself with small pink pompons.

NO. 4 OF A SERIES

The floor is one of the first areas in any room that you—and your guests—notice. And because floor coverings are a long-term investment, you'll want your choice to be the right one.

You have a wide field from which to choose. For softness underfoot, and to cut down noise, you may want a rug or carpet of wool, rayon, nylon, cotton, silk, fiber, or some combination. Under it, for longer wear, you'll use some type of rug padding. Or for practical durability and easy maintenance, you can pick one of the hard-surface floorings: wood, linoleum, plastic sheeting, or asphalt, cork, plastic, or rubber tile. Many homes combine both.

Your own family's needs will play a big part in the type of floor covering you get. Before you go shopping, decide whether wear and care, or style and color come first. Party-winning recipes

By Myrna Johnston

The house is all slicked up for spring. Time to have a party. So here we come with the top winners of our party-recipe contest. Take your pick and ring up the guests!

The pie with the posies is a Toasted Coconut Mousse Pie. It deserves a bouquet for its rich, fluffy filling, luscious flavor. The lovely, delicate, striped dessert creation with golden sauce is Almond Ribbon Loaf; there are chopped almonds in the middle stripe.

You just shut your eyes and use a lot of egg whites for the Strawberry Ice Cream Pie. After all, it's a party. And how high and beautiful that pie is when it comes out of the oven. Everyone wants to know how you do it.

On top of being so good, Cherry-Nut Crème (the dessert squares) takes simple ingredients and is easy to do. You can make it way ahead of the party.

Up by the coffeepot: a good cook used her imagination on a package of roll mix. And there you are: delicious, gooey Coconut Rolls. The dish next to the rolls is Deep-sea Bake, a casserole dish. Besides shrimp and deviled eggs to make it good, it has mushrooms and cheese sauce.

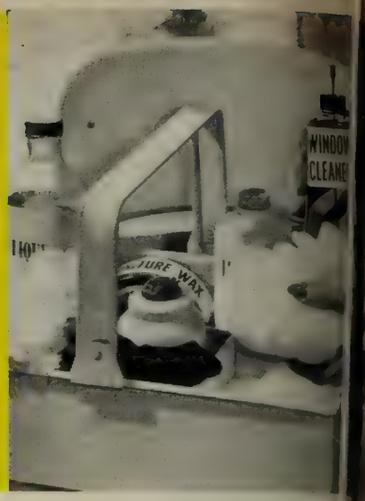
Do you know the slick way to clean?

By Doris Adams

No sense in letting spring cleaning get you down. Sure, there's a lot to be done. But after all, you have yourself to consider. So how about cleaning the easy way?

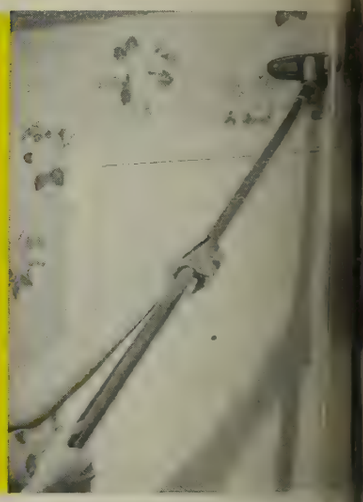
How to do it? This doesn't mean to skip over corners. It means, rather, to tackle your work in a steady, unruffled way; to plan your jobs ahead.



It means to use the right cleaning materials for the job—the ones that get the work done efficiently with the least effort for you. Such as self-polishing waxes; dry cleaners for floor and linoleum that clean, wax, and polish; liquid and powdered painted-wall cleaners; dusters that have a wide sweep. Or wax removers that do away with scraping or scrubbing, antigrease products that speed range cleaning. There's a new furniture wax on the market that cleans and polishes with no rubbing.

The easy way, too, means to save yourself wherever you can. For instance, long-handled mops and waxers and extension attachments of your vacuum cleaner do away with stooping and reaching.

Start off on the right track by collecting all your supplies. Store them in a definite spot. Then you won't have to scurry around hunting for tools before you begin to clean. Put dustcloths, cleaners, wax, the supplies you use every week in a basket you can carry from room to room. Or wheel them about on a cart.



Try to spread special cleanup jobs through the year. When you do a little at a time, you won't have to wear yourself out with spring and fall cleaning.

Washing. Start at bottom when you wash walls and woodwork. Then you won't get those hard-to-remove streaks from water running down a soiled surface. If you're not sure how the wall will clean, experiment in an inconspicuous spot

Dusting. A pair of white cotton mitts doubles your dusting speed. Work with even strokes. Gather dust into mitts instead of scattering. Wash the mitts often. Lintless cloths, treated cloths, and dusting paper also do a good job

Polishing. Furniture polish or wax brings out the natural beauty of furniture. Just pour a little polish on a cloth and rub into surface. Then polish it lightly with a dry cloth. Keep a good supply of soft, new or clean dustcloths on hand

Toasted Coconut Mousse Pie

This is positively ambrosial. You have to make it and taste it to see why—

- 1 cup heavy cream
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- ½ teaspoon vanilla
- 1 stiff-beaten egg white
- ½ cup shredded coconut, toasted

Whip cream; add sugar and vanilla. Fold in egg white and coconut. Pour into refrigerator tray and chill until mixture is very thick but not frozen. Pour into Graham-cracker Crust: Combine 2 cups graham-cracker crumbs and ½ cup melted butter or fortified margarine. Press firmly in greased 9-inch piepan. Chill thoroughly. Fill with coconut mixture and top with sweetened, sliced peaches or strawberries.—Mrs. Bruce Beichl, Wisconsin Rapids, Wisconsin.

Almond Ribbon Loaf

A cool, delicate dessert—airy and almond-flavored—

- 2 tablespoons (2 envelopes) unflavored gelatine
- ½ cup cold water
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 9 egg whites
- 1 cup sugar
- ½ teaspoon almond flavoring
- 1 cup ground blanched almonds
- Few drops green food coloring

Soften gelatine in cold water; dissolve over hot water and cool. Add salt to egg whites and beat until they form soft peaks. Add sugar 1 tablespoon at a time, beating well after each addition, until mixture is stiff and glossy. Add almond flavoring; then fold in gelatine. Remove one-third of mixture and add ground blanched almonds to it. To remaining two-thirds of mixture, add green food coloring. Line a 10x5-inch loaf pan with waxed paper: spread half of green mixture in bottom, then almond mixture; top with remaining green mixture. Chill until firm. Unmold and slice to serve. Serve with Golden Custard: Combine 9 egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, and ¼ teaspoon salt. Combine 1 cup milk and 1 cup heavy cream; scald; gradually stir into egg mixture. Return to double boiler and cook over hot, not boiling, water until custard coats a spoon, stirring constantly. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Chill.—Miss Catherine Schabel, Whitehaven, Tennessee.

"It's fun to fix treats for a par and so simple!" SAID ELSIE, THE BORDEN C

"SIMPLE-MINDED, it strikes me!" bellowed Elmer, the bull. "Who wants to eat a sailboat?"

"The children will love my sailboat salad," predicted Elsie. "And mothers will approve because it's made with Borden's Cottage Cheese!"

"What makes you think that all mothers are as keen about Borden's as you are?" prodded Elmer.

"They tell me so!" declared Elsie. "They like that creamy, fresh-tasting Cottage Cheese because it gives the youngsters so much of the calcium and protein that they need."

"But why in thunder," thundered Elmer, "do you want to make it look like what it isn't?"

"That's the party part that tickles the tots," smiled Elsie. "You know what a hit my Circus Sundae made on Beauregard's birthday!"

"Sure," Elmer granted, "every kid loves ice cream!"

"Especially Borden's Ice Cream!" Elsie pointed out. "It's so creamy and rich and it's not expensive. You just can't beat Borden's Vanilla when you want a super dessert in a hurry!"

"You take vanilla—I'll take chocolate," grunted Elmer.

"Speaking of chocolate," Elsie went on, "wait'll you taste my Magic Truffles — the smoothest chocolate candy you ever ate!"

"How come you've got time to make candy, too?" demanded Elmer.

"Oh, I made this candy with Borden's Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk," explained Elsie. "From start to finish, it takes only 12 minutes to make. Eagle Brand is so smooth, there's no beating."

"Sa-ay!" grinned Elmer grudgingly, reaching for another piece. "This is good candy!"

"Just as you'd expect, dear," beamed Elsie. "If it's Borden's, it's GOT to be good!"

ELSIE'S SAILBOAT SALAD

Add red cinnamon candies to syrup drained from canned pear halves. Heat till dissolved. Return pears to syrup. When tinted red, lift out and chill.

Arrange lettuce on individual serving plates. Spoon Borden's Cottage Cheese on each. Top with a cinnamon pear half. Decorate with a sail of colored paper on a toothpick mast.

Borden's Cottage Cheese is a delicious and thrifty source of the protein and calcium your youngsters need. Creamy and tender in texture, it has the wholesome flavor of the country-fresh milk that it's made from!

A moneymaking re

Upside-down Cakes and Pork Recipes are the moneymaking recipes in this month's contest. If your recipe takes first place, we'll send you $10. The 20 other winners will receive $3. You'll see the eight top recipes in November Cooks' Round Table.

Upside-down Cakes are colorful, pretty to serve. And they can save you kitchen time—because they come out of the oven frosted.

Your beauty may be topped with glistening pineapple rings centered with bright red maraschino cherries. Or juicy pear halves—either canned or fresh—and crisp California walnuts. Or tart red cherries, golden peach halves or slices, dried apricots or prunes.

Underneath may be a tender butter cake, spicy gingerbread, or an airy sponge cake. Or you may save time by using a cake mix.

If you have an attractive way of arranging the fruit topping, why don't you draw us a sketch? We want to bake your cake just the way you do.

Pork. Come November, you'll be seeing an array of pork cuts at the meat counter. So why don't you share your favorite pork recipes?

We're interested in how you cook sausage, bacon, and ham as well as the fresh-pork favorites—chops, roasts, ribs, tenderloin. And we'll be keeping an eye out for delicious ways to use leftovers, too.

Just think of all the wonderful pork dishes. Take pork chops, for example. Perhaps you stuff them with corn, bake them topped with pineapple slices, or barbecue them.

Or ham. You may glaze baked ham with honey and orange juice, frost a thick ham slice with cranberry sauce, bake individual servings of ham with pineapple slices.

What do you do with leftovers? Maybe you make a pork and apple pie with a sweet-potato crust, fix a chow mein dinner, or bake ground pork in pastry fold-overs.

And remember, the winners of these 21 prizes will receive the Better Homes & Gardens Certificate of Endorsement and six copies of the endorsed recipe.

1. Write your recipe clearly on one side of the paper. Send but one recipe at a time and mark it, "November Upside-down Cakes" or "November Pork Recipes."

eat New Key to Flakiness

Pillsbury Pie Crust Mix now CHILL-BLENDED for real flakiness every time!

Women with the pie maker's knack have long known what chilling does for pie crust—right at the time the ingredients are blended together. It gives the crust rare tenderness, makes it flake apart at the touch of a fork.

Now this chilling is done for you by Pillsbury in its exclusive Chill-Blended mix.

As you might guess, this mix is blended together at low temperatures so that the particles of shortening stay separate and are distributed evenly throughout the flour. When the heat of the oven hits these particles, they puff, bubble and turn into a wonderful crust of delicate flakiness and tenderness.

This happens pie after pie after pie with this new Chill-Blended mix. Don't you want this assurance of flakiness in your pie making? Every time.

Flour and shortening blended at low temperatures by exclusive new Pillsbury manufacturing process.

Keeps particles separate. (And they stay that way on your pantry shelf.)

Mirror of America at Mealtime

Of all automatic toasters, this is by far the favorite of families all over the country. In its flawless finish, the "Toastmaster" Toaster mirrors the mealtime joy of youth, the hopes of middle age, the contentment of the old. In short, it's part of the family. And this sparkling beauty is a symbol of the quality that lies beneath it—as a jewel's depth of goodness is measured by its gleam. Here, bread becomes superb toast . . . not now and then—but always. Here, life span is counted upon the fingers of both hands —in many cases, twice! To own, or to give as a gift, the "Toastmaster"* Toaster is a cherished possession for which no substitute is ever completely satisfying.

Mix 1 envelope gelatine and ¼ cup cold water in bowl. Combine ¼ cup sugar and 2 egg yolks in saucepan. Add 1½ cups milk gradually, stirring constantly.

Cook and stir over medium heat until mixture coats spoon. (Do not boil.) Remove from heat. Pour over gelatine and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat 2 egg whites with ¼ teaspoon salt until foamy, add ¼ cup sugar gradually. Continue beating until stiff. Fold into gelatine mixture.

Fold in ½ cup cream, whipped, and ¾ of a package of Baker's Coconut, toasted (1 heaping cup). Turn into baked 9-inch pie shell. Sprinkle top with remaining toasted coconut and chill until firm. Garnish with blossoms made by clipping marshmallows to resemble petals. Place small piece of cherry in center of each blossom.

To toast coconut, spread thinly in shallow baking pan. Place in moderate oven (350°F.) and toast 5 to 7 minutes. Stir occasionally.

Pink Blossom Pie. Make chocolate pie on Jell-O Chocolate Pudding package, adding 1 cup Baker's Coconut, cut, with the milk. After cooking, add ¼ teaspoon peppermint extract, then cool. Turn into pie shell, chill, spread with ⅓ cup cream, whipped. Sprinkle with ½ cup Baker's Coconut, tinted pink.

1 beaten egg
1 cake fresh or 1 package granular yeast
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 cup milk, scalded
3½ cups enriched flour
• • •
¼ cup sugar
1½ teaspoons cinnamon

Combine cooled shortening, ¼ cup sugar, salt, and egg; add yeast softened in lukewarm water. Cool milk to lukewarm. Add alternately with flour. Knead lightly. Let rise in greased bowl until doubled in bulk. Punch down. Turn out on pastry cloth; let rest 10 minutes. Roll in rectangle, 7½x19 inches. Brush with milk. Sprinkle with remaining ¼ cup sugar and cinnamon. Roll as for jelly roll; place in greased 10x5-inch loaf pan. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Just before baking, brush loaf gently with cooled melted butter; sprinkle with an additional 1½ tablespoons sugar mixed with ½ teaspoon cinnamon. Bake in moderate oven (350°) about 45 minutes. Note: One package roll mix will make 1 Sugar-Cinnamon Loaf.

Spring Stew

A subtle blending of flavors and gentle cooking makes your stew a success—

1½ pounds lamb, veal, or beef, cut in 1½-inch cubes
Flour
2 tablespoons bacon fat
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper
1 bay leaf
Celery seed
Pinch of marjoram or thyme
2 to 4 tablespoons catsup
Potatoes*
Carrots*
Small onions*

*The number of each depends on the size of the vegetables. Allow at least 1 potato per person and 2 carrots and onions per person.) Coat meat with flour. Brown in hot fat. Add onion; cook until golden brown. Add seasonings. Cover with water and cover tightly. Cook gently over low heat until meat is tender, 1½ to 2 hours. Peel potatoes, carrots, and onions. Leave whole if not too large, or cut in good-sized pieces. Add vegetables to stew 35 to 45 minutes before meat is tender. Add more water if necessary. Season to taste. Cook until vegetables are tender. Remove meat and vegetables. Thicken stock for gravy. Serves 4 to 6.

Old-fashioned Rolled Cookies

The kind of sugar cooky you remember in your mother's cooky jar—

½ cup shortening (part butter for flavor)
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 well-beaten egg
1¾ cups enriched flour
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder

Thoroughly cream shortening, sugar, and vanilla. Add egg and beat well. Add sifted dry ingredients; mix thoroughly. Roll very thin (1/16 inch) on lightly floured surface. Cut with 3-inch cutter. Sprinkle with sugar. Bake on greased cooky sheet in moderately hot oven (375°) until delicately browned, 6 to 8 minutes. Makes about 3½ dozen cookies.

Rolled Rump

Thorough browning is better, tastes better, a brown gravy—

For Tapered Loaf of Rye Bread: Shape each half into long roll, about 15 inches, tapering ends. Place on greased cooky sheet. With sharp, thin knife, cut diagonal gashes ½ inch deep across top . . . about 1½ inches apart. Let rise 30 to 40 minutes. Bake in moderate oven (375°) about 25 minutes. Brush with butter when baked.

Lemon Chiffon Pie

The flavor is refreshing after a big dinner—

3 egg yolks
⅓ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
⅓ cup lemon juice
1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
3 stiff-beaten egg whites
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
6 tablespoons sugar
1 9-inch baked pastry shell

Beat egg yolks slightly with spoon; stir in sugar, salt, lemon peel and juice. Cook in double boiler until thick. Add gelatine softened in cold water; beat with rotary beater until fluffy. Cool until partially set. Beat with rotary beater until smooth. Carefully fold into egg whites beaten until stiff with cream of tartar and remaining 6 tablespoons sugar. Pile into cooled baked shell. Chill at least 2 hours.

Frosted Cinnamon Twists

Extra tender and delicious. Good enough to serve as dessert—

¾ cup milk
⅓ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening (part butter adds flavor)
2 cakes fresh yeast
1 well-beaten egg
3¼ cups to 3⅓ cups enriched flour

Scald milk; pour over sugar, salt, and shortening in mixing bowl. Stir, and let stand until lukewarm. Crumble yeast into mixture; stir until yeast is dissolved. Stir in egg. Add flour; mix thoroughly with hand. Turn dough onto floured board. Knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl; cover with damp cloth, and let rise in warm place (82°) until double in bulk, about 1½ hours. Punch down. Let rise again until almost double, about 40 minutes. Punch down. Roll dough on floured surface into oblong, 6x24 inches. Spread surface with 2 tablespoons soft butter. Sprinkle lower half of dough with mixture of 3 tablespoons sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon.

If you're looking for an extra-special treat, try one of these two-fruit pies. The fillings are delicious new combinations—pineapple-apricot, grape and red raspberry, peach-orange. Take your pick of the three or give each a trial. Each calls for fruits you can buy at your grocer's now—fresh, frozen, or canned.

If you want to short-cut mixing time, buy a package of pastry mix. Or you can use your favorite recipe for plain pastry. Go easy when you add the water and handle the dough lightly, so you'll have a flaky, tender crust.

Check the pictures for new ways to trim the tops of your fruit pies. They have ideas for two different window tops to show off the bright fruit, and a new crimp for the rim of the pie.

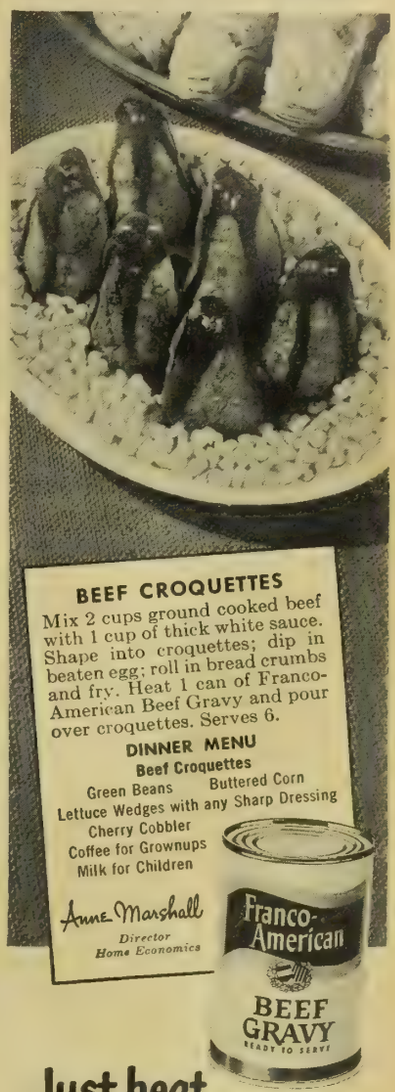
First of all, make up your mind that your Johnny and Mary are bound to be responsible for a certain amount of damage. It is the natural heritage of childhood. You find it in their love of punching bags, wrestling, and playing cowboys and Indians.



The boys' experience with the lavatory, for example, is no sign they are abnormally mean. It is more likely an indication of the adventurous spirit that all kids of their ages feel. They're born to be inquisitive about things that you and I take for granted. So, they want to tear them apart just to see how they work or to find out what's inside.

One result of their frisky natures, of course, is that kids are usually more mature in body than in mind. As a result, you need to remember that in many of their youthful contacts with the physical world, they will frequently show faulty judgment. So, you must channel their energies accordingly.

Without guidance, they frequently manage to do the wrong thing. For example, the spirit with which your little Johnny approaches one of the household appliances will be one of innocence and confidence. toaster is no longer of any use to you.

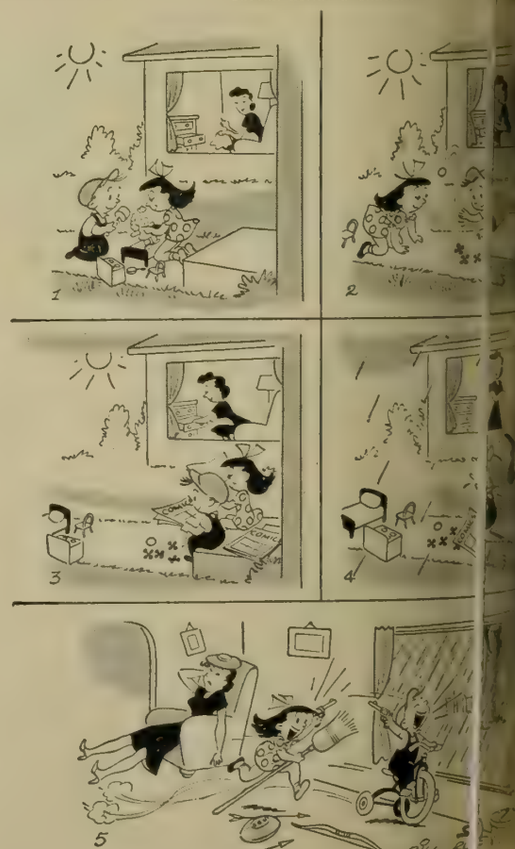
Of course, part of a child's difficulty in keeping things in one piece may simply result from his having no idea of their value when they are whole. For instance, when 10-year-old Billy, who likes to whittle, returned a borrowed paring knife with a broken blade, he came up with "Hey, you got another knife?"

His question shows two things right off about his attitude toward property. First, he saw in the knife only a means of whittling. He attached no real worth to it, and so he didn't feel that he had done any damage when he snapped it in two. Second, since he is a little vague on the value of his own family's possessions, he is likely someday to become deliberately careless about other people's property.

To help your children learn something about value, you need to let them know early in life that possession of anything is made possible through what you, as parents, do for them. Explain that when they lose or destroy something, you must repeat the effort that made the article possible for them in the first place. You'll want to make clear to them the basic facts about family income and routine household expenses. This will help them to see just where the comforts of a home with light, heat, water, chairs, and tables come from. Then, later, they will understand and respect the effort that makes possible such public property as swimming pools, parks, schools, and playgrounds.



Also, you can lessen the likelihood of damage to things around your home, if you children a little t they work, what th where they may be glass over or knocking her cup to the floor. As a preventive measure, they tried denying her dessert when she spilled her food. The results were the same. Finally, a friend suggested seeing a doctor. In a routine examination of her eyes, he discovered that she was far-sighted. After an oculist had fitted her with glasses, she quickly learned to judge correctly the distance between her hands and the objects in her everyday life.

If you should find that your child is handicapped in some way, be ready to give him lots of help and advice in such ordinary things as the way he handles his food and clothing. You should not expect a nervous boy or girl, or one who has poor vision or hearing deficiencies, for example, to keep things under prefect control. Also, keep in mind that children who mature rapidly are often somewhat awkward because of their lack of muscular coordination. They often seem to be all hands and feet, and their fingers turn into thumbs. Keep them away from fragile bric-a-brac and things with sharp edges and complicated mechanisms. And be sure to check with your doctor to find out what's best for them in the matter of rest, diet, and exercise.

Sometimes, the tendency to be destructive may come suddenly in a child's life, even after he has apparently adjusted to all the twists and turns of the physical world. Emotional pressures can build up inside him that will make him discard, almost without warning, all the principles he has learned about the care of property. The Purbecks' experience with their 12-year-old Bobby is a good example.

After they had moved into a different section of town, they noticed that his sports equipment immediately started showing signs of more than ordinary wear and tear. Then, neighbors began to complain about trampled hedges and broken windows. Was it the neighborhood, the Purbecks asked themselves, or Bobby?

Bobby himself gave the answer in a heart-to-heart talk one evening with his dad. "You got to be like the rest of the fellows when you play with the gang," he explained. "They don't want sissies around who are afraid to take a dare or do anything."

Now Bobby had been obviously trying to achieve status. He wanted to avoid being labeled a new boy who didn't fit. The result was a temporary fling at being the hero who took unusual risks with property and affected a childish indifference to the consequences.

To remedy the situation, the Purbecks got the gang together for

TOPS IN TOP BURNERS
Simmer-Center burners are two flames in one—one for fast boiling and frying, one for keep-boiling and keep-warm heats.

BALANCED HEAT OVEN
Bake anything and everything anywhere in the balanced heat oven. No turning or shifting of pans, no peeking.

3.

SMOKELESS BROILER
The live flame assures finer flavor for all meats. Keeps your kitchen clean, smoke-free. Remove the broiler—wash it like a pan.

Gas has got it!

THOUSANDS of women buy Hardwick Ranges because they have learned from comparison that Hardwick is their soundest range investment. Hardwick offers three things that count most in cooking—efficient top burners, balanced heat oven, smokeless broiler. A Hardwick is modern and beautiful, but because it's not loaded with gadgets and extras it costs you less. See Hardwick and make your own comparison.

a hot-dog roast in their back yard. In that way they gave Bobby a chance to become acceptable to his group in a perfectly normal way.

You may need to be on the lookout for the destructive attitude toward property that will appear in childish displays of temper, selfishness, exhibitionism, revenge, jealousy, superiority, and so on. These are negative attitudes, which you should do your best to eliminate.

Try substituting a few creative activities. Organize a hot-dog roast in your back yard, as the Purbecks did. And pal around with your kids in this way, to provide them with the companionship and love they instinctively need. You'll have a chance then to get in a few words about the difference between constructive and destructive attitudes toward property.

Finally, a note or two of caution. Don't overemphasize the value of things to the point where your Johnny and Mary could develop a property-centered personality. They are likely to become unpleasantly possessive, even miserly in a childish sort of way. So you need to prepare them in little ways to realize that they can't and shouldn't want to hold on to their dolls and marbles forever.

When they do break something, as they surely will, keep cool. Flying off the handle and accusing them of being careless will only add to their confusion. Make an all-out effort to be patient and begin quietly to explain to them the situation, as you see it. Then, when you've put the pieces away, you'll be able to offer them some discreet advice about the right and wrong way to handle things. In that way you can be sure of helping them to develop a healthy regard for the public and private property they must use in life.

Delicious ways to serve French and fluffy omelets:

- Herbs, chopped chives, water cress, parsley, or sweet green pepper may be stirred into the ingredients when you mix the omelet or sprinkled over it before folding.
- Grated or chopped cheese may be stirred into the ingredients at mixing time or sprinkled over the omelet before it's folded. Or make a cheese sauce.
- Chopped or shredded fish, meat, poultry, and vegetables may be added. If the amount's small, sprinkle it over the omelet before folding. Be sure it's well seasoned.

If you're adding more than 2 or 3 tablespoons, better heat the food first in butter or a small amount of cream or thin cream sauce. Crisp bacon, sausages, and chicken livers are often served on the side. Cooked, diced chicken may be stirred into ingredients before cooking.

• The graceful design of this lovely percolator duplicates that of the most costly coffee urn. Traditional beauty, indeed . . . a beauty exceeded only by the efficient ease of MIRRO-MATIC's completely automatic operation. The instant you plug it in, a hot 600-watt element starts the perking process. Perking time varies automatically with the amount of water used, assuring perfect, full-bodied coffee, whether you make as few as 4 cups, or the full capacity of 8 cups. When done, the high-power element cuts off automatically and a second, 30-watt element supplies constantly controlled heat, safely below the boiling point, to keep the coffee drinking-hot . . . for hours, if need be.

THROUGH four generations Webster's Dictionary has earned and maintained first place among reference books. When you are confronted with any question of fact, whenever you need to know, you think of Webster as the utmost in authority, the judge of judges, the court of last appeal. But that confidence is warranted only if you use the MERRIAM-Webster.

Why the MERRIAM-Webster Is the Only Recognized Authority

At the death of Noah Webster in 1843, George and Charles Merriam purchased from his heirs the rights to publish Webster's unabridged dictionary, as recently revised and enlarged by Noah Webster himself. In 1847 they published a complete revision—the first MERRIAM-Webster.

For more than one hundred years G. and C. Merriam Company has maintained the integrity of the Merriam-Webster name by a series of complete and authoritative revisions, to keep the dictionary abreast of the times. Each new edition has marked an epoch in American education.

Look for the Merriam-Webster trademark. The Second Edition of Webster's New International (unabridged) with recently added new words is three decades newer than any similar dictionary and provides information in all branches of knowledge for today's needs. It contains 600,000 entries—122,000 more entries than any similar dictionary. It contains 3390 pages and illustrations for 12,000 terms. It is the authority in courts, colleges, and newspaper offices.

The unabridged Merriam-Webster is not sold at cut prices nor at fictitious "bargain" prices. It is not used as a premium in any "free" offers. Don't be duped! Be sure you get the Merriam-Webster—the "Supreme Authority." Ask your bookdealer for:

A head was on the roadside, a body in the car.

Billy Nelson had suggested they all go out to Patty Sue Stassen's house for coffee.

A piece of jawbone was found in the ash tray on the back of the front seat.

Ted Franklin had just finished 2½ years in the Navy.

A pair of roller skates, festooned with flesh, was found in the back seat.

A blood-soaked schoolbook, Economics in Everyday Life, lay on the bed of the truck.

David Welch had come from the next town to see his cousin Bernie Glassford graduate.

Bernie Glassford was the driver. He had played the lead in the junior class play the year before. The name of the play was Teen Troubles.

What about it, Father? What about it, Mother? Do you want to deplore the killing—and then send your Betty, your Billy, your David, out to be killed tonight? Or do you want to stop it—in your own home—tonight?

Perhaps you have a bridge game tonight. Perhaps your Norma Jane or your Bernie has a date. Perhaps you'll do something about it tomorrow. But tonight your children will die.

All the stores in the Midwestern town we mentioned closed from 3 to 4 for the mass funeral. Do you think the parents of those six youngsters loved them less than you love yours?

What about it, parents? Will you face the facts?

It isn't easy. It means your sitting down alone together tonight—Father here, Mother there—and asking yourselves:

"Just what kind of youngster do we have?"

It's the hardest question in the world for loving parents to ask themselves. But it's the question they have to ask if they love their children well enough to save their lives.

Just what kind of youngster do you have?

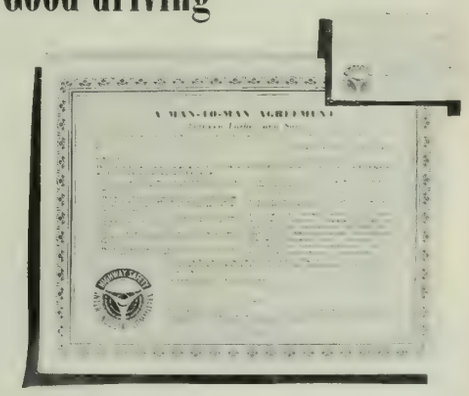
Some children—and youngsters are sometimes children when they're past 21—should never drive a car under any conditions. Most children 16 or older should only drive a car under certain conditions. And some children—some very few—should be allowed to drive under any conditions.

What kind of youngster do you have?

Let's look at some human traits that will help you face up to the question.

Recklessness. Is your boy (or girl) "impetuous," "a little wild?" Is he the kind that "takes a dare?" A bit of a "show-off"—in or out of a car? A bit of a "grandstander" in sports? A bit of a braggart about clothes, grades, money, friends?



Carelessness. Is your boy (or girl) the absent-minded type that doesn't keep his room tidy, forgets appointments, comes home late from errands (or brings the wrong article), gets names, dates, places mixed up, doesn't pay much attention to the condition of his or other people's belongings, likes to eat, sleep, study erratically?

Secretiveness Does he (or she) keep things from you, stretch the truth, dodge responsibility for his or her acts, "clam up" when you want to know where he or she has been, and with whom?

Affability. Does he (or she) "take up" easily with people? Make new friends fast? Go to great lengths to be popular? Tend to "fall for" superficial qualities—glamour, money, athletic prowess—in his contemporaries? If so, what do you think, specifically, and one by one, of the kind of company your child keeps? Judge each of your child's companions by the same criteria you use to judge your child, and

*The events are real. The names are disguised.

Send for a Good-driving Agreement

More than 85,000 requests were received for the "Man-to-Man" or "Father-and-Daughter" good-driving agreements when Better Homes & Gardens first offered them free last November. An additional supply has been obtained, and you can get copies by writing Better Homes & Gardens, Department 6604, Des Moines 3, Iowa.

judge your child—at least in part—accordingly.

Inconsideration. Does he (or she) interrupt conversation, push ahead of others in a group, neglect to help elderly people, invalids, or small children, trip over a misplaced chair and leave it for someone else to trip over, race out to play without finding out whether Mother or Father wants something done around the house?

Aggressiveness. The unusually aggressive child is usually aggressive because of a deep sense of inferiority. Aggressiveness, inconsideration, and recklessness are frequently found together. Does your child tend to pick quarrels over possessions of portions of food, or a seat at a show or in a car or a game? Does he (or she) insist upon his or her "rights," show a "stubborn streak," make demands without regard for the good of others or of the group?

Brilliance. Good driving—safe driving—has nothing to do with high intelligence. Brilliance is irrelevant. It isn't a mind behind the wheel, but a body under ordinarily intelligent, emotional control.

Awkwardness. Is your child (he or she) below the average in ordinary co-ordination, in the handling of dishes, oars, sports equipment, tools, and machinery of any kind?

Physical deficiency. Physical deficiency is not necessarily a handicap to driving, and is, contrarily, often conducive to cautiousness. But ignorance of the condition is dangerous (such as nearsightedness, "night blindness," and so on), and the effort to ignore or conceal it (by not wearing glasses or other compensatory apparatus) is extremely dangerous. Is your child physically fit to drive?

"Girl-craziness" or "boy-craziness." Is your boy or girl inordinately moonstruck? Nearly every youngster is, at some period, and what, pray tell, would life be like if they weren't? But one-armed driving is one of Death's best friends. The soulful gaze is another—when one of the gazers is behind the wheel. Even animated conversation—anything that distracts a driver from the deadly danger of driving—is an invitation to die.

These are some—but only some—of the danger signals. They are not necessarily vices, or serious faults. Some of them are lovable, some forgivable. But each of them can spell highway death for the child you'd give your life for.

Are you willing—tonight—to perform the hardest of all parental duties? Are you willing to face the facts about your youngster?

Make your decision tonight—on the spot. And don't call your Norma Jane or your Bill in until you've made it. There is nothing to argue; there is something to judge. And you, if you will take off the rose-colored glasses that loving parents wear, are the best judges. Norma Jane and Bill are the worst.

Make it, "Yes," "Under certain co most instances, the d "Under certain cor decide the conditio them firmly, and ne

We, ..., really cannot ..., now that we ... is wonderfully ...st will it go?"—and wonderfully cocksure. Youth can do anything. Youth is unafraid, adventurous, optimistic. Youth's perception is quick, its reaction quick—and its cocksureness, therefore, immense. Youth takes a chance, shoots the works, damns the torpedoes.

Sure, youth learns by experience. But the experience of an accident is too costly a teacher. Youth has to learn a lot of things "the hard way." But being killed is not one of them. A youngster might be sobered by having a fatal accident—but he would no longer be alive to be sobered. Youth doesn't concern itself—why should it?—with illness and death. Youth doesn't worry about meeting the bills involved in a not-yet-occurred accident. Youth isn't thinking of savings or security. Why should it? When we elders, preoccupied with the fact that it can happen to us, remember that youth's motto is, "It can't happen to me," we begin to understand. And, understanding, we have to be all the more severe, all the more "heartless," in making the decision that means life or death for our children.

Face the facts.

Make the decision.

Make it severely—err, if err you must, on the side of severity.

And stick to it.

Then you can proceed to do all the other things that intelligent parents can do to surround a young driver with safeguards.

When your boy or girl does use the car—especially at night, when most accidents occur—see to it that he or she leaves with plenty of time to spare to reach the destination. One common cause of teen-age accidents is being late, for a date, a show, or a game. See to it that you know who your youngster's companions are and where they are going. (If you don't enjoy their confidence, don't let them have the car, but don't use the car as a bribe to win their confidence; you won't win it that way.) If they go someplace other than the one they intended to, have them phone you to let you know. Above all, don't put pressure on them to get home at a given minute, and even above that, don't warn them that if they get in late, they will be punished or for-bidden future use of the car. If you tell them to drive 30 miles an hour and get in at 11 o'clock, you may discover at a coroner's inquest, that they drove closer to 90 in order to make the 11 o'clock curfew. Appeal to their sense of responsibility, if you can; persuade them to phone you if they are going to be late. If nothing avails, the time has come for that flat, "No."

One element of maturity is pride in safety rather than speed. Instill that pride—the pride of "growing up"—in your youngster. The engineer of the Super Chief is more proud of his safety record than his speed. The captain of the Queen Mary wouldn't think of endangering his ship to make a fast crossing. An airline pilot thinks of nothing but safety. "Championship driving isn't reckless driving," says Wilbur Shaw, president of the Indianapolis Speedway. "Reckless drivers are ruled off the track and forbidden to compete. A racing driver who sacrifices safety to speed is a menace to the other drivers. They ostracize him."

Before your youngster drives, he should know how to drive—not how to make an automobile "go." A baby can make one "go," and a fool can make one start and stop—and many do. Learning how to drive means, primarily, learning the rules and good manners of driving, and only secondarily the mechanics. Between you and your youngster on the front seat, and on the dining-room table in the evening, should be a driver's manual. You can get a variety of them from libraries, bookstores, automobile clubs, automobile manufacturers and dealers, state motor vehicle departments, local police departments, or from casualty companies. Not until your youngster has mastered the rules and manners of driving should he or she have the car.

Driving an automobile requires, first and last, moral knowledge, the knowledge of the use of power. The common term for this kind of knowledge—which is in the heart as much as it is in the head—is "sense of responsibility." Driving an automobile me and trust you. Why is it, then, that so many "little white lies" are told?

Perhaps you are fooling yourself into believing that you are protecting your child from fear or worry or envy when you cover up a little. Or you may feel strongly that there are certain things he must learn or do for his own safety and happiness, and that any means are justified to obtain those ends.

But you're wrong. Misleading your child never protects him; it protects you. You deceive your child when you are embarrassed about telling the truth, when you fear you can't handle the outburst which may follow, or when you don't know how else to make him do as you say.

Yet, parents who have trained themselves always to tell the truth find their children to be more self-controlled and less demanding than children who are "protected" by deception.

The child who knows his parents are always honest with him is spared tension and uncertainty. Usually he will summon all his resources to meet a new experience, because his parents have told him something of what he faces. He carries over the feeling of trust he has in his parents to other children and adults and meets them with little aggression and suspicion. He can give up present desires with some ease because he knows that if he cannot have something now, he will get it without fail at the time it has been promised.

The child who has been told the truth learns self-control, independence, and fairness in dealing with others. These are things you want for your children, and they can be obtained if you learn to be honest.

You can do these three things to make honesty with your child easy and automatic:

1. Make your explanation simple. Your child needs the truth, but rarely the whole truth. Because you are an adult, you have accumulated hundreds of acts and feelings about many subjects. Your child does not want and cannot absorb everything you know about a given topic.

Take a minute to think over the exact question he has asked; then answer as briefly as you can that question and nothing else. When your girl notices in the bathroom that her daddy has an anatomical item which she does not possess, she asks, "What's that?" She is not asking for a complete reconstruction of sexual differences, conception, and the birth of babies. She wants to know the name of something she sees. Tell her.

If you must describe a coming experience which may be upsetting to your child, your short, straightforward explanation will reassure and prepare him.

When you are going out, tell your child in as few words as possible where you are going, what you will do, who will stay with him, and when you will be back. If he immediately looks crestfallen and says, "I want to go too help by saying you can't, and repeating will be back and who him. ents are blocked completely by questions about sex differences and the birth of babies.

You know yourself what questions or explanations you have ducked in the past and those you will be tempted to side-step in the future. List these, and write out exactly what you will say when the time comes. Practice your answers out loud, even with your child, if he is too young to be interested in what you are announcing. One husband and wife regularly toss questions of all kinds at each other and practice answering them as they intend to do when their child is old enough to ask.

If you are baffled about what are adequate answers to questions about sex or God or death, your public library can supply you with excellent books which give typical questions of children and simple answers to them. Your minister can also suggest literature in the religious field, and home magazines published by many church denominations contain helpful information on these subjects.

3. Keep your word. If you have turned down your child's request to invite a friend for lunch with the promise that the friend may come tomorrow, follow through, even if your child apparently has forgotten all about it. Remind him that you promised so that he will remember that you did and can learn that you always will keep your promises.

You may be surprised and delighted to see your constantly begging and clamoring child change into a youngster who accepts your decisions about his requests readily and peacefully. He can do this if he knows that when you have promised to grant his request at a definite future time, you will do so.

Keeping your word is important for promises which are pleasurable for the child, and just as important for those which are not.

If you have warned your youngster that he must come indoors if he plays in the street, see that he does so, no matter how loudly he declares that he won't do it again. You needn't keep him in long, but you must keep your promise to bring him in. It is unfair to subject him to your vacillation, back-tracking, and susceptibility to his protests. He has little alternative but to continue playing in the street if all he knows about your reaction is that you might make him come in, you might scold, you might spank, you might take away his dessert at lunch, or you might do nothing at all. To feel secure, he must be able to choose between a pleasurable act and its unpleasant consequences. He can make this choice only if he knows with certainty that you will do as you say if he acts in ways which are forbidden.

You can teach yourself to be honest with your youngster if you (1) make your explanation simple, (2) anticipate questions which confuse you, and (3) keep your word. Because you show him by your truthfulness that you respect his right to fair play, you give your child confidence in himself, in other people, and in the predictability of the working of his world.

Termite prevention now more important than ever!

■ With increased building costs, home values have more than doubled during the past ten years. And today it's several times as expensive to repair timbers and woodwork that have been damaged by termites.

This makes it more important than ever that owners have their homes checked for signs of termite attack. If termites are discovered, effective protection is far less expensive than repairs made necessary by continued termite activity.

ge took place the day the front gable disappeared and hipped roof instead. We were still far from finished

By E. F. Matthes

We bought a two-bedroom bungalow a few years ago with the intention of building on a wing some day. As we made minor improvements during the first three years, we planned how we would use our new space.

By the time we talked to Minneapolis Architects Rollin Chapin and Donald Parsons, we had decided on two more bedrooms and a relocated bath in the new wing, plus better living and dining-kitchen space in the older section. We spent so much time planning that we completely forgot exterior appearance. But our architects' suggestion to change roof style from gable to hip gave our run-of-the-mill bungalow the look of a brand-new house.

We did part of the work. I tore off the entrance porch and dug trenches for the new walls. My wife was an interested spectator for awhile, but with doors boarded up, plaster dust thick, and carpenters coming through windows, she began to help, at first helping me pull nails. Before we were through, she was nailing up wallboard and helping with the shingling. We left major construction work to craftsmen, but by doing the finishing ourselves and helping where we could, we remodeled without borrowing a cent.

Strawberry barrel and peonies

Q I've heard that a "strawberry barrel" can be an attractive step decoration. How can I make one?
A. N. F., Kentucky

In the picture above, a nail keg was painted the same color as the house and used to help accent the doorway. Four legs were added to give more height. Any number of holes can be bored with an expansion bit.

Make a 3-inch cylinder of cardboard to stand upright in center of barrel. Fill the cylinder with vermiculite or peatmoss, and the space around the cylinder with good soil. Then remove the cylinder and use the core as a watering channel.

Insert plant roots through the holes as soil is put in. Dwarf marigolds or coleus may be used.

Q Would it help to feed my peony plants? They are three years old.
M. S. T., Indiana

Photographs: Stanley

Your peony plants should be fairly well established by now and may be fed early each spring at the stage of growth shown above.

Sprinkle about a cupful of a balanced plant food in a band around the plant. Scratch the plant food into the soil and water, or let spring rains do the job. Peonies depend on food reserves in their roots for early growth. But you'll need to provide plant food in the soil to make sure you get the best growth and bloom possible.

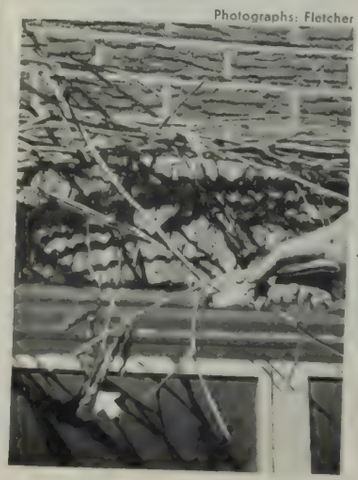
Braid for bloom



Q I planted a wisteria vine 5 years ago, but it has failed to bloom. What is the reason, and can I ever get it to flower? — N. R. L., Ohio

Lack of phosphorus in your soil might be a reason why your wisteria fails to bloom. Injury to flower buds by freezing is another common reason in the north. To force your vine to flower, try taking the stems down and braiding them about a third of the way up. Wisteria above had not bloomed for years, has flowered since braiding stems and twisting short wires tightly around young shoots 2 inches from main stems.

Under normal conditions, all wisterias should bloom. To keep yours flowering well, cut back the young lateral shoots in early spring before growth starts. Young canes which grow from larger, older canes are easily recognizable. When you're through, most of the side shoots should be stubs from 10 to 14 inches long. Note the seed pods in the picture below from last year's bloom. Insulated electric wire is strung on hooks in the brick to hold this wisteria.

He was playing with the door handle...

(Based on Hartford Claim #70 AL 17119)

One day last year I went for a drive with a friend. Her three-year-old boy was with us, riding in the back seat. As we were rolling along, the child got to playing with a rear door handle. Suddenly the door swung open and dragged the little fellow right out of the car.

I was sick with fear when I saw his limp body sprawled by the road. We rushed him to a doctor and, I'm thankful to say, found that he wasn't seriously hurt. There were some bills for his medical care and though I wasn't at fault, my Hartford Automobile Insurance paid them all, under its wonderful Medical Payments feature. The Hartford would have paid as much as $500; my policy covers anyone who gets hurt while in my car up to that amount*—even me!

(Now available up to $5000)*

Your own Automobile Liability Insurance is not as complete as it should be unless it provides automatic Medical Payments benefits for occupants of your car. Let your Hartford agent (or your insurance broker) check your policy now; there is no obligation.

What's right

It's natural to disagree at times on how to handle your children. While parents should get together to thresh out big issues, it doesn't do a child too much harm to witness a mild disagreement, unless the incident becomes one more chapter in a perpetual battle. The argument between the Alexanders, therefore, is not necessarily bad in itself.

What's wrong

From Dad's comments, it looks as though Mrs. Alexander is suffering from the overanxiety common to many mothers. Since daily life is filled with potential dangers of all kinds, you have to guard against letting your own fears stand in the way of your children's growth, even though you are filled with a desire to protect them. Jack's best protection is the fact that he has learned to swim.

Actually Dad has performed a real service for Jack in backing him up in this effort to be manly. Perhaps Dad could perform a service for Mother, too, by helping her see that she is magnifying her fears and by encouraging her to let her "little boy" grow up.

Dad's overruling of Mother, however, is a bit dictatorial. Parents should have few or no occasions to countermand each other's orders. Dad Alexander might have tried a little more reasoning, and Mom might have placed a little more confidence in his judgment.

Who's going to get it after you're go will! If you adopt a child, the same thing happens. Taking it all in all, the high probability is that not one man in three protects his family as perfectly as he would by making a well-considered, up-to-date will with legal assistance.

No article can tell you everything you ought to know about the matter, because laws differ here and there. In so-called community-property states, a widow is entitled to half of the estate her husband creates from the date of their marriage. In most of our states a widow without children gets more than the one-third she gets when there are children. But what is said here applies generally throughout the United States for a married couple with young children.

What are the commonest reasons for making a will?

Reason 1: To make your full estate available to your widow and small children during the years when they need it most.

Reason 2: To choose your own executor, instead of having the court appoint one who might not be satisfactory to your wife.

Should she have the job? Perhaps, especially if she has a good head for business and the estate is simple. But many women who read the 50-odd functions of an executor prefer a trusted relative, friend, or attorney. Or, if the estate is big enough, a trust company. Incidentally, it's good to have your executor younger than you are, so he'll be likely to survive you by many years. If you want, your will can make your wife co-executor. That way she can make her wishes felt.

Reason 3: To direct how much your executor shall pay to your widow pending settlement of the estate.

Reason 4: To name your executor without bond.

head you brought back from Maine in 1922.

Reason 10: To distribute property among your children in unequal portions, if you wish to do so. If there's a disabled or handicapped child, you may make special provision, as General Robert E. Lee did for a crippled daughter.

Reason 11: To keep estranged relatives from getting a share of your estate.

In certain states if a man dies childless and without a will, his brothers and sisters, or, in other states, his parents share in his property after some specified amount like $5,000 or $15,000 is handed to his widow. Thus, relatives who have become strangers to you may get money you'd much rather give to your wife. For example, an estranged brother you hadn't seen for 30 years might get half of all you own after your wife received a small sum, so talk that one over with your lawyer!

Reason 12: To give your money to your pet charity if every member of your immediate family passes out of the picture.

Your wife, too, needs a will. Even if she owns no property, a woman with children should name her husband guardian without bond or designate a certain relative or friend in that capacity if her husband dies before she does. Other reasons already given may apply quite as much to a woman as to a man.

Her will may recognize the fact that property created by her husband rightfully belongs to his relatives if she's childless and dies soon after her husband. On the other hand, a childless woman may wish to direct an inheritance from her own folks to her blood relatives. A will can do it, so long as a living husband's rights are recognized.

A home bought with money earned by the husband and placed in the wife's name can go back to the husband—but only if she has a will. Otherwise it may be sold, and two-thirds of the proceeds put aside for the children at 21.

Your home may need some special thought. Suppose it's an expensive residence which easily might become a white elephant to your family if you died young. It is in your name only. Your will states that the family can occupy it so long as they can afford to live there; otherwise your executor must sell it and invest the proceeds to create added income. Co-ownership, so common, presents a dangerous possibility. A widow suddenly made owner of real estate may be tempted to sell it to indulge in hazardous speculation. You may want to discuss that possibility with your attorney.

The mention of co-ownership may have raised an exultant gleam in your eyes. You're thinking, "Brother, so far you haven't touched me! Everything we possess —home, stocks, bonds, car, and bank accounts—is jointly owned by Sallie and me. Since she'd get everything, why make a will?"

While it's true that co-ownership should deliver property automatically to a surviving spouse, the Who's going to get it after you're gone?

Iowa State Bar Association warns, "A 'joint-tenancy' arrangement is not likely to save taxes and expense. In some cases it actually increases them."

There are genuine disadvantages too. Suppose both husband and wife die, without wills, in the same auto crash. Their jointly owned property is disposed of just like that of an individual who quits life without a will, and with all the accompanying disadvantages. And today's energetic tax gatherers are growingly suspicious of attempts to evade inheritance, gift, and income taxes by co-owners who, unwittingly, may play right into their hands.

A New York woman paid $30,000 for some common stocks by checks drawn on a bank account owned jointly with her husband. By the time her husband died, the value of these securities had risen to $48,000. The widow was unable to prove that the money which paid for them had been earned, inherited, or acquired by her from some source other than her husband. So the tax authorities decided it was really her husband's money which paid for the stocks and imposed an inheritance tax on half of the whole amount of $48,000. Then they decided that the other half had really been a gift by the husband to the wife, so they slapped a substantial gift tax on it.

This experience reminds worshippers of co-ownership that inheritance tax laws presume that a dead co-owner of real estate, stocks, bonds, bank accounts, and other property owned not just half, but the entire property. This can raise stiff problems for co-owners. To escape taxation in full, they must dig up old bankbooks, unearth ancient canceled checks and yellowed sales slips, and present other documentary proof to substantiate their claim for tax exemption.

For this reason, in making your will, it's wise to go over all your co-ownership property with your attorney. He may show you how to improve your position and lessen death taxes.

Yesterday's will can be as out of date as a 1925 automobile. Only the obsolete will may still look as good as the day it was made!

Was your present will made prior to April, 1948? If so, drawing a new will to take full advantage of the Federal Marital Deductions Amendment of that date may save your estate hundreds, perhaps thousands, of dollars. For this is the greatest change in laws governing estate planning that has come along in many years. In essence, it means that if you leave half of your estate to your wife, you may reduce estate taxes amazingly.

It's complicated to explain, but a rough example will show you how this amendment favors widows. Suppose two men die leaving estates of $120,000. At present the first $60,000 of an estate is exempt from federal estate tax. Mr. A. doesn't leave his widow half, so after applying the exemption, the $60,000 remaining is taxed. But Mr. B. leaves half to his wife, so the remainder of $60,000 constitutes his net estate and is entirely exempt from federal estate taxes.

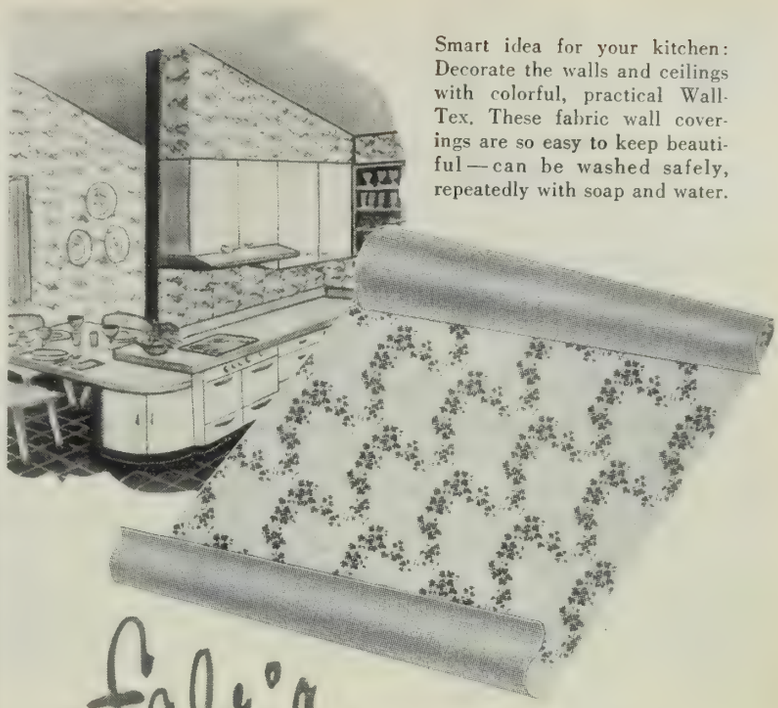
We saw how a will made when you are first married can hamstring your widow if it doesn't mention children born later. At the other end of life, you may want to make a new will which gives more to your aging widow, now that your sons and daughters are grown and prosperous.



As your children grow older, their differences may suggest that it's safe to give son Tom $5,000 outright, but that easy-spending Jerry had better get his $5,000 in installments over five years. A new will can do exactly that, or give outright bequests in unequal amounts to different children. Contrary to common belief, you can cut out a child entirely, not even the old dollar legacy being necessary.

To be litigation-proof, a will must comply exactly with the laws of the state in which it's probated. So when you move to a different state, better let a local attorney review your will so you'll be safe. Even if you own a summer shack in another state, it's smart to make sure that the way you dispose of it conforms with the laws of the state in which it stands.

If you live a long time, the executor named in your will may die, move away, or tell you that now he'd rather be excused. You make a new will naming a new executor. And if all the witnesses to your will should die, it may be cheaper to have a fresh will drawn, even if it's exactly like your old one, with living witnesses, rather than force your executor to hunt up people who can vouch for the genuineness of signatures of witnesses who have passed on.

If you make radical changes in your investments, like putting all your money into a business or selling stocks and bonds to buy an

DON'T WASTE WASTE PAPER

Today it is an important armament material

• Old newspapers, magazines and used paper of every type are materials vitally needed by our defense program. They are used in the making of the cartons and shipping cases in which most of our war materials are stored and shipped. They are used in the making of the insulating and building boards necessary for housing military personnel and civilian war workers. They are badly needed by other industries.

Don't throw away or burn up a single piece of waste paper unnecessarily! Every piece you salvage is a real contribution to national defense.

Earn Extra Money

The demand for waste paper is terrific—and the prices are at a record high. Here is a wonderful opportunity for Scouts, Church or School Groups, Volunteer Firemen, Service Men's Clubs and charitable organizations to earn real money for their needs. Organize paper collections—immediately—to be made at regular intervals. Your nearest waste paper dealer (listed in the telephone book) or any paper mill will buy your collections. Or you can make a worthwhile donation to the Salvation Army or City Rescue Mission by calling and giving your collections to them.

Above all — don't destroy any kind of waste paper. Save it carefully. It will be used. This is an important and easy way to help your country right now!

By Ann Usher

Here are exercises that are specially recommended if you've just had a baby. But they aren't intended for new mothers only. Anyone can do them. They'll help to strengthen your abdominal wall and your back and chest muscles. In addition, they relieve tension and fatigue, stimulate blood circulation, and aid in developing good posture. They're helpful, too, in relieving constipation, abdominal congestion, and menstrual discomfort.

If you have any physical condition which might make it unwise to take these exercises, check with your doctor before starting them.

In an after-childbirth program, you can start even the first day or so—flat on your back in bed—with a few motions which do not require much exertion, such as: Cross ankles, tighten hip muscles, and press muscles on inside of thighs togeth Then tighten rectal muscles. R repeat.

Also, raise and lower head, chin to chest. Repeat. Still on feet up, down, and sideways, a your toes.

Then, if your doctor approves, four exercises pictured may be a few days after the baby is bor you're still in bed. Continue thes (in bed or on the floor) for th weeks.

Who would ever guess this Beautiful Ceiling covers unsightly cracked plaster?

"It was like a nightmare!

"I knew something had to be done with our ugly, unsafe cracked ceilings. But oh, how I dreaded re-plastering. House torn up . . . irritating delays . . . weeks of confusion. White gritty dust seeping everywhere, I knew, meant a complete housecleaning.

"Then our lumber dealer, bless him, told me about Upson Ceilings. Big lightweight Upson Kuver-Krak Panels, he said, could be applied right over our old ceilings . . . to last a lifetime.

"Imagine! A carpenter did the whole job in just a matter of hours! Used clever Upson Fasteners to anchor the panels from the back. So no nail heads show. Now, after painting, isn't my Upson Ceiling lovely? It's such a satisfaction to know I'll never have plaster cracks again."

Hundreds of thousands of ugly cracked ceilings have been made beautiful again and forever crackproof with Upson Kuver-Krak Panels. Let us send you our practical book. To say more than this would be to say what cannot now be demonstrated.

In all fairness, however, I must note that most authorities and experts do not share the enthusiasm of our Berkshire dianeticists, and of their counterparts over the country. Dr. I. I. Rabi, Nobel prizewinning physicist, writes (The Scientific American, January, 1951): "This book probably contains more promises and less evidence per page than has any publication since the invention of printing. . . . Its huge sale to date is distressing evidence of the frustrated ambitions, hopes, ideals, anxieties, and worries of the many persons who through it have sought succor." Psychoanalyst Milton R. Sapirstein in The Nation (August 5, 1950) denounces the dianetic "conception of the amoral, detached, 100 percent efficient, mechanical man—superbly free-floating, unemotional, and unrelated to anything." A psychologist at a psychiatric foundation writes me (August 18): "I have studied memory for 15 years. I know that what Hubbard writes has nothing to do with science or factual truth."

Dr. Joseph A. Winter, M.D., who wrote the introduction to the book, has a very different opinion: "For the past year, I have been practicing dianetics on my patients, on my friends, and on my family. For the first time in my life, I'm satisfied that there is a method by among the 400-odd certified professional auditors now available, lean toward this view. No "clears" are on exhibit, nor does Hubbard himself claim to be one, as yet. Nevertheless, within limits still uncertain and which are subject to improvements still unlimited, dianetics appears in practice to work substantially as advertised. But only for those who pursue auditing seriously and persistently, despite its puzzles and its capacity to consume endless hours.

Will dianetics "save the world"? I think not. Will dianetics fade away as a passing fad and a curious and useless memento of our time of troubles? Again I think not.

Something new and hopeful, in my considered opinion, has here emerged from a fog of confusion and ignorance. "Know thyself!" was the highest wisdom of the ancient Greeks. Dianetics is a new road to self-knowledge. "To thine own self be true," wrote Shakespeare, "and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man." Dianetics offers people a means of taking their own part and ceasing to play the false roles (as all of us so often do) of dead ancestors or of relatives whom we unknowingly love, fear, or hate.

It is scarcely probable that dianetics, as it develops further, will conform in all respects to Hubbard's first statement of it. What may reasonably be anticipated, I believe, is an eventual reconciliation between dianetics and the best of older methods of dealing with problems of personality, combining them in new ways capable of contributing richly to human self-fulfillment.

We may yet have an opportunity to learn far more about ourselves, and our parents and our children, than we have hitherto believed possible. In the learning, we may find the road to sanity for One World as well as for ourselves. Whatever its errors and follies, dianetics carries a message of hope and an invitation to survival. Those who prefer life to death are therefore privileged still, I trust, to wish it well and to make of it what they will in coping with personal frustrations and community problems.

Put your children voices on a recor

An album of beloved sounds will whole family now and in the y

By Neta Stokely

You take snapshots of your children from time to time for their photo scrapbook; why not make a "talking scrapbook" of their voices throughout the years?

With a moderately priced tape or wire recorder, you can capture baby's first cries and coos, Jimmy's babbling of nursery rhymes, Susan's solo at her first piano recital. Take your reel of tape or wire to a sound-recording studio, have a record made of it, and you'll have a priceless possession!

You can have fun interviewing your child and his small guests at his birthday party, as we did with our 5-year-old Craig.

"Tell us what you did this day you were 5, Son," my husband, Roy, asked, as I held the microphone within range.

"We went to the zoo, and then we had a 'circus' party." Craig's eager voice claimed. "And I got a fire engine and dump truck and finger paints and a baseball bat . . . AND we had frosted cake and ice cream and balloons!

"My, what a BIG day!" Roy declared. "Penny, tell what you liked best at the zoo."

The pressing made from that recording is already a treasure and will become endeared as years go by, when Craig will be interested in football and college proms, instead of toy fire engines and trips to the zoo!

If you have a movie camera, you know how realistically it catches the sight of your children; just so will a record catch and keep for you the sound of them in ways they speak and soon outgrow. Some friends of ours have a cherished record of their daughter singing "Dod Bless Amerida" when she was not yet 3. From her lofty perch of 8 years today, Martha Louise giggles, "How did I ever make 'God Bless America' sound like that?"

Possibly you have kept samples of your child's first printing of his name. But a recording gives you signature in voice, catches the lilt of his young voice, so you won't have to peel back layers of memory to recall the sound of his joyous enthusiasm at the back-yard Easter-egg hunt when he was 2. You have it on a record, for keeps, just like the color snapshots you took that bright Sunday morning.

Each Christmas you can make a record with the singing of carols and talk about th

Remodeling like this is easy with the Nu-Wood and Balsam-Wool System. Nu-Wood goes up fast—builds partitions and covers old walls and ceilings—with no muss or fuss. And Balsam-Wool insulation in the attic pays for the whole job!

When we bought the old Simpson home, we enjoyed having the extra space—but some of it wasn't very usable. That big, chilly bedroom, for instance, had us stumped.

"Wish we could divide it into two bedrooms," I told John. "Then the twins could have one room and Bill the other. But I suppose remodeling is out of the question right now."

Finally, we decided to see Mr. Brown, our lumber dealer. "There's a way to make your remodeling pay for itself," he told us. "First, we'll stop that costly heat loss through your attic—and give you year-round comfort—by putting in Balsam-Wool Guaranteed Insulation.

"Next, we'll use Nu-Wood to divide up that old bedroom. I'd suggest Lok-Panels and Variegated Tile for the walls, with Sta-Lite Tile for the ceiling. Nu-Wood adds extra insulation and absorbs sound, you know, so both rooms will be comfortable and quiet. You won't have to do any painting, because Nu-Wood is factory-decorated.

"And here's the best news of all—with this Nu-Wood and Balsam-Wool System, your insulated attic will save enough in fuel bills to pay for itself and the Nu-Wood rooms, too!"

Want new room ideas? You'll find plenty of them—illustrated in full color—in this Nu-Wood decorator book. Mail the coupon for your copy.

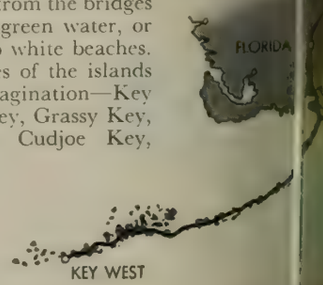
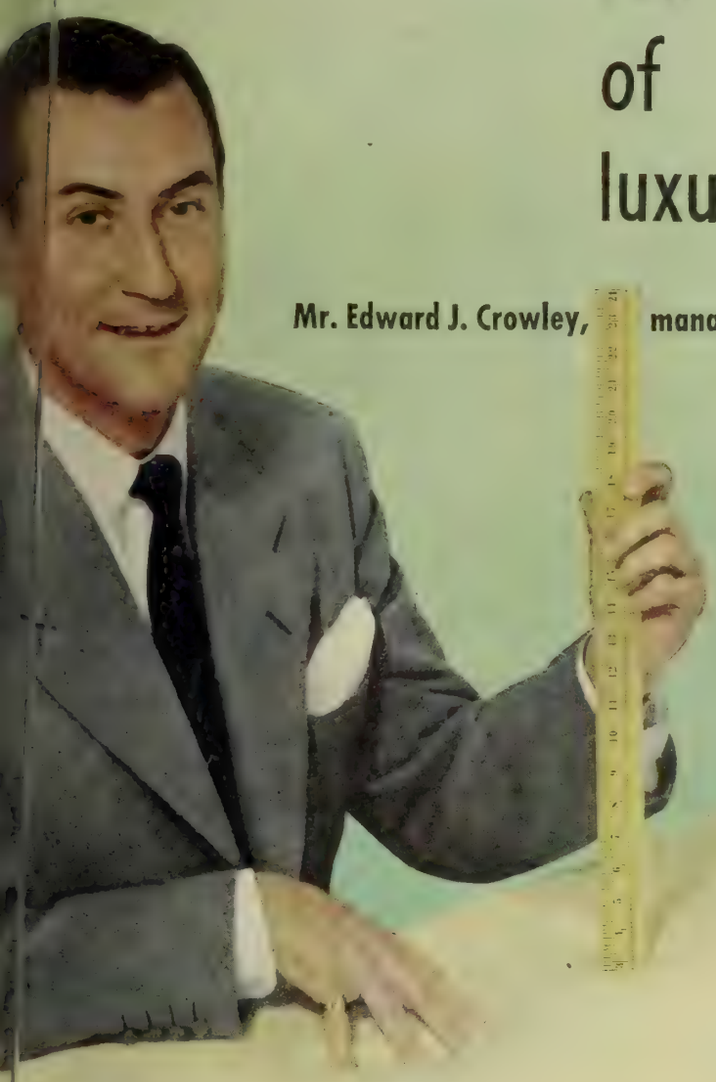
The best side trip we eve

Many people, hearing of notables flying or sailing to Key West, never realize they can reach it in their own car. It's an easy 163 miles south from Miami over U. S. 1, which is the world's longest overseas highway.



Below Florida City, the road strikes for the coast across waterlogged lowlands. Long-legged herons either pay no attention or soar unconcernedly away.

Leaving the mainland, you leapfrog across the Florida Keys using the tiny islands as steppingstones. The highway uses the former right-of-way of the Florida East Coast Railway, which gave up operating to Key West after the 1935 hurricane. Our greatest thrill came when, except for the road ahead, we could see nothing but ocean.



You can fish from the bridges in shimmering green water, or swim on superb white beaches. The very names of the islands will fire your imagination—Key Largo, Long Key, Grassy Key, Noname Key, Cudjoe Key, Sugarloaf Key

Be ready for overnight guests—whether they come for one night or a whole week. With a little planning ahead, you can be relaxed when they arrive and avoid the last-minute haste of gathering up the things they'll need during their stay.

Reserve an empty drawer in a chest or cabinet in the room your guest will use. The guest drawer shown above is full of many items important for making a guest feel at home—hand and bath towels, hangers, and cleansing tissues. Storing these things in the drawer not only keeps them ready for guests but also keeps the space occupied so family's possessions won't spill into the drawer and need to be moved somewhere else in a moment's notice. You might keep a pair of clean sheets and pillowcases in this drawer, so you will be sure to have them at hand for making up the guest bed.

Basement room for a boy and his hobbies

A teen-age boy needs a room of his own for entertaining his friends, studying, and working on his hobbies. So when the George Thompsons moved into their home (shown on page 246), one of their first problems was fixing up a room for 14-year-old Kirk.

Kirk needed a private bedroom plus a darkroom for his photographic hobby. The Thompsons found space in their basement. Because the home is on a hill, one wall of the basement is exposed, and Kirk's bedroom gets plenty of light and air.

Study these pictures and the plan for yourself. You may be able to borrow some ideas for your own home.

Bless that Gossip!

Somehow, the idea got around that steel casements were just for the mink and diamond tiara set. Probably because you used to see them mostly in the big, expensive houses, where their graceful, slim-lined beauty was very much at home. Where people devoted to the lazy life liked the easy way these windows opened—the easy way they were washed and screened and stormsashed from inside.

Then Folks Found Out

But then folks found out (and must have told their friends) that Fenestra* Steel Casements cost no more than the kind of windows that swell and stick . . . that send you swaying up and down ladders to wash or screen them. Bless that gossip!

Because now that people know the cost is low, they're almost buying us out of Windows, Screens and Storm Sash (and we make more steel windows than anybody else in America)!

See these beautiful economical windows. Call your Fenestra Dealer. There's one in every principal city. Look for "Fenestra Building Products Co." in your phone book. Detroit Steel Products Co., Dept. BH-4, 2263 E. Grand Blvd., Detroit 11, Michigan.

Termites

What they do

Enlarged 3 times

All wings same size

Actual size

Subterranean termites live in earth, require moisture to exist. Earth tunnels on foundation walls carry termites from earth to wood. Damage to wood is not visible, since termites eat through grain of wood, never come to the surface.

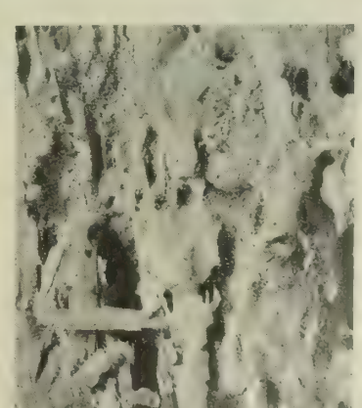
In swarming time (spring), termites are black, with four wings of equal size. In wood, they are white and soft, about ¼ inch long.

Carpenter ants

What they do

Enlarged 3 times

Carpenter ants may be large black or brown insects or small black ants. Their wings are longer than their bodies and lie flat. Ordinary ants have short wings that stand up.



Carpenter ants don't eat wood, merely bore into it for shelter. They prefer window and foundation sills, porch columns, railings. Look for piles of sawdust and shredded wood on the floor.

Old-house borers

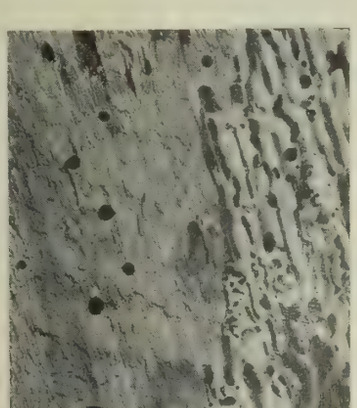
Actual size

Old-house borers are also beetles, but have round tails without spines, and round heads that follow the lines of the body.



Borers leave bigger exit holes (¼-inch) than other beetles, are most easily recognized by the noise of their boring. Borers damage only sapwood, but can continue to work in wood for years.

AFTER. Both television and radio fit into the center closet — leaving plenty of hanging space on either side for guests' or out-of-season clothing. In a TV room like this, you can arrange furniture permanently for televiewing. And youngsters can see their favorite shows without disturbing family

AFTER. When the closet door is closed, the TV room becomes an upstairs sitting room and guest bedroom. Freshly painted woodwork and new draperies and slipcovers make the room a pleasant place to spend evening. Sofa bed and easy chair are comfortable seating — for reading, talking, televiewing. Most any dog can become a watchdog, but how much

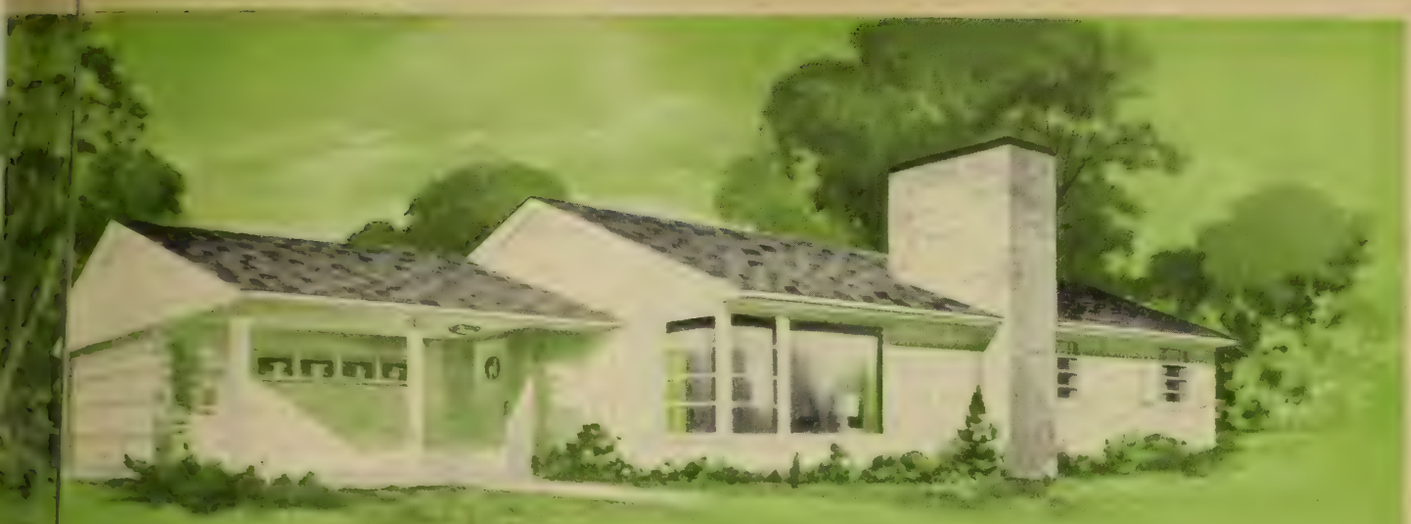
By Russell K. Lowry

Just about everybody who starts out to buy a puppy will usually announce "I want a good watchdog" the minute he steps into a pet shop or kennel. People who write "Your Pet and Mine" for advice on buying the right breed will invariably wind up their letters with the sentence, "Of course, I want a good watchdog!"

So it's only human nature for the breeder or pet-shop owner to drag out a cute little ball of fur and fluff and say, "Oh, this pup will grow into a fine watchdog all right." The watchdog enthusiasts generally accept the statement at its face value and start feeling safer at once. Nuts to second-story men and burglars. We've got a watchdog, haven't we?



Often, this is only the beginning of a chain of confusion and misunderstanding. People just don't seem to understand what a watchdog is, or is supposed to do. First, no pup is going to be much of a watcher until he grows up and gets some gray matter. Up to this time, any normal, healthy pup is everybody's pal. He craves only the attention and patting of any human who happens along—friend or stranger.

But one fine day, the pup grows up. He starts being suspicious of strange sounds and strange people. A knock on the door or the sound of a step he doesn't recognize brings forth a bark. Right from there, the pup has become a watchdog. A watchdog, says the dictionary, is "a dog quick to detect the approach of strar

"Exterior walls, you know, are the biggest heat leakage area in a home. So, to avoid having a house that will be chilly, drafty, costlier to heat in winter—and too hot in summer, don't fail to insulate the exterior walls as well as the roof and attic when you build or remodel!", advises "Kal" Klein, well-known builder of quality homes in the New York area.

"To assure vital exterior wall insulation, I use Celotex Insulating Sheathing instead of ordinary sheathing. It insulates as it builds a stronger wall, does both jobs at one cost. So you save on labor and materials! You save more on heating bills, enjoy greater comfort winter and summer! And your home's re-sale value is higher, too!"

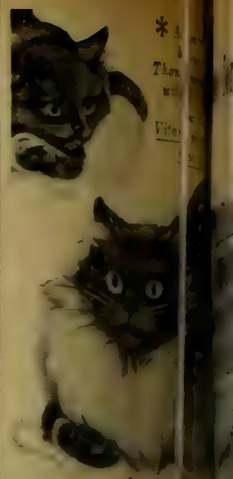
had the size and mental make-up to make the grade in the K-9 Corps of World War II. Even then, they had to be expertly trained for this aggressive attack work.

Trained in peacetime attack technique, dogs are often used for guarding property. They're excellent watchdogs to be sure, but when the chips are down, they can also back up their "watching" with attack. They are not called watchdogs, but "guard dogs." Therein lies the distinction between a watchdog and an "attacker," who is in reality a guard animal.

The word "watchdog" is much abused. It misleads many. The truth is that most any dog will become a good watch animal, given half a chance. He'll bark when danger threatens. But that's all. And when he barks, he has discharged his obligation. It's up to you to carry on from there.

As for training a dog to attack humans, we're against it. Let's face it. No dog is a match for an armed man bent on mischief, not even a big, powerful animal who knows all the tricks in tackling a prowler. Yes, we've read all the hair-raisers, listened to the radio plots, and seen the movies which play up these super dogs who never fail to subdue the dastardly kidnapers. But these episodes all ignore the simple, realistic truth that a smart human can outmaneuver a powerful, vicious dog any day in the week. One of the ways being a well-placed bullet.



Any dog owner who assigns his pet to actually guarding valuable property, expecting the dog to make good on his own in a physical encounter with a burglar, has no real love for the animal or thought of its safety. Storekeepers sometimes delegate to their dogs this kind of duty. Owners of lumberyards and warehouses, located in darkened sections of town, often find it cheaper to chain up a fierce-looking dog on the premises than to hire a watchman. Naturally, their dogs do their best when the big test comes along.

Which isn't much, when all's said and done. The body of many a loyal dog has been found the next morning, with a bullet through its brain or its skull caved in. In fact, how many times have you ever read of a faithful "watchdog" standing on the chest of a dead prowler, wagging its tail in triumph? When that happens, it'll be bigger news than the one about the man biting the dog!

Our biology teacher asked, "Why don't dogs chew their food?" He insists that dogs merely tear food apart and swallow it whole. Could you explain?—J. S., New Hampshire.

Well, dogs in their wild state had to feast hurriedly to get their share of the kill. If they took time to chew, they got edged out by others of the pack. Mother Nature took care of this by providing dogs with

Applying the mortar. Use a small pointing trowel to apply new mortar. You'll find an improvised "hawk" handy; a square of hardboard screwed to a wooden handle will do. Hold hawk against bricks so mortar can be pushed into joints. Pack mortar in and scrape off surplus. Avoid getting mortar on face of bricks. Tar paper on roof around chimney will keep roof clean

Adding cap. A chimney cap protects bricks from weathering damage. For a small chimney, cap may be simply a thick layer of mortar troweled on. Soak bricks for good adhesion. Let top edges slope outward to shed water. At highest point, cap should be level all around so wind won't be scooped in, causing downdrafts. Fold over upper half of dough. Cut into strips 1 inch wide. Twist ends of each strip in opposite directions. Place on greased baking sheet. Pinch ends of strips together firmly; also press ends of strips to baking sheet—to keep them from unwinding. Cover with damp cloth; let rise until light, about 25 minutes. Bake in moderately hot oven (375°) 12 to 15 minutes. While still slightly warm, brush tops with Confectioners' Sugar Icing: Mix 1 cup sifted confectioners' sugar with about 2 tablespoons milk. Makes 2 dozen twists.

Cream Puffs

Fill the puffs with ice cream this time—

1 cup water
½ cup butter
1 cup enriched flour
¼ teaspoon salt
4 eggs

Heat water and butter to boiling point in saucepan. Stir in flour and salt; beat until mixture forms a ball. Remove from heat. Cool slightly. Beat in eggs, one at a time, beating each time until mixture is smooth. Drop by spoonfuls about 2 inches apart onto ungreased cooky sheet. Bake in hot oven (450°) 15 minutes; then in moderate oven (325°) 25 minutes. Cool slowly, out of drafts. Before serving, cut off tops with sharp knife. Scoop out any soft bits of dough. Fill with ice cream. Replace tops. Spoon Rich Chocolate Sauce over top. Serve at once. Makes 1 dozen puffs.

Rich Chocolate Sauce

Rich and glossy with a bittersweet flavor. And so easy to make—

3 1-ounce squares unsweetened chocolate
½ cup water
2 tablespoons butter or fortified margarine
¾ cup sugar
Salt

Melt chocolate in water in heavy saucepan over low heat. Stir in remaining ingredients. Boil 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Serve hot or cold. Makes 1 cup sauce.

Will your house be invaded?

If you find pellets of digested wood like these when you dig into damaged wood, your house has been invaded either by non-subterranean termites or powder-post beetles.

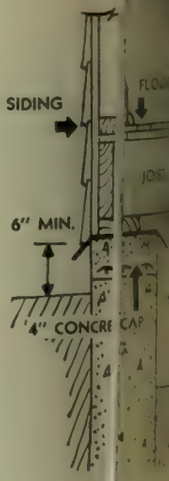
Difference: Pellets of termites are concave; pellets of beetles aren't.

get rid of all untreated wood in contact with the ground. Remove dirt fill under porches and make sure that all crawl space is well ventilated. Put all supporting timbers on concrete bases, cap masonry foundations, and point up cracks in masonry.

As a supplement to these structural changes, poison the soil around the foundation of the house. Break down all earth shelter tubes, then dig a trench 15 inches deep and about the width of a spade around walls, piers, and vertical pipes. Next bore auger or crowbar holes down to the footings, 6 to 18 inches apart, depending on the sandiness of the soil. Using a watering can or hose, pour part of the poison (see below) into the trench, replace half the soil, pour in more poison, then put in the rest of the soil and the rest of the poison. Apply poisons only when soil is dry and use about a gallon per foot of foundation.

You can use any one of four poisons: 1 pound of sodium arsenate per gallon of water; 1 part of trichlorobenzene in 3 parts of fuel oil; 5 percent DDT in fuel oil, 5 percent pentachlorophenol in fuel oil; or a 2 percent emulsion of chlordane. These chemicals are poisonous to you and animals, and all but the chlordane will kill vegetation if used near the roots. Protect plants and trees by laying tar paper on the wall of the trench near shrubs. Use rubber gloves, and keep chemicals away from wells. Soil poisons should be effective for at least five years.

If you're building a new house, your best protection is termite shields—strips of corrosion-resisting metal carefully laid on foundation walls and piers. All joints must be sealed, or connected by impervious interlocking joints. Check joints yearly.



Never put any wood in direct contact with the soil unless it has been thoroughly impregnated with an effective preservative. Where wood is separated f by a crawl space, be vented through ings in the wall, opening for every wall.

A house should never look remodeled

By J. N. Morrissey

In any smooth remodeling job, the fewer the changes you make, the slighter those changes should be. A house should never look as if it had just been remodeled.

Take the Joseph Schilling home in Des Moines, Iowa, for example. Work to be done—and the Schillings decided to do it in two stages—included complete kitchen revision, expansion of living space, and general sprucing up outside.

Greatest improvement in looks wasn't structural at all. Simply by raising the grade 18 inches at the porch, then camouflaging remaining height with planting, the Schillings removed their house's double chin. Minor changes in main and dormer roofs smoothed out wrinkles in her brow.

Enclosure of the porch was the final touch. Blending perfectly with the character of the old house, it increased living space and let in light the old porch used to shut out. The entrance was put at the side, where it doesn't interfere with furniture arrangement around the big window with its view toward the park.

Just as improper air conditioning can make outside heat unbearable, too great a change from "before" to "after" can make a mess of a good remodeling possibility.

potent digestive juices so that stomachs did the "chewing," while the teeth simply tore food into chunks for hasty swallowing.

My dog, now 6 years old, drinks great quantities of water day and night, is then greatly distressed. What does this indicate?—W. W. P., Ohio.

An insatiable, constant desire for water usually heralds oncoming diabetes. Veterinary science has experimented with insulin in its treatment. Insulin combined with a carefully regulated diet has brought results reported as excellent. My suggestion is to have a veterinarian examine your dog and supervise necessary treatment.

We have two cats who are constantly troubled with fleas, despite our best efforts to rid them of the pests. What should we do?—Mrs. H. G. H., Alabama.

In your area, the parasite is very likely the "cat flea," which will also nip humans. As is the case with all fleas, the cat flea must be destroyed in the larvae stage, as well as the adult stage. During this time, they live on vegetable matter and can be found in cracks, crannies, and even on dirt or cinder floors in garages, chicken sheds, and other places where cats congregate. Spray such spots thoroughly with a chlordane solution, at the same time you dust the cats with pyrethrum powder. In 10 days, repeat the dusting and spraying. In dealing with fleas of all varieties, most people overlook the up-and-coming larvae, which are not interested in blood at the moment. But in a short time, they emerge as bloodthirsty adults.

Why are the ears and tails of certain breeds of dogs cropped?—J. E. T., West Virginia.

In different parts of the world, where dogs were trained as professional fighters or were used to track down wolves and wildcats, their ears and tails were cropped as a measure of protection. These appendages were the most easily seized and maimed in physical combat. Today, "parent" kennel clubs of the cropped breeds, who dictate physical standards, cling to these practices largely because of custom. though the claim is also made that such cropping adds to the trim appearance of the dog.

Our valuable Boxer was killed by a car a few days ago. I am thinking about suing the driver. Are there any special legal steps or provisions which favor a dog owner in actions of this kind?—S. J. S., Pennsylvania.

If the driver had ample opportunity to avoid hitting your dog in clear daylight, he is responsible, but you may need a witness or two to convince the court. At least, it's a big help. However, judges do not, as a rule, recognize high value in dogs. One hundred dollars seems to be the top limit awarded for killed dogs.

Will your house be invaded?

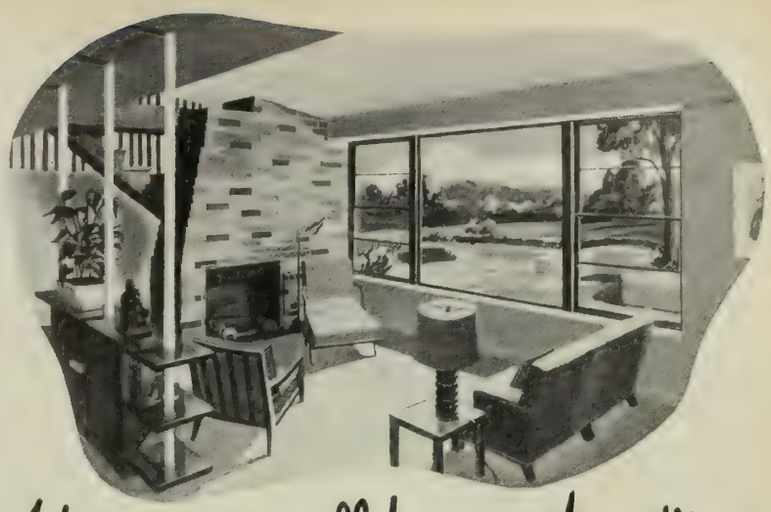
Inspect at least once a year for pellets which drop from eaten wood.

If your house has already been attacked, use the same methods described for powder-post beetles, or, using bellows, blow finely divided white arsenic or 50 percent DDT powder into auger holes bored into the termite galleries. A half-teaspoonful per hole is enough. The dust sticks to the termites' bodies, and they become poisoned because of their habit of licking each other.

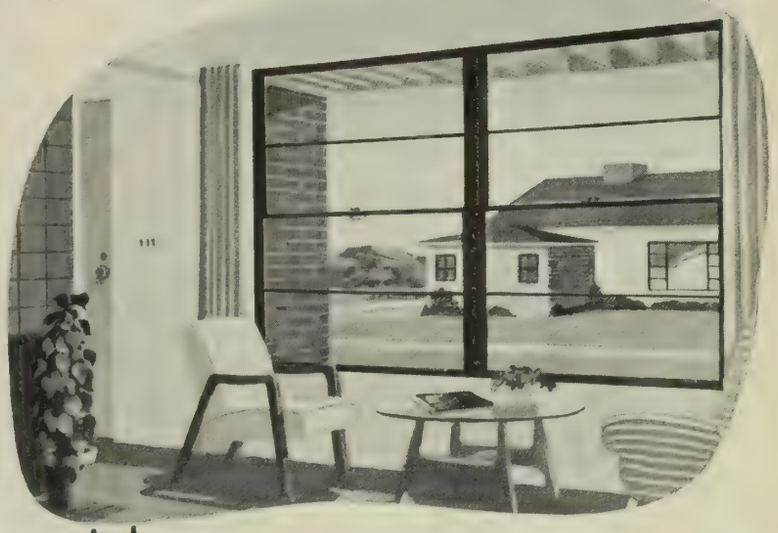
Carpenter ants may either fly or crawl into the house. Since they attack decayed wood first, replace all rotting wood in foundation, porch, or sills, with preservative-impregnated wood. Have a tree surgeon operate on decayed sections of shade trees.

To kill small numbers of carpenter ants, use sweet-poisoned baits, such as honey and arsenic. You can buy special containers that ants can get in but dogs and cats can't reach. Put these where ants are crawling.



When there are a lot of ants, dust nests and runways with derris powder containing 4 percent rotenone, or with a dusting of 10 percent DDT powder, or spray with a solution of 1 to 2 tablespoonfuls of 40-50 percent chlordane in a gallon of water. Saturate any infested wood with a 5 percent solution of pentachlorophenol in fuel oil.

Powder-post beetles and old-house borers do more damage than all other wood-boring insects except termites. There are several types of beetles, but all have the same characteristics. The holes you find in the wood of antique furniture are made by one type.



To prevent damage, use no wood that still has bark on it, and use only dry, heartwood lumber. Give a brush coat of preservative to exposed structural timbers in attics, cellars, and crawl spaces. Be sure all attic or crawl-space vents are tightly screened.

Where wood has already been attacked and weakened, replace it with chemically preimpregnated timber. If the wood isn't too badly powdered, bore auger holes into the beetles' runways through the wood and inject under pressure 5 percent pentachlorophenol, or 1 part of trichlorobenzene in 3 parts of light petroleum oil. Fill holes with putty and refinish the eaten wood. Open all doors and windows so the odor of chemicals can get out. These liquids will burn your skin, so be careful.

These protective measures and remedies you can probably handle yourself. If you don't want to try, there are reputable companies everywhere whose business is to keep houses free from insect damage. They often use another method—fumigation for which they seal the house tightly with heavy paper and fill the house with gas until all insects are dead. But don't try it yourself.

YOGURT • What it is • How to make it • Delicious ways you can s

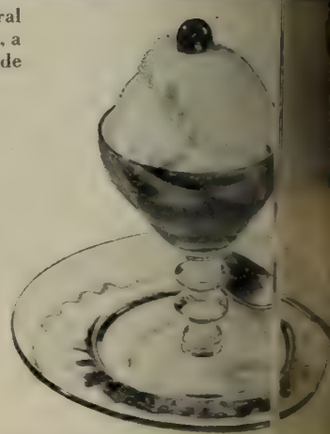
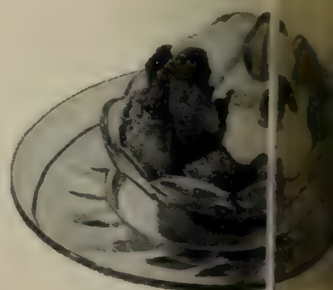
You can have your yogurt plain. Or you can flavor it with a natural sweet like honey. Or add a sprinkle of cinnamon from the shaker, a dash of brown sugar from the bowl. Or a spoonful of marmalade



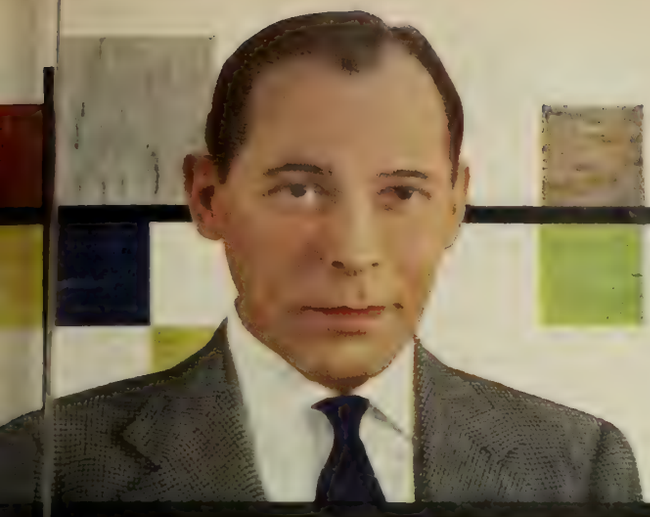
By Alexander Steinberg

What is yogurt? It's nutritious milk transformed to "yogurt" by adding a special culture. It's smooth as custard, mildly tart, fresh tasting. You eat it with a spoon. "De-licious," say yogurt fanciers. And the number of yogurt fanciers is growing fast, because yogurt, they say, is giving them new pep and vitality. It's the "new edition of nature's most perfect food."



Yogurt's a "brand-new idea," but it's centuries old in the Old World. Yogurt's the Turkish word. In Armenian, yogurt is matzoon; Greek, oxy-gala; Syrian and Egyptian, leben raib; Balkan, kisselo mleko; Indian, dadhi.

The yogurt culture was named bacillus bulgaricus by Professor Illya Metchnikoff who succeeded Louis Pasteur as the director of the Pasteur Institute. He chose the name because he isolated the culture from Bulgarian yogurt. And yogurt, he claimed, was the outstanding reason for the hardiness and long life of the Balkan people. The professor received the Nobel Award for his work on yogurt.



You can make your own yogurt or order it in your favorite restaurant or hotel dining room. Or order it from your dairy. You make yogurt simply by putting a little of yesterday's yogurt in today's batch. In the Balkans, yogurt's [Turn to page 270

Let George do it

No one can get down to work when his pencils need sharpening

By O. Spurgeon English, M. D., and Constance J. Foster

It bothered Jim Porter because he kept postponing odd jobs that he used to tackle with gusto and dispatch. The storm windows didn't get painted and put away last year. The porch floor needed painting. The garden got pretty well taken over by weeds.

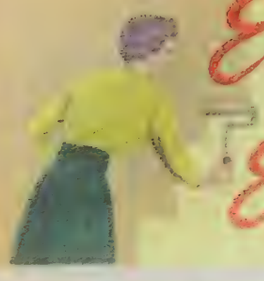
"I'll do it tomorrow," he kept promising himself about all these neglected chores. But he didn't.

When a person has always been a hustler, not given to putting things off, there is apt to be a real physical reason for his procrastination. In Jim's case, a visit to his doctor turned up the cause. A sluggish thyroid wasn't doing its stuff. A tiny pill, taken daily, is rapidly restoring Jim's old pep.

Often there is a sound physical basis for apparent laziness —some such thing as aging, a failing heart, tuberculosis, or organic disease of one sort or another. But this is apt to be a valid excuse only when the individual has previously been a responsible, punctual person, one not given to putting off the proverbial stitch in time.

Most procrastinators fall into quite a different category. Far from being caused by a glandular slowdown or vitamin lack, chronic inability to get things done on time is more often due to faulty habits and emotional attitudes acquired in childhood.

Instead of low energy, the procrastinator's trouble is likely to be energy that is blocked or misapplied. As one woman recently told us in an honest moment, "If I put half as much effort into sailing into my spring house cleaning as I do in finding excuses for not starting it, I'd have the cleanest house in town!"



The joker in all this is that few of us really enjoy putting things off when they need doing. We don't get any pleasure out of postponing our chores and [Turn to page 28 responsibilities. Procrastination is more than a thief of time. It is a thief of our self-respect and good opinion of ourselves as well. It nags at us and spoils our fun. Beset by a gnawing conscience over the letter we owe, the checkbook we ought to balance, the lawn we ought to mow, our enjoyment of the golf game we are playing instead is considerably diminished.

Worse still, our available energy for living happily and efficiently is lowered by the inner conflict that's caused by laziness or neglect of obligations. It's a little like postponing a badly needed ring job on your car. The motor's ability to function smoothly, economically, and without friction keeps getting worse.

Just about all of us put off doing a disagreeable job once in a while. You wouldn't be human if you didn't. So don't begin to feel guilty or on the defensive if you postponed washing the dishes or waxing the car in order to sit down and read this article. Relax instead and find out what makes people that way. Even if you aren't a putter-offer yourself, chances are strong that you have one among your friends or in your immediate family.

No one is born lazy, the way people are born with large noses, or green eyes, or genes and chromosomes that make for tallness or shortness. You can't blame heredity for this tendency to "let George do it."

"My grandfather was the laziest man in Polk County," one man insists stoutly, "and I'm just like him."

"Stuff and nonsense," answers modern psychiatry. "You're rationalizing, mister."

No one inherits the tendency to sit around twiddling his thumbs, whittling wood, doodling, or letting the grass grow under his feet. He becomes that way because it was made pleasant or profitable in his early years. He isn't naturally indolent or apathetic. He is made so by what happens to him in childhood.

Take yourself, for instance. If you're a chronic procrastinator, the probabilities are strong that your folks did more for you than they should have when you were small. Maybe your mother fed you too long and discouraged your first attempts to gr

"PARTY" HAMBURGER

1 lb. chuck beef, ground — 2 tablesp. minced onion
1 teasp. salt — ¼ cup water
1 tablesp. LEA & PERRINS Worcestershire Sauce

Combine all ingredients. Ground beef is best handled lightly —otherwise cakes become too compact. Shape gently into 6 cakes. Sauté in a little hot fat in a skillet for about 3 min. on each side, or until of desired rareness. Makes 6 servings. Nancy Sasser says that the success of this prize recipe depends on LEA & PERRINS Sauce, the original Worcestershire.

Whenever recipes call for Worcestershire, you can be almost certain that the experts who write the recipes mean you to use LEA & PERRINS Sauce. Always ask for it by name.

chance of succeeding. Unless you're really mixed up, you won't need outside help.

Roger L., for instance, has done a fine job of reforming his yen for procrastination without calling in a doctor. Roger's business affairs were badly muddled by his fondness for putting off until tomorrow what he could—and should—have done today. He was a good salesman, but he kept postponing calls on difficult prospects. The result was that a rival firm got their business. At home, he was always in hot water. The climax came when his house burned down. Roger discovered that he had let the insurance lapse the previous month.

He was finally shocked into doing something about his carelessness. He didn't waste time blaming his past, although it was probably responsible in large measure for a personality that made it difficult for him to do things on time.

"What's past is past," he decided. "I was an only son and pretty badly spoiled. But that's water over the dam. Meantime I'm only 35, with most of my life still ahead of me. It's up to me, I guess, if I want to make it happier and more efficient. No one else can do it for me."

Here is what Roger did. You can do it, too, if you've found that procrastination doesn't pay off in the long run:

1. Outline your plan on paper, stating what you want to change, and jotting down steps toward your goal.

For instance, to start with, Roger indicated simply: "Set the alarm half an hour earlier each morning, so I can get a head start on the day's work." A day or two later he added: "Dictate every morning until I've cleared all current correspondence." At the

5. Remember that breaking bad habits is not altogether painless.

It hurts at times, as bad as a toothache, but it's a little hurt which most people would rather avoid. That's why so few of us change much as we get older. Yet you can comfort yourself that every twinge means a victory has been won.

6. Reward yourself.

Even a trained seal won't perform if he doesn't get a fish at the end of the act. Roger blew himself to seats to the Penn Relays when he landed a big contract that he probably would have lost through procrastination a year ago.

Putting things off may not seem as serious as some more glaring habit like losing your temper easily, worrying yourself sick, or being moody and depressed. That's because it's a negative vice and consists of not doing anything. The police are more likely to be out looking for you if you do something you shouldn't than if you don't do something you should.

The things you put off doing are often such little ones that you can kid yourself into thinking they're unimportant. What if you don't fix the light switch today, tackle the stubborn business prospect, or call up for that dental appointment you dread? Tomorrow is always another day. But add them all up, and the total of wasted time, effort, and convenience is staggering.

It's the sins of omission—the things we should have done and didn't—that cause us the greatest grief and pain. Joe was going to stop off on his trip West and look in on an old friend to whom he owed a lot of past favors. He put off doing it on the way out, telling himself he'd surely take time for it on the return journey. But by that time, it was too late ever to see his old friend again. When he reached the coast, a telegram was waiting for him, telling him of Sam's sudden death.

It's the vote you don't cast that brings the wrong men into office, the letters you don't write to your congressmen that let bad laws get passed, the flowers you don't send and the kindnesses you don't do that let family misunderstandings swell into unhappiness.

These are critical times, and we're badly in need of enthusiastic, reliable, dedicated individuals to get in there and help solve the problems that challenge both our families and our world. Letting George do it isn't good enough. He's been overworked all these years, poor fellow. So give him a rest. Stop passing the buck. Do it yourself—not tomorrow but NOW.

No "DENTURE BREATH" for me*

*"I keep my false teeth clean and odor-free with Polident. When my plate feels clean and fresh and cool from a Polident bath, I'm safe from Denture Breath."

Mrs. S. B. McE., Longview, Wash.

You know what Mrs. McE. means, don't you! It's a wonderful feeling to know that you're not offending friends with Denture Breath. And it's great when your plates feel clean and cool and fresh—from their Polident bath.

Remember—those dental plates of yours need the special care of a special denture cleanser. Don't brush them. Soak your plates in Polident every day. It's so easy and quick. And Polident soaks into every corner and crevice—places brushing never seems to reach.

NO BRUSHING

Soak plate or bridge daily—fifteen minutes or more—in a fresh, cleansing solution of Polident and water.

If you're like most ordinary Americans, you dreamed of going to Florida. But, like a lot of never gone. Top summer spot for families, "world's most fam... tona was scene of automobile speed runs. Hard-p...

should cover gas, food, lodging, and admission to Florida's greatest attractions, for a family of two adults and two children for 10 days. You'll spend about $25 for gas for a tour of 1,300 miles—$80 for lodging—$100 to $110 for food—and $50 for entertainment. And you'll enjoy every cent of it!

Florida is one of the easiest regions to reach—whether you drive or travel by train, bus, or plane.

And unlike a lot of vacation areas, Florida is also a vacation for the fellow who drives the car. It presents no mountain grades, no rugged passes, no treacherous curves, no heavy traffic, except in the larger cities.

What can you do to have a good time in Florida in the summer? Just about what you'd do in the winter. Florida's coastline is practically all beach, so, of course, swimming and sunbathing are at the top of the preferred list—with sight-seeing a close second, fishing and boating, runners-up. Florida's beaches are uncrowded in the summer—first, because there are so many of them, and, second, because so many people have yet to discover what a bargain Florida offers for family vacationists.

Florida is not only surrounded on three sides by water; it has 30,000 lakes, dozens of rivers and streams. Nearly all give you fresh-water fishing if you prefer it to the deep-sea variety or the surf. No license is required for salt-water fishing; you can buy a special 10-day fresh-water permit for $2.25.

Florida's famous springs are like nothing you'll see anywhere else in the world. You'll see two of the most famous, Silver Springs and Weekiwachee, on this 10-day tour. They'll probably be cranes or herons, and perhaps an egret in the most isolated stretches. On the shore, sandpipers run about stiff-legged ahead of the waves, and of course, there'll be sea gulls and pelicans, the latter slow-moving on land, but veritable dive bombers when they spot a fish.

On this road there will be giant oaks and stately cypress trees draped in folds and ropes of gray Spanish moss—which is an air plant, not a fungus growth. And around beach homes and settlements, you'll see vivid bougainvillaea, crotons, and hibiscus in great splashes of red, pink, yellow, and green.

First day:

St. Augustine is 52 miles below Jacksonville on A1A. Here's the nation's oldest city, trying to live up to its reputation—and doing it! The narrow streets, which you enter through ancient gates, and the quaint old buildings are much as they were in the days of Spanish rule. There are 45 attractions listed by the Chamber of Commerce, and your first move upon getting into town should be to drive to the Chamber of Commerce and ask for a free copy of their Visitor's Guide. With it you can find all of the landmarks, in your own car or on foot. Really to taste the flavor of this historic city, though, you should see it from a "surrey with the fringe on top," your guide a drawling Negro driver in battered, old stovepipe hat. This buggy ride is sure to delight the children, and it isn't expensive—$3 an hour for four people. This is for a one-horse surrey. Two horses cost more.

The Chamber of Commerce is located in the fabulous old Alcazar Hotel, erected in 1889 by Henry M. Flagler, the man who built the Florida East Coast Railway and endowed St. Augustine with three enormous Spanish-Moorish-style hotels. The ornate Ponce de Leon still operates in the winter. In the one-time Alcazar, you'll find the Lightner Museum of Hobbies, one of the "musts" of your St. Augustine expedition. Since you're going to the Chamber of Commerce anyway, you may as well see this attraction first.

The Lightner Museum of Hobbies, now city-owned, contains not only the largest collection of hobbies in the world, but the most amazing. Here you'll see chandeliers that were sent to Emperor Maximilian of Mexico as a wedding gift. There are immense displays of marble statues, dolls, antiques, porcelain, chinaware, old typewriters and musical instruments, minerals, coins, stamps, aprons, umbrellas, hats, costumes, buttons, valentines, pianos, and cigar-store Indians—in fact, practically anything and everything you can think of! There is an admission charge of 70 cents for adults, and 35 cents for children. O. C. Lightner, former publisher of Hobbies magazine, who brought the collection to St. Augustine, is buried in the courtyard.

St. Augustine's prize historical attraction is the "oldest house," set in an attractive garden, with detached Spanish kitchen and an adjoining historical museum. The house, with its thick walls of coquina shell—a marine deposit of shell and sand—is an "original" building, believed to have been erected about 1599. It has housed many families—and actually existed under four flags—yet there is a pleasant, livable air about it even today. There's a 35-cent admission charge.

Another historical prize in St. Augustine—definitely another must—is the Castillo de San Marcos, the amazing old fort just off Marco Avenue and U.

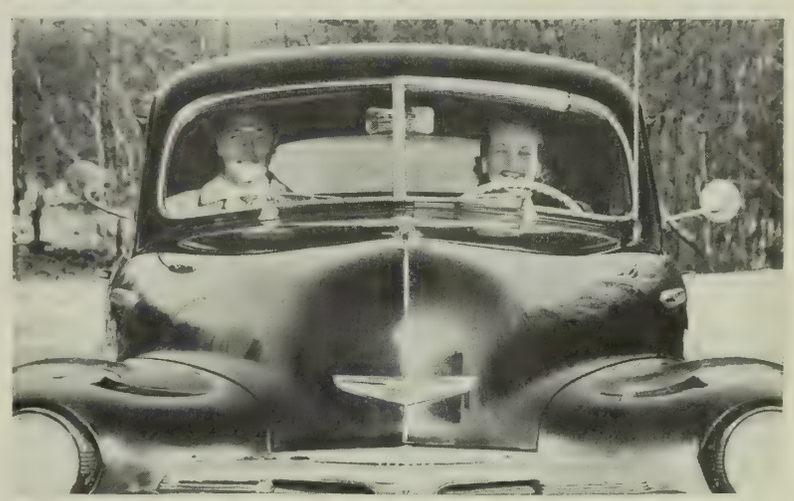
any hour of the day, but try to be there for the 11 o'clock feeding and show. (There are others at 2 and 4.) The shows begin with a frolic of leaping porpoises, which the Marine Studios people believe are smarter than dogs. Then a diver goes down into each tank to feed the dozens of species the carefully computed diet that keeps them from eating each other. You watch through glass portholes, and get a weird thrill when an enormous turtle or shark swims practically against the glass to look you right in the eye. As the diver walks slowly around the floor of the tank, the fish literally snatch their food from his basket. Admission to Marine Studios: Adults, $2.20; children, 6 to 12, $1.10.

It's a tossup whether Marine Studios or Silver Springs will be the most fascinating stop on the route for the children. In any event, you'll be ready for food by the time you pull them away from the tanks. At 11:30—about the time the first show is coming to a close—the Dolphin Restaurant opens, serving an excellent smorgasbord luncheon. Adults, $2; children, $1.

By early afternoon you should be on your way to Ormond and Daytona Beaches, where you'll find the best family vacationland in all Florida, with thousands of rental cottages along the "world's most famous beach."

About 5 miles north of Daytona Beach on A1A, you'll come to Ormond Beach, made famous by John D. Rockefeller. His winter home, "The Casements," is now a girls' school, directly across from the huge, rambling, and still dazzling old Ormond Beach Hotel.

Here, right on A1A, you'll find the most remarkable family resort in America—Ellinor Village. While much of Florida was building luxury hotels for the winter trade, the Ellinor brothers, builders of big wartime housing projects throughout the South, bought 100 acres of sand dunes and palmetto jungle just across the highway from the beach and erected a landscaped community of 650 pastel-painted brick villas, complete with everything you have at home, including space. The Village includes a block-long shopping center, with a super market, a launderette, drugstore, post office, a place that fries seafood to take out, and other shops and services. For the kids, in addition to the wide, safe beach, there are playgrounds, a day nursery, and a baby-sitting service.



The Daytona-Ormond area, more than any other section of Florida, is a year-round resort, and rates at the Village are lower than for anything comparable in the state. A one-bedroom-and-bath villa, with a sofa bed in the living room and a complete electric kitchen, will cost you $8 a day, $49.50 a week. For $12 a day, $69.50 a week, you can have two bedrooms.

There are other excellent cottage resorts all the way from Ormond Beach to several miles below the Family time in Florida

Daytona Beach pier, many right on the water. Wherever you stay, choose it for comfort and location, because you'll be in Daytona or Ormond for four days.

There are good eating places on both the peninsula and the mainland. On the latter, Morrison's Cafeteria has excellent food at moderate prices, and Johnston's Coffee Shop features seafood and apple pie—and is famous for both. At Johnston's, ask to eat in the Garden Room, a veritable greenhouse of luxuriant tropic plants.

One of the biggest kicks you'll get is driving on the beach at Daytona, where so many famous speed records have been set. At low tide, you can drive some 19 miles from Ormond Beach to the lighthouse at Port Orange, on this wide, hard-packed stretch of sand, stopping to pick up shells and oddly twisted bits of driftwood.

Third, fourth, and fifth days:

Stay put in Daytona or Ormond and swim. Enjoy the beach; you'll never have it better. Take part or all of one day, though, for a trip to Silver Springs, which the billboards call, with only a slight exaggeration really, "one of America's three great wonders"—the others being, concede the signs, the Grand Canyon and Niagara Falls.

Silver Springs is located 5½ miles east of Ocala—an easy, pleasant 85-mile drive over Highways 92, 17, and 40 from Daytona Beach. You cross the St. Johns River over a drawbridge near Astor, and drive through the Ocala National Forest and Game Refuge. Watch out for deer!

There are four main attractions at Silver Springs: the glass-bottom boat ride, adults $2.30, children $1.15, under 6, free; the "photo-sub ride," which is included in the price of the glass-bottom boat ride; the jungle cruise, adults $1.15, children 60 cents; and the Ross Allen Reptile Institute, adults $1, children 48 cents.

Nowhere else in the world will you see the underwater fairyland you see on the glass-bottom boat ride at Silver Springs as you look down through plate glass at caverns, ledges, and great spewing springs beneath clear-as-air Silver River. You will see beautiful rock formations, gorgeous colors, and enormous blue catfish gracefully weaving in and out of the rock formations.

The pilot gives you bread, you open the window at your side, hold out a piece, and fish rise to the surface and take it away from you! You see the Devil's Kitchen, springs bubbling charcoal to give the appearance of smoldering campfires! The children will love "Fisherman's Paradise," where the fish "play football."

For 40 fascinating minutes, you watch this great underwater show, and when you return to the dock, you transfer to a "photo-sub" boat and look horizontally out through the water.

And the jungle cruise! Here the children really go into action—and no wonder! An armada of mallards launches itself on the crystal-clear river. Nearby a flock of red-beaked marsh hens wades at the water's edge. A great blue heron stalks majestically into the jungle. Water turkeys are spread out on tree limbs—like nets to dry. A long row of big, orange-bellied turtles is strung on a log like beads on a chain. Two huge 'gators are sunning themselves not 10 feet away. A screaming snake hawk soars overhead to roost in the top of a towering cypress. Purple swamp-asters climb tree trunks to lose themselves in the gray moss that shrouds them. Thousands of bone-white cypress knees are reflected in the endless water mirror. The boat rounds a curve, slows to a crawl, and a family of monkeys all but leaps on board! The pilot tosses them bananas and bread, and the jumping, screeching, pushing monkeys have the children shouting with excitement.

The monkeys were imported, several years ago, but have gone native in the dense jungle. Everything else at Silver Springs is genuinely native—and natural.

At the reptile institute, you'll see rattlesnakes "milked" of their venom, see alligators, the largest crocodile in captivity, wierdly beautiful flamingos and other tropical birds, the friendly deer, and the Seminole Indian village.

You'll be fascinated with the Seminoles, the brilliant, voluminous dresses of the squaws and girls—their open-air living arrangements with the big central table on which they actually sleep.

You'll spend most of your time at Daytona on the beach. Fishing's good—in the surf, on the pier, or from a boat. There are free band concerts every night at the band shell on the peninsula. And there are other side trips you can make in an hour or two. The "Lost Mission and Olde English Sugar Mill," interesting ruins sur

A Stickley American Creation from Historic Cherry Valley...

The Glimmerglass bed . . . Otsego Lake, a few miles south of the historic Cherry Valley Turnpike, was called "Glimmerglass" by J. Fenimore Cooper. Here were enacted many scenes from Cooper's immortal Leatherstocking Tales; and here was found the original which inspired this lovely "Glimmerglass" bed. In 39, 45, 54 and 62-inch widths.

DRAWING inspiration from classic ideals of beauty, but with a sure feeling for contemporary taste and usefulness, Stickley American furniture presents a "living style" that is as suited to the home environment of today, as its forerunners were to the wilderness cabins of the pilgrim century.

It is the outgrowth of an unfolding national culture, molded by backgrounds that shaped American taste. It follows closely the painstaking construction of a handcraft age. Its wood—wild native cherry—was selected by colonial cabinetmakers for their choicest pieces. But Stickley American is far from "period" furniture. You can combine it with modern, with 18th Century, with French Provincial, or frequently with Georgian. Its beauty is timeless. Its time is now. See it at better-class furniture stores.

Introductory Cherrywood Piece: Typifies Stickley rugged construction and exclusive "Old Mansion" finish. Footstool and container of Stickley Furniture Dressing, both postpaid for only $6.50.

"A Developing American Furniture Style," a fascinating story of American furniture art. 52 pages, 49 illustrations by postpaid mail for only $1.00. L. & J. G. Stickley, Inc., Fayetteville, N. Y.

anything else. It takes only one person who cannot get along with people to upset an otherwise harmonious group. An industrious, skillful machinist is of little value to a shop if he cannot get along with the people with whom he must deal every day."

Some psychologists place ability at the top of the list as a prerequisite for a job, while others place it at the bottom. There is proof that both are right.

It's true that a youngster who can't learn elementary algebra can't hope to be an engineer. On the other hand, have you ever witnessed a high-school football game, unable to take your eyes off some hustling youngster who somehow doesn't look like he belongs in such a rough sport? If you'd ask his coach, he might tap his heart and explain: "He isn't the greatest quarterback in the world. He hasn't got the size, isn't fast, and hasn't got a rifle arm. But I can't keep him off the first team, either!"

That's the way it is with some kids and college. Whatever it is, you can't put it down on paper.

Your youngster is probably capable of doing many kinds of jobs. Why is it so important for him to find his way to one that's right for him?

His happiness, for one thing. And happiness in his work may depend largely on what he contributes. A machinist feels good when a machine leaves the shop, and he knows that the cylinders he has bored are perfect.

A surgeon feels the same way when he saves a patient's life by a skillful operation. An architect glows when he looks at a building he helped design.

Your son will never be happy as an accountant if he longs to be a forest ranger. Your daughter will never be a successful nurse when her heart really belongs to dress-designing.

How often have you heard someone remark? "Look at that farmer out there working under that hot sun. I'll bet he has been up since four o'clock this morning!" Or: "I pity Doctor So-and-so. I would not relish getting out of a warm bed on cold nights to rush across town to a hospital!"

If you'd ask the farmer, he'd probably tell you that he'd rather starve than be cooped up in a shop every day. The doctor feels that a baby's first cry is ample reward for the many years he spent studying medicine.

It has been estimated that 50 percent of those who work are unhappy in what they do. Johnny can avoid such unhappiness with your help, and with the aid of skilled counseling.

Pretend now that you are a high-school sophomore. The counselor brings you face to face with a "Purdue Peg Board." It looks like an overgrown cribbage. board, although there are four shallow bins at one end. You are given 30 seconds to put as many pegs as possible into the holes with your right hand, and then the left. Then you are asked to put the pins in the

Senseless? Machinists score highly on it; so do $25,000-a-year engineers. You ask: "Why doesn't the machinist become a great engineer?" In addition to dexterity with his hands, the engineer also shows a high aptitude in higher mathematics, among other rare talents. What about girls who take the test? Future schoolteachers fare poorly; stenographers and pianists do well.

Now the counselor tries you on the "O'Connor Wiggly Blocks." Nine sections of a rectangular block, similar to a jigsaw puzzle, are given to you to put together. If you do the trick in about 2 minutes and 45 seconds, you will get an "A" rating. The least skillful take 6 or more minutes to assemble the parts.

Suppose after testing and counseling, your youngster still can't decide just what he wants to do? Actual experience may be what he needs. Help him get a spare-time or vacation job which will give him close association with the sort of work he is considering.

If your public school system has no counselors, there are other means of helping your child find his niche. You may write to the National Vocational Guidance Association, 82 Beaver Street, New York City, for a list of reliable agencies near your home. Many good agencies charge no fees; others charge little.

You may also get information from your superintendent of schools or city librarian. The Bureau of Labor Statistics, Washington, D.C., has pamphlets on hundreds of jobs.

The pamphlets tell which jobs pay best, have most openings, and offer most future opportunity.

Don't worry if Johnny changes his mind several times on what he wants to do. His thinking now may help him avoid the fate of grownups who never find a job they like.

every high school in America. The Cleveland study showed that driver education in the high schools cut the teen-age accident rate in half. In Delaware, the State Highway Department compared the record of 1,100 drivers trained in high school with an equal number of untrained drivers of the same age. There were 274 arrests of untrained drivers as against 57 arrests of trained drivers, 341 warnings as against 101, and 251 accidents as against 56.

Similar studies made throughout the country show the same results, with only 40 percent of our high schools offering an elective course of driver education and only 20 percent including behind-the-wheel instruction. As one New York high-school teacher put it: "In spite of the fact that we have all subscribed to the doctrine that we are educating the whole child, this is the first time we have been given a practical suggestion on how to keep our whole children in one piece. This is not a play on words. Any talk of secondary education in the United States which does not include driver and safety education is sheer mummery."

Yet no state has an adequate driver-education program as an integral part of the school curriculum. Parents should start a campaign immediately, through their P.T.A.s, local newspapers, service and fraternal organizations, automobile clubs, casualty companies, and other agencies. They should press their state and local boards of education, and, above all, their state legislators, for compulsory classroom-and-behind-the-wheel education in high school.

A driver-education course including behind-the-wheel instruction requires only 28 hours of a total of approximately 2,000 hours of high-school work. Many of the training cars would be provided free by automobile clubs, dealers, and service clubs, as they are now to high schools where driver training is given. Only a few teachers in each high school would be needed. From an economic standpoint alone, accident reduction would offset the cost of the program a thousand times over, and the extra insurance charge for young drivers would doubtless be reduced or eliminated for students who passed the course.

What I have suggested that you do tonight . . . you, Father, and you, Mother, is something that you can do. It lies wholly and absolutely within your own power. You alone can do it, and you can do it at once. Your son's or daughter's life is in jeopardy. Their blood will be on your hands if, instead of doing, you deplore. If they die on the highway tonight, driving or riding 80 or 90 miles an hour, you will have killed them unless you have sat down together—Mother here, Father there—and faced the facts.

a garden convention last summer. Clair is president of the Akron Rose Society, which was having its monthly meeting this afternoon at the library. So after dinner we all went to said meeting.

You can guess what was talked about at the meeting. It was roses, with special discussion on spring pruning. Whether to whack and prune low or to spare the bush and prune high. As usual, there was no agreement on the matter.

Mulching was brought up. Somebody said he thought that good cultivation of a rose bed was better than keeping a thick mulch on it. If he did put on a mulch, as peatmoss, he worked it into the soil, rather than leaving it on top. This is my own idea about it, too.

April 3 Remember that old chappie named Job? Well, I'm surely his first cousin. On my way home, I stopped at a nursery and bought plants of two more rose varieties—Capistrano and Mission Bells—that I should have set out a year ago and never got done. Also bought three bags of plant food and sent David to haul them home in his campus jalopy.

This plant food needs to be spread around the roses. (No law against putting it on the lawn, too.) But it began to rain on the way home. Kept right on raining till dark. So nary a bit of work could be done except feed birds.

Another sad note is that one kitten, left from last fall's late batch, has learned how to climb up the pole on the rear lawn and get into the feeder which turns on top of the pole. There it was spending the afternoon, all dry and cozy. We never had a cat which mastered this trick before.

April 4 Another Job's day—and nary a lick of outdoor work. But the artisans moved in yesterday to lay the bathroom tile, and believe it or not, by today, color began to appear on the walls of our bathroom. Beautiful robin's-egg green, or whatever you'd call it, that Maggie had picked out. Color outdoors, too, for bless my soul, the fir narcissus is in bloom by the front door. I checked in my record, and it is Golden Harvest.

April 5 What a wonderful little woman is Maggie. By 8 a.m., she was busy putting some artificial flowers from year before last on her last year's spring bonnet. At 9, I learned that she just wanted to make that old hat springlike as she went downtown to buy a new one to go with her green suit. She was hurrying up, so she could ride down with me as I went to the office.

But the joyful news tonight is that when she saw the new hats, she didn't look any better in them, and they looked mighty like the old one she had just fixed up. So she came home, happy and contented, wearing the old one.

As for me, I stayed on at the office and then to the monthly dinner meeting of our men's rose club. Main topic was the merits of organic humus and food versus commercial chemical plant food. The argument was hot and heavy. After the meeting, it kept right on, getting hotter and heavier.

As for me, I agree with what Harold Bach said. The ideal way to grow roses is a combination of both. Plenty of organic matter to get soil in good condition. Then chemical plant food to do the extra feeding. Home news is that another narcissus is out—good old Sir Watkins. There is a group on each side of the front steps.

April 6 Woe is still me—and everybody else in the community. When I peeked out this a.m., there was about an inch of snow on the ground. It didn't linger long. I got out toward evening in old clothes, but the ground was just too wet to get on it anywhere—so reluctantly back indoors. [Turn to next page

The birds were ravenous today. I put out twice as much feed as usual, and it was all cleaned up. Most of the winter ones are still around, and new ones are showing up. One of the men working on the tile in the bathroom says he saw an oriole at one of the feeders on the rear lawn.

April 7 "I told you I'd have a surprise for you today," says David, as he came smiling into the living room, holding a little box

Our neighbor, a leading gladiolus fan in our community, made up a present for me of some new kinds with holes in it, which he handed to me. I knew what it was before I opened it up.

It was a duck—a baby duck. Ever since old Alexander, the duck that laid eggs, had been killed by a fox or something, David had pined for another duck. Well, here it was—cutest little critter you ever saw.

There was David, past 21 and a student in a university. There were the rest of us—all grown persons. All of us just as excited as the time 17 years ago when the boys came home with Alexander. Maggie found a carton for it and made it a cozy home. David put in a saucer of water and some of the prepared feed he had brought home with the duck from Bogan's Pet Shop.

Soon happy chirps could be heard all over the house. Scratch, the dog, came in, and he was frantic with excitement about it. He'll have to get used to it.

April 11 It took all the will power I could summon up, but I did it. Some other new roses were on hand, not mentioned above. I got out, dug 12 holes, planted 12 roses. The wind blew. There were flecks of snow in the air. I shivered and shook as I worked. My eyes filled with tears. But I got in the roses. I think this is all for this year.

But the list of roses I've set out is a honey. They are all newer sorts. Included are Mission Bells, Sutter's Gold, Fandango, First Love, Juno, Bravo, Golden Scepter, Opera, Caprice, Irene of Denmark, Tapis, Granate.

April 12 My, how the duck grows! Tail feathers are beginning to sprout.

April 16 Spring—balmy spring—dropped in today, with warm sun and whatnot. So out to the long-delayed job of pruning the roses.

It was a queer winter. Many of the bushes have hardly killed back at all and are alive, out almost to the tips. Others are dead almost to the ground. As usual, a few are just dead—period! But then, one always expects a few losses. Where the tops are alive, I think I'll prune lighter than usual and leave the live wood. I'll cut out weak canes, though, clear to the ground.

Narcissus are beginning to come out, all over the place. The President Grevy lilacs at the corners of the house have pushed along so the flower buds are distinctly visible and leaves are an inch long. The winter honeysuckle bushes under the kitchen window are covered with white bloom.

April 18 Hurray—David rallied round and, with aid of tractor power, got two beds worked up and ready to plant. In one are to go early vegetables. Other is for a new strawberry bed. Night came before I could get these chores looked after.

April 20 Finished pruning the roses. Then with the two-pronged, forged weeding hoe, I went up and down and pulled away the soil heaped up around the canes of the new ones planted last fall and earlier this spring, now beginning to grow.

Then to lawn renovation. There are a few patches in sad state. So I decided just to begin over. I spaded up these spots. I made a liberal application of peatmoss and plant food, then worked these in well with the five-pronged cultivating hoe. Leveled off with ordinary rake. Sowed grass seed—good quality, with around 60 percent bluegrass seed in it. Raked again lightly. Firmed the surface. Lots of folks waste seed by just scattering it on the surface.

April 21 Robins were scratching up where I had sowed that grass seed yesterday. Started in to pick up the tops of roses pruned off; want to get up every smidgen, haul it away, and burn it. When the boys were little, I'd make them do this job.

When about two-thirds through, I stopped this and started in to scatter plant food around each rosebush—mebbe half a big trowelful out a few inches from the base of each bush. I'm doing this before the first cultivation, so it will get worked down into the soil. I'll wait, though, until it has been rained on first. To vary things, I rested by pushing the wheel hoe through one of the iris beds for a first cultivation. Meanwhile, Maggie was out with her newly bought broom rake, raking up leaves and other debris from the back lawn.

April 22 David was out with the jolly old lawn roller, pulled along by the garden tractor. He has it rigged up so now he can ride the roller, except when making turns.

Of all the 57 things I had to get done, what do you suppose I did? You're wrong, brother! I set out

Aphids (plant lice) are those tiny insects that cover the tender stems, buds and young leaves of plants. There are many varieties of aphids...some are green, others are black, brown, pink or yellow. Some have wings, others cannot fly.

Aphids attack and damage almost all kinds of plants. They thrust their sharp beaks into the plant, deforming it, sucking its vitality. And they transmit numerous plant diseases in much the same way that mosquitoes carry malaria. A heavy infestation of aphids will destroy the beauty and yield of your garden.

BLACK LEAF 40® kills aphids quickly and efficiently—by contact and by fumes. It's economical—one teaspoonful makes two quarts of spray. Also kills leafhoppers, most thrips and other soft-bodied sucking insects. Black Leaf 40 is selective—it spares friendly insects that help in pest control...also spares bees. Never stains or burns and leaves no objectionable residue on foliage or bloom.

Sold at drug, seed, hardware and garden supply stores. Directions in package.

the new strawberry bed. First I used the wheel hoe to crisscross it with lines, or rows, 48 inches apart, and other lines 24 inches apart. Then by planting at the intersection of the lines, my rows were straight both ways. I dug stocky new plants from the old bed. I set out two rows each of Sparkle and Temple, two new disease-resistant varieties, and one row of Fairfax. I ended up with a row of the new everbearer, June Rockhill, which had come by mail.

Big news is that what should I spy but blooms on the narcissus at yon end of the new row planted last fall. I fairly whooped and hollered as I hurried there, for I knew it was Fortune. This is one of the greats of all time. It used to be so gosh-blamed high, but last fall I put out my first. Two other new ones now open are Titanic and a magnificient white, Mount Hood.

April 24 "Oh-ho," I shouted, as I walked toward my new narcissus. Something new was in bloom, so beautiful it fairly brought a lump into my old throat. Maggie heard me from the other side of the bushes, and she was right there in a minute, too.

It was the first one of the new John Evelyn hybrids to bloom. I had planted a whole set of these last fall. This is Majarda, of creamy white and deep yellow color. It is about twice the size of the parent John Evelyn.

David brought out our new duck and turned it loose on the rear lawn. Scratch barked furiously. The mama pussies twitched their tails and began to stalk ominously. The duck ran. It got under the flowering quince hedge and under the lilacs and under the Regal privet, back and forth. David and I together couldn't catch the critter. Finally I got a long, thin board and scared it from one side, so David grabbed it on the other.

April 25 Rain fell in torrents. Our little peach tree opened forth its merry bloom.

April 26 In olden days I'd have been tried for heresy for what we did to the rose bed today. Where it was fairly free of weeds, Donald used the garden tractor with sharp, narrow blades and dug down deeply into the soil. Other places there was a lot of chickweed. I just spaded it under. I don't force the spade clear, straight down, but push it a bit on an angle and not too deep. This turns the weeds under entirely, also turns under the plant food.

Now come around in June and just see how thrifty these bushes will be from such rude treatment. Too many folks coddle their roses—treat 'em as though they were some exotic plant. My motto is "A rose is a rose is a bush," and it does best when treated as a bush, with no foolish fiddle-faddle.

April 27 This family went forth to sowing and planting of vegetables. First, with the little hopper on wheels, I gave the space a liberal sprinkling of plant food. David followed after with the garden tractor and worked this into the surface.

Beginning at the east end, I put in two rows of early-blooming sweetpeas—three new varieties of the Cuthbertson strain. Next would come two rows of early potatoes, 13 hills to a row. I planted one row, then called on Donald to take over. He did—and planted 'em in my second row of sweetpeas, while my back was turned. We filled up the bed with garden peas, onion sets, leaf lettuce, carrots, beets—with radishes planted with these two latter—spinach, a dozen cabbage plants; and we left space for bush beans later.

April 28 Forgot to mention that last evening as I sat resting my weary bones after supper, the front doorbell rang. And bless my soul—a neighbor stood there with a package in his hand. He is the leading glad fan in our community and grows all the new varieties. He had made up a little present for me of some surplus he had of the new Dutch and Australian varieties that have been coming on the market. What a happy gift.

April 30 Well I'll be jumped-up and jodaddled—as folks used to say down in Slabhollow where I was brought up. Here it is the end of the month, and I haven't more than got started. There hasn't been one really suitable day this whole spring for working in the ground.

News notes: American Primrose Society holds its national show April 7-8 at the Information Center in Portland, Oregon. New strains of miniatures, giants, Asiatics, Julianas, and Rare Green Auriculas will be on display.

Magnolias . . .

There are reddish and purple forms, but the Saucer Magnolia that is most popular is the rosy-pink. The flowers average four to six inches across. This is cataloged as Magnolia soulangeana.

The snowy white Star Magnolia, M. stellata, opens in the latitude of New York as much as three to four weeks earlier, also on still-leafless branches.

All magnolias take careful planting, because their roots are large and fleshy and cannot be sacrificed. Plant in spring. Buy nursery-grown plants. Handle so the huge flower buds will not be bruised or broken—and you may even see your first flowers within a few weeks after planting.

Set in full sun or a position only lightly shaded by trees. Make certain your magnolias do not suffer for water, either spring or summer.

Save yourself work, dollars, and time—and even increase beauty in your garden—with these ideas

Double feature. Mark rows in your garden at planting time with your youngster's wagon. Stretch cord between two stakes, and pull the wagon so the wheels on one side run straight along the cord. Run wheels in the second row to make a straight third row, and so on. Load the wagon with your supplies before you start. You can control depth of your furrows by adding or removing weight

Backsaver. Your lawn mower can help you move heavy sacks or other objects during your spring garden activities. Stand the sack upright, and back the roller part of the mower to the base of sack. Hold the handle with one hand and place your foot against the mower. Hold the top of the sack with your other hand and push handle down to get weight on wheels

Measure marker. You can make this planting guide in 10 minutes for about 20 cents. You will need three laths and three bolts with wing nuts. One bolt holds two laths together at the top; two bolts and third lath hold legs apart. Point the two "feet" so they sink easily into the soil. Bore holes in crosspiece for handy adjustment to 12, 18, 24, 30, and 36 inches. You can use the marker to set off distances between your rows or plants

Bug catch. Cut potatoes in half and hollow them out. Place cut side down around your seedbed when seedlings come up. Lift them each morning and see concentration of pill bugs. Scrape into a can; cover with kerosene children will be helped to get over any "mike fright" they might have, and it will tend to make them less timid about public speaking in later years. Then, too, you can play back the recordings so the children can hear how their own voices sound. This technique is widely used in speech classes so students can actually hear their own speech faults and work toward correcting them. Hearing your own voice played back in this manner for the first time is often a startling experience for an adult, but children take it with amusement and delight. And they are very critical of themselves, too. One 7-year-old neighbor boy commented about his voice, "I sure sounded silly! Like I had mush in my mouth!"

You'll find that the records will become favorites of your children for pleasure and pastime playing, too. On rainy days our two youngsters play and play again the recording of a favorite aunt reading "The Story of Babar" to them, or one my parents made on a visit—an informal recording full of jokes, riddles, and nonsense stories.

Craig had the mumps recently, right at a time we had planned a weekend trip to visit his grandparents. "I know what!" Craig suggested, mastering his disappointment when told the trip had to be called off. "If we can't be with Nana and Granddad, let's play their record!"

For visits from friends and relatives, for holidays or birthdays, or just so you can keep the sound of toddler Janie reciting "Pat-a-Cake" or 6-year-old cowboy Roger singing "Home on the Range," you'll find lasting joy and satisfaction if you put it on a record!

Rhododendrons . . .

Rhododendron bushes are probably handsomest when kept to heights between 6 and 10 feet, though plants of the same kinds may soar to over 30 feet in the wild.

Rhododendrons have very fine, almost hairlike, roots and need a porous, open soil that rates acid when tested. If you start with moderately heavy clay, use one shovel of peatmoss or well-rotted leafmold for each shovel of original soil you put back when preparing the bed. Have six inches of this prepared soil below and at least four inches above the root balls.

Set your new plants as early in the spring as possible. Water the soil deeply once a week.

Shade from the hottest summer sun and the blasts of the coldest winter winds are necessary in the Midwest where humidity is lower than in areas where rhododendrons are native. A permanent mulch of coarse peatmoss or partially decayed oak leaves laid down six to eight inches deep is good growth insurance.

Consult local growers for advice on which of the several thousand kinds of cultivated rhododendrons grow best in your locality.

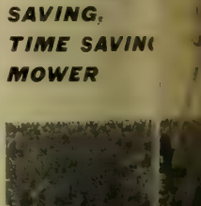
Azaleas . . .

The Flame Azalea blooms some three weeks later than the Torch Azalea and does well in partially shaded spots. The foliage takes on rich orange shadings in the fall.

Usually cataloged as Azalea mollis hybrids is a widely satisfactory group that runs the gamut in color from pure sunshiny yellow, through orange and buff, to an apricot-pink. The flowers are large, and the branches are crowded with them. The bushes may spread to five feet and be equally tall. This group is the most likely to succeed where the soil is neither acid nor strongly alkaline.



Belonging as they do to the rhododendron family, these azaleas do best in a soil forked deeply and made loose with liberal additions of peatmoss, sand, and leafmold. A permanent mulch helps keep the soil from compacting.

The pink native azaleas of the Appalachians, and those from the western side of the Pacific coastal range, are less showy. The Ghent, Kurume, and Indian groups are less hardy than those recommended, but wonderful garden plants for areas south of Pennsylvania. Rating in winter-hardiness with these last three groups are the compact, dwarf-growing Hinodegiri—brightest red, Coral Bells—shell pink and double, Prudence—white, and Pink Pearl—a deep pink double.

You'll be hungry by the time you reach Fort Myers. The Gondola Inn on the Caloosahatchee River at First Street, is an interesting and colorful place for lunch. They serve seafood dinners, chicken and steak, or just salad and sandwiches if you want a snack.

Fort Myers has beautiful royal palms, and a picturesque location on the wide Caloosahatchee, that empties into Charlotte Harbor—a popular fishing spot you'll cross at Punta Gorda on Highway 41.

You should try to reach Sarasota in time for a visit to Lido Beach, where the sand is sugar white, and the gulf deep turquoise blue. A good place for a swim, if you have time. The "Pioneer" on North Broadway, one of the newer, more luxurious courts in Sarasota, is operated by "The Fischers," for many years featured giants with Ringling Brothers Circus! Imagine renting rooms from a gentleman giant—and having a lady giant make your bed! It will cost you $8 a night for two big, beautifully furnished, fan-cooled rooms and bath. Bickford Lodge on North Broadway is also good, as is the Sarasota Hotel at Main and Palm. Your best food bet in the summer in Sarasota is Morrison's Cafeteria for lunch and dinner—and one of the downtown coffee shops for breakfast.

Ninth day:

The John and Mable Ringling Museum of Art opens at 9 a.m., and is very much worth visiting. Admission is 50 cents, children under 12, free. The Sarasota Jungle Gardens are also attractive. Sarasota is the home of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus, but it will be out on the road during the summer.

Your next stop will be Tampa, 50 miles of easy driving from Sarasota, over Highway 541. You should reach it well before noon. In the afternoon, you can make a circle trip to Cypress Gardens and Bok Tower, a total distance of 120 miles, and return to Tampa for dinner at one of the Spanish restaurants in Ybor City. Ybor is the most interesting section of Tampa, and the world's cigarmaking capital. Take Highway 92 to Lakeland, and there ask at a service station for the road to Winter Haven. It's a side road, but good, and will save you several miles. From Winter Haven, you take U. S. 27 to Cypress Gardens. You should arrive in time for the 2 o'clock show, even if you stop for a snack en route.

You pay $1.25 admission to Cypress Gardens, children 12 to 17, 30 cents, children under 12, free. This covers everything but the electric boat rides, and refreshments on the beautiful terrace. This is Florida's most photographed attraction—famous for movie settings, gorgeous flowers, beautiful girls in ante-bellum costumes, and water ski shows. The electric boat ride ends in a natural jungle waterway that empties into Lake Eloise. The restaurant serves sandwiches and shortcake as well as complete luncheons. Prices are moderate.

After the show, which takes about an hour, you will want to stroll through the gardens, or take the boat ride. And you still have time to see Bok Tower and Sanctuary, only a few miles east of Cypress Gardens. The turn-off to Bok Tower is marked, and is practically at the entrance to Cypress Gardens. Ask the parking-lot attendant if you are in doubt about the way to go. The roads in this section wind through citrus groves, up and over gentle hills, and are pleasant traveling. There are no concerts at Bok Tower in the summer, but the grounds are lovely, and the tower with its reflecting pool has a medieval look. Admission to the Sanctuary is 25 cents.

From Bok Tower you drive into Lake Wales on Highway 17, there turn onto 60, which takes you back to Tampa. There are motor courts in the outskirts of Tampa, and the Tampa Terrace Hotel offers economical summer rates. If you have returned to Tampa early enough, you may want to drive on over to St. Petersburg and stay at one of the courts or hotels near the beach. There are summer rates everywhere, so you won't have to worry about your budget.

Tenth day:

It's 196 miles from Tampa to Jacksonville, but if you start from Tampa, you will have to add to that the mileage you get from driving through lovely St. Petersburg, and Clearwater, and up to Tarpon Springs on Highway 19. Stop for a quick look at the sponge fishing boats and the market at Tarpon Springs, then continue on 19 to Weekiwachee Springs. At Weekiwachee Springs, you see an underwater show, complete with ballet dancers! Admission, $1.55; children under 12, 78 cents. And you can swim at Weekiwachee Springs if you have time for a final Florida dip. There is a coffee shop at Weekiwachee Springs—and picnic tables.

Take Highway 50 to Brooksville, where you again pick up 41 for Williston and Raleigh. At Raleigh turn onto 331 for Jacksonville, and you're on your way home!

ammonia. Rinse with clear water before repainting.

In hard-to-get-at spots that cannot be scrubbed, brush on solution of ½ ounce bichloride of mercury in 1 gallon water. Mix in wooden or enameled bucket, not galvanized pail. Paint can be applied after the latter solution dries; no rinsing is necessary.

To prevent recurrences of mildew, add mildew retardant to new paint.

Knots bleeding through paint

Cover knots with thin coat of shellac, aluminum paint, or colorless synthetic-resin sealer. Apply first two after priming coat of paint is on. With synthetic sealer, scrape paint from knot and apply sealer to bare wood before repainting.

Creosote stain bleeding through paint

Prime stained surface with aluminum paint before applying finish coat of paint. Do not use creosote stain on surfaces you may eventually paint. Use water stain instead.

Copper stains on paint

Sand surface thoroughly and clean with turpentine. Refinish with pure lead and oil paint.

Rust on iron

Remove all rust with emery paper or steel wool dipped in turpentine. Or use prepared rust solvent. Prime with red-lead paint (12 parts red-lead paste, 10 parts linseed oil, 1 part turpentine, 1 part dryer). Let dry thoroughly, then apply finish coat of paint.

Green oxide on copper

Rub with very fine steel wool, then buff with soft cloth or, better still, a buffing machine. Apply coat of clear lacquer to prevent further oxidizing.

Stains on porcelain fixtures

Do not use abrasives or abrasive scouring powders; minute scratches collect dirt. Wash with household ammonia and water, or a solution of 3 tablespoons household bleach to 1 quart water.

Stains on ceramic tile

Wash with solution made of 3 tablespoons household bleach to 1 quart water. If stain persists, rub it with cloth dampened in solution of 1 part hydrochloric acid to 10 parts water. Wear rubber gloves. Avoid getting acid in mortar joints. Rinse thoroughly with clear water.

apartment house, you may want a different executor—one with the special skill and experience you now need. So you change your will. A substantial rise or drop in the size of your estate may necessitate a different will. If you suddenly become rich, your family can live on income and wait to receive legacies; on the other hand, a violent shrinkage of your assets makes it more important than ever that young children be protected by a suitable will. In many ways, a man of small means needs a good will even more than a plutocrat, one reason being that the shrinkage of a small estate may be a far more serious matter to survivors.

Since divorce doesn't always make a will invalid, the termination of a marriage, a separation, or mere estrangement may be a reason for making a new will. Incidentally, any woman marrying a divorced man has the right to know that his will is going to function to their mutual satisfaction if he dies.

Sit down and review all the changes that have come into your life since you made that last will. Some circumstance I haven't mentioned at all may raise a more serious reason for making a new will when you look it straight in the face.

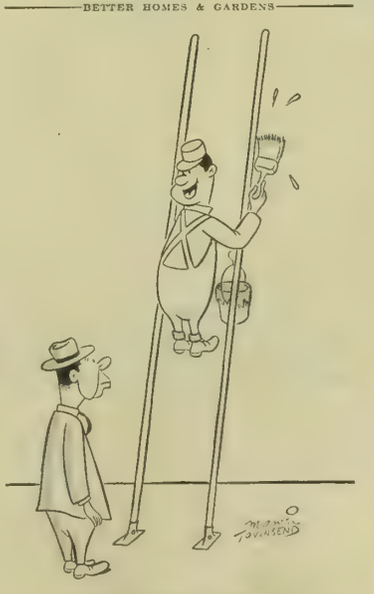
Perhaps a codicil, one of those little papers drawn to alter an old will in some respect, will take care of it. But if you're contemplating really important changes, a new will is better and only a little more expensive.

Maybe you've procrastinated because of inflated notions about lawyers' fees. Unless you have a large, diversified estate, your will isn't likely to cost more than from $15 to $50. When you remember the time, money, and heartaches this paper may save, that's chicken feed!

Preparing for your visit to an attorney stirs you up to planning better. You may, like most men, discover that you have underestimated the size of your estate, which, remember, includes personal property like cameras, jewelry, heirlooms, clothing. Real property like a home and stocks and bonds can be worth much more than when you bought them. Often a man fails to include his life insurance.

He may forget that the old specific exemptions of $40,000 of life insurance plus $40,000 of other property ($80,000 total) was replaced late in 1942 by a total over-all exemption of $60,000 of all kinds of assets, insurance included. Depending upon the size of your estate and the disposition of its assets, this change may have an important bearing on planning your affairs to your best advantage.

Anyway, before planning your will, make a complete, up-to-the-minute list of all your assets and tote up their true present value. Don't go to a lawyer with mental reservations. You can't withhold certain facts about your worth and expect him to draw up the best possible will or give sound counsel about minimizing taxes. If you're in doubt about a good lawyer, ask friends, business associates, or your bank.



When a lawyer uses legal terms you don't understand, gulp down your vanity and make him explain. But don't expect your will to be informal chitchat; those fancy words are needed to convey precise meanings which prevent litigation and misunderstanding.

Making your will reminds you of the importance of having all your valuables and records immediately available to your executor. Your will can be left with your attorney or put in your safe-deposit box where it's protected against fire, loss, or rough handling by someone who doesn't like it! Your executor should know just how to lay hands on it, also on stocks, bonds, deeds to real estate, mortgage papers, partnership papers, and other documents proving the existence of assets. Marriage and birth certificates may be important. A record of all relatives may be helpful to your executor if any of them might become your heirs.

In itemizing your assets, put down the original cost of each and attach sales slips covering the purchase. All information needed for income tax purposes should be easy to find, together with evidence of payment of taxes in recent years. The beneficiaries of your life insurance should be able to get your policies immediately so payments can begin without delay, so a memo to your family can tell them where the policies are and give any other information about your affairs which will make their lot easier.

If you're like most men, you're moving heaven and earth to pile up as much security as you can for your family. Now why not be the exceptional man who has a really well-planned will that's up to date and completes the job?

Groundcovers

By Alice L. Dust

Have you considered what groundcovers can do to improve the looks of "difficult" places around your home? Dependable, inexpensive, and easily [illegible] offer a choice of attractive substitutes for grass on steep banks and in hard-to-mow corners. Use them on terraces to help eliminate need for a retaining wall. Try them in shady areas under pine trees or root-filled soil under [illegible] green color where there was only bare earth.

Periwinkle, Vinca minor, for example, [illegible] season; its shiny, evergreen leaves retain their color even when cast in sun or shade.

From clumps planted 6 inches to a foot apart, periwinkle spreads quickly. Once established—in 2 to 3 years—it forms a solid, weedless carpet 6 to 10 inches high, with blue flowers in spring. Only care needed is an occasional trimming of edges to keep it in bounds.

Here are other groundcovers—including evergreen, deciduous, woody, and herbaceous kinds—all suitable for shady areas and soil-tolerant. Check their special uses to fit the landscape needs of your home:

Groundcovers to grow in deep shade

Baby Wintercreeper, Euonymus fortunei minimus, grows 6 inches high. Slow-growing evergreen with leaves only ½ inch long. Good groundcover for small areas around the base of a tree.

Baltic ivy—hardiest of the English ivies—is used here to soften this brick walk. It provides an eye-pleasing contrast to hard-to-mow grass. A woody vine, Baltic ivy remains green all winter, is adapted to the heavy shade of a north wall.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Kline of Madison, [illegible] tractive spot out of this difficult area (right) by planting on the north side of the house in competition with the tree, this thick carpet also stays shiny and green [illegible] n up"

mpossible places

Ajuga reptans, 6-12 inches. Rapid-growing, potential for edging or on steep banks with sprout.

Liriope muscari, 1-2 feet. Evergreen. Handsome on slopes or with broadleaf evergreens.

Sedum sebia quinata, 6-12 inches. Low-growing, vine spreads rapidly over large banks.

Hedera helix, Nepeta hederacea, 3-6 inches. Quickly covers ground. Shallow-rooted trees. [Turn to next page

Creeping Juniper is easier to maintain than grass and makes an attractive cover on this gravelly bank along a concrete terrace. Year 'round. Juniper grows well in full sunlight. It grows slowly and usually grows a little more than a foot in height

The attention-getting groundcover of violets in light shade above solved a planting problem at the Forrest Geneva home in Des Moines, Iowa. A few violets spaced strategically along the top of the slope soon seeded themselves so the plants now completely cover the bank Japanese Spurge, Pachysandra terminalis, 8-14 inches. Good evergreen perennial under trees and on shady terraces and slopes. Tailors a front yard, dresses up the foreground of evergreen plantings.

Moneywort, Lysimachia nummularia, 1-3 inches. Evergreen perennial good under trees, on steep banks with northeast exposure. Needs moist soil, plenty of room.

Groundcovers for partial shade

Bishops-weed, Aegopodium podograria, 6-10 inches. Perennial for edging, good to fill hard-to-reach spots in flower borders.

Canada Violet, Viola canadensis, 7-10 inches. Herbaceous perennial attractive under a May-flowering tree.

Creeping Speedwell, Veronica repens, 1-2 inches. Herbaceous perennial for summer color on rock-garden slopes or to fill cracks between paving stones.

Jacobs-ladder, Polemonium caeruleum, 9-14 inches. Perennial for combination with late spring bulbs under dogwoods.

Lily-of-the-valley, Convallaria majalis, 8-12 inches. Fragrant herbaceous perennial for under shrubs or near a path or window.

Matrimonyvine, Lycium halimifolium, 4-10 feet. Dense growing, this plant is really a prostrate, rambling shrub; especially good in poor soil on banks or along a stone wall.

Sweetautumn Clematis, Clematis paniculata, 6-12 feet. Easy to grow and vigorous vine, with dense, lustrous leaves. Good on banks and over rocks.

Groundcovers for sun or light shade

Creeping Thyme, Thymus serpyllus, 1-6 inches. Semievergreen perennial adapted for rock gardens or between stones.

Confederate Violet, Papilionacea priceana, 4-6 inches. Hardy perennial which seeds itself rapidly. Good for open, unmowed areas.

Hayscented Fern, Dennstaedtis punctilobula, 1-2 feet. Good groundcover for dry banks, or to grow up through plants of Japanese Spurge.

Moss Pink, Phlox sublata, 4-9 inches. Evergreen perennial best on sunny, well-drained slopes.

Red Two-row Stonecrop, Sedum spurium, 2-5 inches. Semievergreen perennial for quick cover in poor, sandy soil if stems are broken up and sown like seed.

...and I thought a new hat did wonders for a woman!

"What a difference this new Ruberoid roof makes. It does more for me than my new spring hat . . . and I can't wait to hear what the neighbors'll say."

"Yeah, honey, there's nothing like a new chapeau for the old chateau . . . but don't compare it to that bird's nest you call a hat! This roof was a real inspiration. See how those Ruberoid Tite-On shingles lock together . . . they practically form a one-piece roof . . . we'll never have to worry again about winter winds taking the roof from over our heads."

"And look at that wide overlap . . . that means a lot of extra insulation, not to mention the fact that they were laid right over the old roof. It cost so little I wonder why we didn't do it sooner?"

"Maybe we never would have, dear, if I hadn't sent in that little coupon to The Ruberoid Co."

"Okay, for once I'll admit that not all the brains are on my side of the family."

Why don't you, too, fill out the coupon below? Find out for yourself how Ruberoid Tite-Ons, the patented interlocking, wind-defying shingle, can bring you new roof beauty in basket-weave design and color blends, plus fire-resistant safety, wind protection and economy.

Placing brick. Line buttered brick up with cord. Shove into mortar and against last brick. Tap with trowel if necessary, then cut off excess mortar. Once brick is placed, don't attempt to shift it. If bond is broken, crack results. Instead remove brick, re-lay in new mortar

Closure brick. In placing a closure brick, dab mortar on ends of bricks in place, and on both ends of the closure brick. Then lay last brick without shifting those on the sides

Between tiers. Fill joint between tiers by slushing in soupy mortar. However, lay bricks in mortar that extends from front to back of wall, so the space is only one brick deep

Header course. In a two-tiered wall, a header course (bricks laid crossways) is used every fifth, sixth, or seventh row. This serves to tie stretcher bricks together. Spread a good mortar bed. Butter side of header brick; push it into place until the mortar oozes out

How to make the most of your Doorway

Give it more interest. It's easy when your door casing has nice detail. Maybe you have fluted pilasters, an inverted scroll, or lovely denture molding? Then why not paint it the same color as your door and in a contrasting color to the house?

And for beauty's sake, paint it with Kyanize Super-Service Trim Paints. If you've never used Kyanize, you're in for a pleasant surprise, for Kyanize paints flow on easily and dry without brush marks.

Yes, you're sure of a perfect job when you use any one of the Kyanize Self-Smoothing Paints.

① If your house is a light color, paint your door in one of the Kyanize Super-Service Trim Colors.

② Or give it more drama by painting the casing in the same color.

③ If your house is Suburban Red, Baronial Brown or some other dark color, paint the door in one of the Kyanize Super-Service light colors.

④ Now, see how much more friendly your doorway becomes when you make it seem larger by painting the door and the casing to match. (For a superlative gloss white, use Kyanize Blue Label White Enamel.)

Or why not make your casing frame the door. Just paint the door the same color as the house. Then frame it in one of the Kyanize Self-Smoothing Super-Service light colors.

Small items. Nails and screws call for a storage setup to keep materials separated, dust-free, dry, and visible for ready selection or inventory. This trick, of attaching jar lids to the underside of a shelf, does all of those things

Lumber storage. Careful racking of lumber will forestall costly warping. Never stack lumber directly on basement floor. Cleats like these allow drying ventilation beneath bottom boards. Or hang square "U's" from overhead joists

Scraps. Store usable lumber scraps in salvaged nail kegs, bushel baskets, or wire trash-burners. Oil rags and paint rags, however, belong in the covered metal container for fire safety; there is a danger of spontaneous combustion

The MAN NEXT DOOR

On April first, I always kick at hats and snatch at shabby wallets on the sidewalk. Having been a tireless April-fooler of adults when a boy, I deem it my grown-up duty to be as cooperative as they were.

This weather makes me want to be a farmer, but I'm waiting until animals that are good to eat are as easy to care for as our cat.

Suddenly the living-room fireplace has lost its coziness, and that pile of stone that stood a snow- and mud-splashed eyesore through the winter has somehow become a fine outdoor barbecue.

"We are all in the same boat," Hal Rutgers said as we stopped to read a bulletin outside the newspaper office. "Only some are rowing and some are rocking."

If spanking were done only by those parents who "believe" in it, not many kids would feel a parent's palm. It's those of us who don't believe in it, but find ourselves swinging before we can think of an alternative, who really keep the custom alive.

When I was a boy, I told my son, I was glad to help with the family chores. "Sure," he replied. "I'd be glad too if my chore was to feed my horse."

We're not quite sure how to redecorate little sister's room—whether to use plain paint that will be marked up, or figured wallpaper that will be peeled off.

If we ever have another son, I don't think I'll care whether he's athletic, brilliant, or even polite. All I'll hope for is a boy who can walk past a piece of furniture without bumping into it.

Nightly thought at 10:30—when we build our dream house, there's going to be a drinking fountain in each of the children's bedrooms!

Although the lady down the block works harder at being a woman of the world than at being a housewife, nothing pleases her quite so much as a compliment on her cooking.

My banker wonders if the reason his mother's pies were so much better than his wife's is that they filled a boy's, and not a tired businessman's stomach.

The fear of being laughed at has kept a lot of men from being fools—or geniuses.

Arms and Radar Leader. The nation's largest producer of gun directors, radar equipment, radio and telephones for military use during the last war was the Western Electric Company, manufacturing and supply unit of the Bell System. Western Electric and Bell Laboratories completed over 1200 military projects. They are again working on special defense assignments.

Value of Growth. Times of national emergency emphasize the value of a nationwide telephone system big enough and good enough to meet the needs of its people, its armed forces, and its industries.

By Robert West Howard and Phil Amundson

Right now—with an extension cord and a few properly placed light bulbs turned on for an hour or so in the middle of the night—you can cause or hold back bloom of some of your flowers and control growth of other plants, inside or out in your garden.

Even though little information on how specific plants react to specific amounts of light is now available for general use in your garden, researchers agree that applications of artificial light can play an important part in future gardening.

Professional nurserymen have developed their own light tables for hothouse production of flowers and vegetables. for years have forced bloom of chrysanthemums months in advance of normal season by darkening or exposing plants to light at intervals.

A major orchid producer has had "phenomenal success in experimentally growing orchids under artificial lights." He agrees with government and other scientists that a table giving light needs for each garden plant and variety, during leaf, flower, and fruiting stages, as evolved in experiments in the months and years ahead, may become standard information on seed packets and with sale of bulbs.

"Application of artificial light can become as important as water and fertilizers for some, but not all, garden crops," according to Dr. H. A. Borthwick, senior plant physiologist of the U.S.D.A. plant industry station at Beltsville, Maryland.

"Moreover," Doctor Borthwick adds, "ordinary incandescent-filament bulbs will do an effective job for the average garden or hotbed. Power costs will be small: most plants will require less than an hour of artificial light per day, if it is spaced properly after an interval of darkness."

As experiments proceed, plants are being classified according to their flowering response to daylight. Plants which normally flower in late spring or early summer, such as the China-aster, are called long-day plants. Such plants can be induced to blossom earlier than normally, some in winter, by simulating the long day with light.

Conversely, the blooming c plants, which normally blossom ening days of fall and early wi the perennial chrysanthemum, back by lengthening the hours c third class of plants is not sensit of day.

Thus began a painstaking cataloging of short-day and long-day plants, and varieties.

Since 1945, scientists have found that light allocates and directs growth of the various plant parts. This became increasingly obvious as the startling "trigger effect" of short lighting periods in the middle of the night unfolded in university and federal laboratories. Barley plants, limited to a 12-hour day, won't flower. But one minute of artificial light turned on the plants at the end of the sixth hour of darkness creates the unexplained "trigger effect" and causes the barley to bloom.

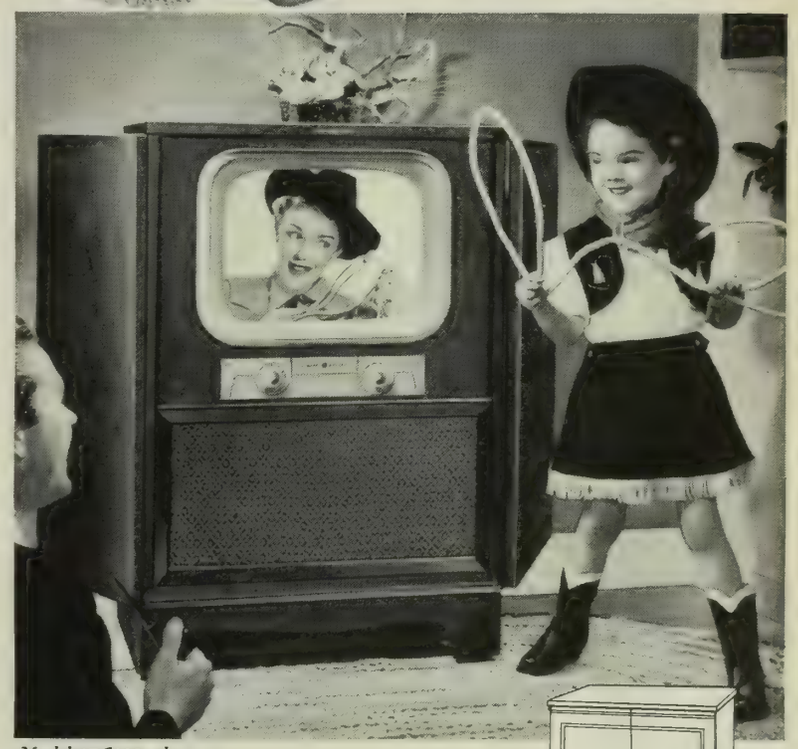
Similar responses were observed in onions.

"Light," Doctor Borthwick explains, "creates the bulbing stimulus in onions during the long-day periods of midsummer. If light in your garden isn't intense enough, artificial lighting will supply the stimulus. And five minutes of light late at night seems to be as effective as an additional hour of floodlighting at dusk.

This effect works as well to prevent flowering in soybeans."

This spring, Doctor Borthwick and his associates are eagerly at work on an important new clue to the intricate light mechanism within the leaf, that controls flowering and phases of plant development.

In 1948, they tentatively concluded that formation of flower buds is controlled by "an active substance" produced in the leaves of the plant. This substance, or an intermediate, in the course of its production is subject to destruction by light within the leaf. The active substance must reach an adequate concentration to cause flower buds to form but stops the action at relatively higher concentrations.



Succeeding experiments have indicated that a blue pigment, closely related to the pigments of bile, absorbs light and transfers the energy of the absorbed light to some chemical reaction, a possible product of which controls flowering. It is effective in both long-day and short-day plants, acting as the catalyst that sets into motion the substance (still to be identified) that stimulates flowering.

Thus, with the basic law of light's unique importance to the garden established, the doors are open for greater benefits from the energies leashed in the genes of every seed. More adventurous gardeners can begin experiments this year with no more than an extension cord and a few light bulbs. Or the reverse—black, lightproof tent over last year's poinsettia from 4 p.m. to 8 a.m., daily, beginning October 1 and ending when the plant blooms.

Tips for successful wallpapering

- Before taking wallpaper home, check run numbers on selvage of each roll. If they are all the same, you can be sure pattern will match perfectly.
- Adding ½ cup of glue size to 1 gallon of paste gives you a mix that really holds tight. It's excellent for a slick, hard-surfaced wall or for very heavy papers.
- Use a thicker paste if paper does not slide easily on wall. Use a thinner paste for ceiling paper, so weight doesn't cause tearing of paper.
- Stretch a string across top of paste bucket. It's handy to wipe loaded brush on, and to lay brush across.
- Wallpapering can be an efficient team operation. Let your wife paste while you hang.
- To take curl out of paper before cutting it, pull it down over edge of cutting table.
- Keep your hands clean. Wipe them off every time you handle paste brush or pasted paper.

HOW TO BRIGHTEN A BOOK . . . AND A BOY!

The way to improve Jimmy's marks, we'd ways figured, was to keep his nose to the grindstone. And try not to grumble too loudly when we had to place ours there, too—to help him find a state capital that kept getting lost or check a column of figures that wouldn't add.

"And then we made a great discovery: a boy doesn't study with his nose—he uses his eyes!

"When we discovered Light Conditioning we found we could not only brighten Jimmy's books, but Jimmy, too—by reducing eyestrain, fatigue and distraction."

Light Conditioning tells you exactly what size and type of bulbs to use in your lamps and fixtures, and how to locate them to get the right light for every seeing task.

And it does it all in 22 easy-to-follow recipes contained in a new General Electric booklet, "See Your Home in a New Light".

LOWER LEFT—Table lamp with diffusing bowl. Either 50-100-150-watt 3-lite bulb, or 150-watt bulb.

LOWER CENTER—Same as lower left, with lamps on end tables next to davenport.

LOWER RIGHT—Pin-up lamp on wall over bed, with 50-100-150-watt three-lite bulb, 30" from bottom of shade to top of mattress.

For best results from General Electric Light Conditioning, use General Electric lamp bulbs.

"That woman is showing a lot of good sense"

Yes, today people are watching the way new houses are being built. They've learned that some of the newer building materials can make a real difference in the strength and comfort of a house. One of these materials is Armstrong's Temlok® Sheathing.

Armstrong's Temlok is an extra-strong building material that makes the walls of a house more rigid and solid, yet usually costs less to use than conventional sheathing. That's partly because the big Temlok boards—made of tough wood fibers—are so quickly applied. The average house can be sheathed with Temlok in eight hours, which means greatly reduced labor costs. In addition, there is little or no waste of material.

Savings don't stop with construction. Besides giving a house extra strength, Temlok helps to keep out cold in winter. Fuel bills are greatly reduced. Moisture resistance is important, too, when construction delays leave the sheathing exposed longer than usual. Each fiber of Temlok is waterproofed with an asphalt film.

You'll find it pays to know about materials like Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing before your house plans are drawn. Make it a point to ask your lumber dealer or builder for full details.

Burry good. When you drill a hole in metal, you get an annoying burr on the underside. You can file it off—but you're likely to scratch the metal. Instead, trim the burr neatly-off with a countersink bit. Clamp it in a hand brace. Don't apply much pressure, or you'll enlarge the hole.

By Marian Castle

When you find fault these days with modern houses, you run the risk of being relegated to the cupola and gingerbread period. But modern houses, with all their undeniable virtues, seem to have been planned for extroverts. I want to make a plaintive plea for the rest of us who have become so unfashionable.

I've just returned from house-hunting. I looked at houses of all ages: square, bay-windowed late Taft; tile-and-stucco early Coolidge; flat-roofed, contemporary chicken-house Truman. And I must admit I like a lot of the traits of these last. For one thing, they're easy to keep clean. For another, they are honest. In them a concrete floor is a concrete floor. Where bricks make a good outside wall, they make a good inside wall, too.

These modern houses have turned me forever against half-timbers stitched to the outside of a house, against imitation thatch rolling like lava over the eaves. Yet I wonder if—someday—jutting, egg-crate roof extensions won't be as much of an architectural cliche as colonnades between living room and dining room.

As I finished my house-hunting trip, I sadly but firmly returned to my Victorian bugaboo, ordered another can of floor

For they are obviously carryovers from Grandfather's day, when you could always find perfect privacy by retreating to the furnace room or the woodshed—or better yet, to the little structure down the path behind the lilac bush.

How in the modern house do you manage to feel snug on a winter's night when the wind howls like a wolf outside and the sleet ticks against the glass and you long to pull the nice, overstuffed warmth of your house close around you?

How, in the modern house, do you escape from even your nearest and dearest when their mannerisms and old stories are driving you into a case of cabin fever? How, when you want to get away from it all, do you get away from it all?

Where do you carry on your hobbies—the messy, cluttery, untidy ones? In a corner of your built-in bedroom on a built-in stool that slides out of its blonde-wood niche?

Where do you go to think? To brood? Even to be a little queer?

In the Victorian house there was a place for everything, even for brooding. There was a front parlor as well as a back parlor. Sister and her beau occupied the front parlor, the beau wearing his natty new suit with the peg-top trousers and his highest collar, Sister with her hair freshly slicked over her thickest rat and showing off her shirtwaist with the lace jabot. True, the sliding doors between front and back parlors were closed, but there was subtle chaperonage in the fact that they could be slid open.

In the back parlor, Father held a gloomy but heroic meeting of the Chautauqua Committee to see about raising this year's deficit.

How to cut down scrubbing yet have the cleanest floors in town!

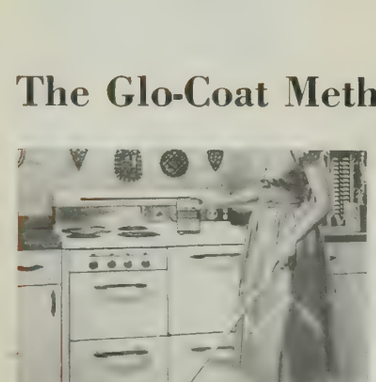
IF keeping your kitchen floor clean is Private Headache No. 1 in your life . . . relax and read on.

The Glo-Coat method of floor care, developed in the Johnson's Wax Research Tower, postpones scrubbing for days on end . . . yet keeps floors sparkling clean with a minimum of attention!

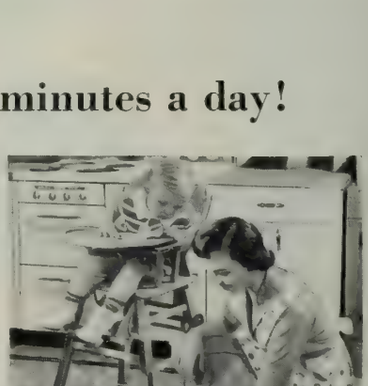
Glo-Coat is an improved kind of floor wax. It requires no polishing to make it shine, and the shine it gives is unbelievably water-repellent.

When you wipe up splashed water, you don't remove the wax. When you whisk up spilled food, you don't leave tell-tale blotches. You can quickly mop your floor time after time with a damp mop and still have a bright protective film of wax left behind.



And Glo-Coat care adds years to the life of linoleum!

This sparkling kitchen floor is waxed the easy way with Johnson's Glo-Coat every four weeks. Between waxings, a once-over with a broom or a swish-over with a damp mop quickly removes all dirt. Floor has a just-polished look always!



The Glo-Coat Method takes only a few minutes a day!

1 Begin by waxing clean floor with Glo-Coat. Takes about 5 minutes in average kitchen. Just spread Glo-Coat on. It shines as it dries.

2 A daily brooming quickly sweeps away dust and dry dirt. Takes about 2 minutes because dirt doesn't grind into a wax finish.

3 When you splash water or spill food on floor, soil wipes up in a jiffy. Liquids can't soak into the wax—don't leave ugly blemishes.

4 Once or tw… floor with n… water. Stai… stays on wi…

New no-rub way to wax a table!

Waxing furniture has never been so easy! Fold a clean piece of cheesecloth into a small square and saturate with Johnson's Pride.

Glide the cloth over the surface you're using. Pride spreads on smoothly, easily. There's no need to wash the surface first. Discover stubborn dirt comes off only when you use Pride as a cleaner.)

Let dry. When thoroughly dry it leaves a light haze. Wipe lightly with a clean cloth to remove this film. Furniture gleams with a rich lustre that lasts for months. Dusting easy because Pride contains no sticky film. Dust can't cling to its glass-smooth finish!

New wax discovery for furniture actually produces the richest, longest-lasting wax luster you've ever seen on wood—without rubbing!

FROM the Johnson's Wax Research Tower has come a new and wonderful kind of wax for furniture. It's called Pride.

This free-flowing liquid embodies the same scientific discovery that led to Johnson's Car-Plate—the sensational new auto wax featured in last June's Reader's Digest.

Without a stroke of hard rubbing, Pride gives brilliant wax protection to walnut and mahogany, birch or maple—light or dark. Just spread it on . . . let it dry . . . wipe it lightly. That's all you do to get the richest, longest-wearing wax luster you've ever seen on wood!

How to save floors from ugly "floor-pox"

The trampling feet of children can't scuff away the beauty of this floor. Regular wax care with Johnson's Paste and Liquid Wax has armored the finish from wear for many years!

YOU almost never realize it's happening until too late. Suddenly one day you look down and discover your floors are getting worn and shabby. That's the warning sign of ugly "floor-pox"!

This is the time for action—before your floors become so scuffed that only a costly refinishing job can restore their natural beauty.

The only way to protect wood floors from wear is to wax them two or three times a year. And then be sure you use genuine Johnson's Paste or Liquid Polishing Wax. Then you're sure you've given them the toughest, tightest protection modern science can provide.

Instead of looking old and shabby as the years roll by, your floors grow lovelier after every waxing. And a quick dry-mopping leaves them mirror-clean!

For helpful pamphlets containing many time-saving hints on the care of floors and finishes, write Johnson's Wax Consumers Service, Racine, Wis.

Many women prefer Johnson's Paste Wax for their floors because it's so economical. A 1-lb. can will wax 300 sq. ft. of floor. Its protective quality is unequaled. Remember, the thinner you spread it on, the easier it is to polish.

Johnson's Liquid Wax is first choice in many homes because floors can be coated with a thin even film so easily. Spread it standing up. Johnson's Liquid Polishing Wax also has great cleaning power—makes dirt and spots disappear.

Whether you use Paste or Liquid Wax, there's an easy way to polish with Johnson's Wax. Use Beautiflor Electric Polisher—a lightweight, motor-driven brush does the work in a jiffy—or buy or rent it for only $1 a day—or buy it on easy terms for about half the price of a vacuum cleaner.

New 20-minute method for waxing the family car!

DID your husband ever pray for rain when you asked him to wax the car?

After all, you could hardly blame him. It used to mean hours of rubbing that was exhausting even for a he-man. No wonder, last summer, when Reader's Digest described a new no-rub way to wax a car, so many husbands cheered. And rushed out to their nearest dealer to get a can of Johnson's Car-Plate!

Car-Plate literally makes car waxing a 20-minute job. Spread it on the clean finish . . . let it dry . . . wipe lightly . . . and look! Your car is gleaming with a tough film of wax that shines like a diamond! You'll find a Car-Plate finish is so remarkably smooth that future car washings take far less time. (And today it's more important than ever to give that finish lasting wax protection!)

eed to oll up your sleeves when you wax car wi Johnson's Car-Plate. Fold a piece heesecloth into a 4-inch square and sate with this free-flowing liquid. Spread the clean finish. Be sure you leave no gaps. ll be mazed at how easily it flows on.

Better Homes & Gardens brings you

Family-tested kitchens

They're the kind you'd love to call your own. Timesaving . . . step-saving . . . slick to take care of . . . beautiful, too!

By Myrna Johnston

Kitchens were never so beautiful, so much fun as they are today. For awhile there, they were all streamlined and proper. But now they can win a beauty contest from any room in the house.

The old-time kitchen, with all its drawbacks, was a welcome—a place where the family gathered because it was the snuggest, warmest, most exciting room in the house.

Then came the age of efficiency. The house got warm and Dad went off to the living room, plunged down behind his paper. The kitchen lost fun. It became a room where you didn't spend too much time or you simply weren't efficient.

Not any more!

Like a lot of other good things, the kitchen's been rediscovered. The trend's all back to the family kitchen. Everybody has a hand in the fun. The kids want to throw their parties out by the range and refrigerator. And can count on Dad to fry the hamburgers with all the aplomb of a chef.

The kitchen's a gay, beautiful place. And why not? Where else do you do so many jobs that let you look around and take in all the beauty about you—whether it's a wren out in the apple tree, spring curtains at the window, the spice cabinet for your anniversary, or the high-meringue just out of the oven.

The kitchen's no longer a place where you find platter dishes stacked and scowling at you. The dishwasher's changed all that. [Turn to next page →

Photographs: Suter, Hedrich-Blessing

Gay as sunshine and businesslike, too

Walk right in and see how easy it is to get a meal. The range and refrigerator are here at your left, opposite double sink and dishwasher. Maple counter at this end is wonderful for sandwich-making. Marion Heuer, decorator, matched the washable wallpaper to wood cabinets and linoleum, repeated its rust-red and green in double-sash curtains. Picture window with its sunny sill floods kitchen with light by day; fluorescent fixtures fill every corner with light at night. One step up and you're in the utility room, see page 97.

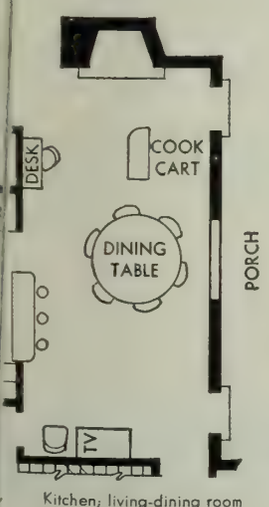
Molly Duane toasts marshmallows over kitchen "bonfire." Fireplace is rigged up for steaks, too

WARM PINE WALLS, open shelves, scalloped copper hood—all were the inspiration of the Marshall Duanes of Bedford, Massachusetts, when they remodeled.



Sleek, white equipment is on one wall. Counter and cubbyhole, end of range, is for seasonings. Or if there's a brownie pan to scoot out of sight when company comes, pull down the door; all is spic and span. Pans hang from copper hooks. Island counter makes wonderful serving space, houses appliances and dishes in neat rows.

THE KITCHEN is in full view of living-dining room in the C. T. Curtis home, Aurora, Illinois. (See floor plan, the picture on the cover, and photograph at right.) Snack bar separates kitchen from dining room, but there's no wall between living-dining areas.

Rolling cook's cart, above, is en route from kitchen. Cabinets store all equipment, so there's no running back to the kitchen. Hearth of fireplace was built 26 inches above floor for easy steak broiling.

Honey-finish ash wall paneling you wax and forget. Steel kitchen cabinets are terra cotta; stools at snack bar are painted to match, and topped with same oak-leaf-patterned fabric used in the draperies and kitchen curtains. Floor covering is same in all rooms.

Ringside dining for TV, with kitchen handy for "seconds"

To make the living room seem larger, the storage partition setting off the kitchen is just high enough to block view. Except for enclosed linen shelf at upper left and one shallow shelf for display purposes, all storage space opens into the kitchen

Thirty feet square.

Build a house this size, and in theory you could have four rooms a little over 14 feet square. But you wouldn't have much of a house.

It's the features that cut into the sizes of these rooms that make a house livable and attractive. Better Homes & Gardens Five Star Home No. 2105, which is just 30 feet square exclusive of carport, has four rooms—living room with a dining alcove, kitchen, and two bedrooms. These take up 620 of the 784 square feet inside the exterior walls. But what happened to the other 124 square feet?

It's this space, carefully stolen from rooms, that makes this house livable and attractive, that gives you the comforts you have come to expect of any home. Each bedroom, for example, has 9 linear feet of storage space—6 feet for hanging clothes, which is enough for two people, and the rest in shelf space. Outside the bath is a deep linen closet that will hold anything from face [Turn to page 119

You can go as far as you like in spreading color around if you grow peonies and iris. New colors, new shapes, and much larger flowers make news—and big news—of these old reliables.

The improved forms and new colors can be grown just as easily as the old ones ever could. You plant—they perform; just as these winter-hardy, long-enduring garden favorites always have.

But, oh, what a difference! What life the newer and better flowers give to your plantings! Iris Golden Eagle, at lower right opposite, is one of the clear, newer yellows that adds a splash of sunshine with every 6-inch flower it opens.

There are huge, spotless, and wonderfully chiseled whites. You can have gigantic sky-blue iris, velvety pansy purples, and the smoothest of creamy custard yellows to combine with your peonies. Together, they'll give you the biggest, richest, most spine-tingling garden show you ever dreamed of. The cost? Only what you would pay to see a good movie. For that [Turn to page 299

Fresh cotton from floor to ceiling

By Florence Byerly and Betty Grayson

Every fabric in these rooms is made of cotton. You'll recognize it immediately in the ruffled curtains and chintz slipcover. And you know that it's washable, and long-wearing—a cool choice for summer, and a practical choice for any time.

You'll find cotton now in many new textures, and you'll see it used in different ways. One newcomer is the cotton rug that has pattern as well as texture and color. You can experiment with your own new uses for familiar cottons, too. We use a chenille bedspread with closely spaced tufting t slipcover cushions on the window seat in the blu room. Texture is good contrast with smooth chint

If you have children, sturdy cottons are an e pecially good choice. You won't have to sacrific style for practicality. Dark colors are smart, too. you choose them for draperies, be sure the fabric colorfast, and you'll find them just as practical.

Cool blue of the wall-to-wall cotton rug and matching walls enhances the beauty of fine cherry furniture in this Traditional room. Crisp chintz fabric slipcovers the sofa. A textured cotton bedspread was used to slipcover foam-rubber cushions on the window seat. Warm color accents are provided by the bright red-orange in pillows and lamp shade. Frothy dotted swiss curtains in three tiers help create a lighthearted feeling in the room.

For seven years Mrs. Edmund Schrang toyed with plans for the modern house Herbert Knight built for them in Cornwall-on-Hudson, New York. Key feature of the house is a living unit complete with kitchen, on the second floor. Now used as a mother-in-law apartment, it could be used as a rental unit.

From its cellarless bottom to its atticless top, the house was planned so all rooms view the Hudson — even the kitchen, which has an opening in its inside wall that looks across the living room to the view.

erned allpaper is the springboard of room's color scheme. If you're lucky gh to be able to start from scratch, e a wallpaper pattern with colors want to repeat again and again in stery, draperies, and floor covering. u may not be starting from scratch—ps you just want to give a drab room Patterned wallpaper can work won- for you. It can spark a so-so color e. It can change the shape and size oom—or seem to. And it's an excel- amouflage for wall cracks.

st study the furnishings in your room. u plan to keep your draperies, floor ings, and upholstery, you'll want a paper that repeats their colors. If you bold pattern in your room already, l want a wallpaper that's plain, or red, printed all over with a tiny n. If you don't have a big pattern in your room, you can have it in wallpaper.

Carrying color in your "mind's eye" is difficult, so don't trust to luck if you're matching your wallpaper to an upholstery material. Take samples of the right colors shopping with you.

It's wise to choose a small pattern for a small room, a large pattern for a large room. But in a hall or dining room—where you don't spend much time—you can have the splash of a huge pattern. Or you can hang a bold paper on one wall of your bedroom or living room, and paint or paper the other walls a solid color.

Camouflaging is an important job that patterned wallpaper can do for you. All-over patterns across the walls and ceiling will blend a dormer into your room. Horizontal stripes on the wall make a ceiling seem lower or a wall longer. Vertical stripes make the ceiling look higher or the wall narrower.

As you plan, link the wall patterns and color schemes of rooms that open onto one another. You might repeat the same color combinations, but vary the shades of the colors you choose. Or you can use one color as the background of one paper and the accent note in another. Correlated stripes and florals make the job easier.

Always be sure to get big wallpaper samples, so you'll have a true idea of how the paper will look on your walls. Many textured papers, for example, have a stripe or plaid effect when they're hung. If you can, borrow or buy a good-sized sample and pin it on your wall for several days. Study the paper by artificial light to be sure it will be attractive at night, too. For how to hang wallpaper, see page 10.

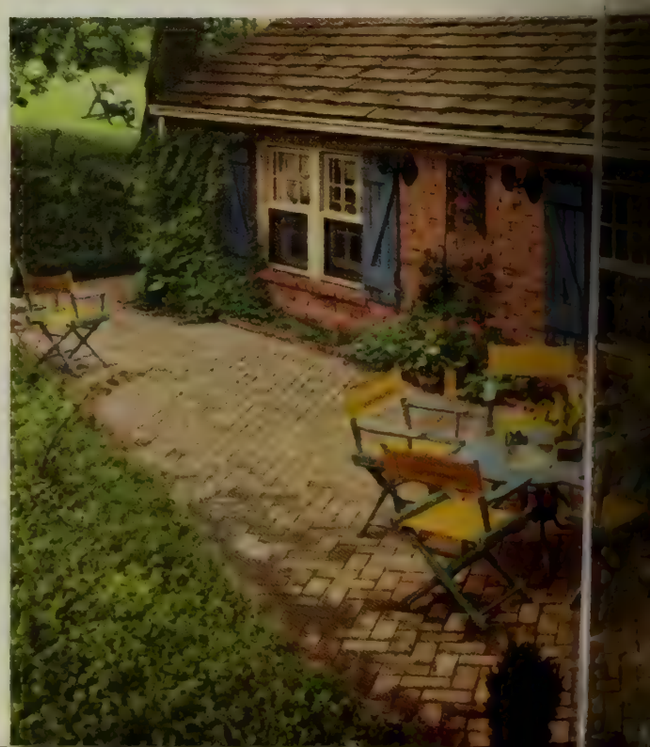
"We live all around the house"

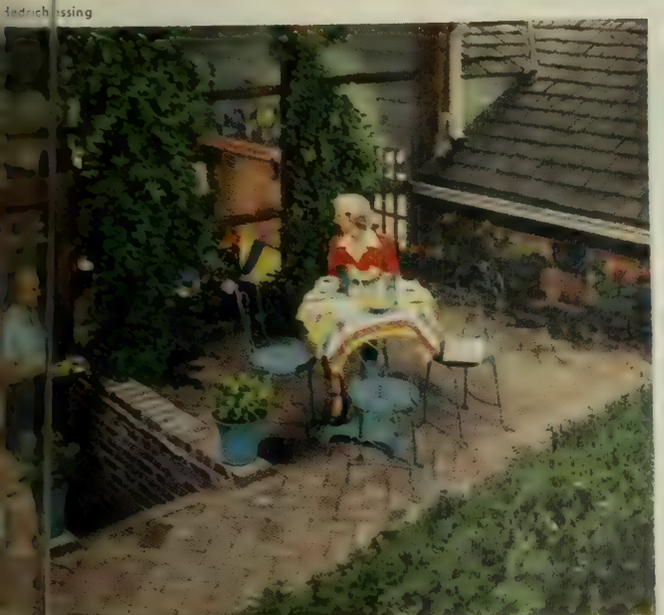
By Ben E. Graves

"The terrace circling our house developed gradually," say Vera and "Bo" Pirie, St. Louis, Missouri. "At first we just had the big terrace and the little spot outside the kitchen door. We were always walking around the house and getting our feet muddy. When we talked about building a connecting walk, we decided it might as well be a wide walk. So now, regardless of the direction of the sun or the wind, there is always a comfortable outdoor spot all summer long. And our [illegible] is the real hub of living activity."



Mrs. Pirie, armed with a can of paint and some [illegible]inal ideas, furnished the terraces very inexpe[illegible]. She used the same color scheme for all the terr[illegible] nishings, so she can move them from one spot [illegible] other. For tips on how to spruce up your outdo[illegible] ture, see page 262.

1 Kitchen has doors opening onto the main terrace and onto the breezeway. Guests have a habit of entering through the kitchen instead of front door. Mrs. Pirie's tempting pastry might be one of the reasons



Here's how the Piries utilized space all around their house for outdoor living. The kitchen is center of entertaining. Numbers on plan correspond to picture numbers

2 This south terrace gets cool shade in late afternoon—just right for relaxing. Mrs. Pirie re-covered the folding chairs, and then she painted them with a canvas preservative paint

5 Just up a few steps from the entrance and garage driveway, this terrace seems to say a cheery "hello." The blue of the bay-window trim appears again in the furniture covers, with the bright yellow of the umbrella repeated in the refinished wooden chairs and the small pillows

Flowering branches

show off spring

By Fae Huttenlocher

If you have a flowering shrub or tree in your yard—or know someone who does—you have the beginnings of spring's loveliest arrangements at your finger tips.

Most flowering branches are dainty, give a light and airy feeling. They combine beautifully with the bolder flowers in your garden—tulips, rhododendrons, daffodils. Or you can make attractive arrangements with branches alone.

When you cut branches for arranging, split them with a cross four inches deep. Then peel back bark the same distance. Branches take up more water and stay fresh longer.

Lunches and Suppers built around Soup can be substantial, yet thrifty

BY Anne Marshall

So appetizing, as well as so easily digested, soup is a welcome aid to meal planning. Every heart-warming bowlful you serve adds nourishment and also helps vary your meals delightfully. There are many hearty soups which are almost a meal in themselves.

Next time you want to make a meal more complete, or give it a special lift, remember your list of delicious soups. Will it be vegetable-beef, Scotch broth, cream of chicken, chicken noodle, cream of mushroom, to name but a few?

Good Soup is Good Value

In these days of increased living costs, good soup stands out as good value—both in your budget and in nutrition.

Practically everything we buy now costs far more than it used to. Naturally this means we must all spend our food dollars well. No wonder so many value-wise women are now serving soup more and more as a main dish. It's such a wonderful help for meals and budgets.

Soup—a Favorite Everywhere

Yes, every day, every month 27 million people sit down to soup for lunch. And more than 15 million enjoy soup for supper. Imagine it! So why not do as women everywhere are doing? Keep a supply of your favorite soups on the pantry shelf—use them often to balance your meals and help balance your budget.

FAMILY SUPPER

Just delicious! And thrifty, too

Call it plain, old-fashioned, family-style, or good home cooking—it's delicious. You can't beat the lusty flavors that you can concoct at home in your own kitchen.

These dishes are thrifty, to outsmart the price tags you're seeing at the meat counters. If you're looking for a meat package marked a dollar or less, you've eight recipes on page 102. And these pages show how the eight dinners will look.

Old-fashioned Strawberry Ice Cream

You used to lick this off the dasher of an old-fashioned ice-cream freezer—

1 tablespoon (1 envelope) unflavored gelatine
¼ cup cold water
2 well-beaten egg yolks
¾ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ teaspoons vanilla
2 cups crushed strawberries
2 cups light cream
2 egg whites
¼ cup sugar

Soften gelatine in cold water; dissolve over hot water. Combine egg yolks, ¾ cup sugar, salt, vanilla, berries, and cream. Stir in gelatine. Freeze firm. Beat egg whites; gradually add the ¼ cup sugar. Break frozen mixture into chunks with wooden spoon; turn into chilled bowl; beat fluffy-smooth with electric or rotary beater. Fold in egg whites. Freeze firm. Serve as is or top each serving with sugared berries (for a double strawberry sundae) or with a spoonful of marshmallow crème.

Berry Patch Pie

You keep all the fresh berry flavor in this pie. See why—

1 quart strawberries
½ cup confectioners' sugar
1 cup water
1½ tablespoons cornstarch
½ to ¾ cup granulated sugar
Red food coloring

Pick out 3 cups whole, big berries; add confectioners' sugar. Let stand 1 hour. Crush the remaining 1 cup smaller berries and cook with the water about 2 minutes. Sieve. Mix cornstarch with ½ to ¾ cup granulated sugar, according to natural sweetness of berries. Stir into the berry juice. Cook gently until clear, stirring constantly. Add a little red food coloring if needed. Fill cooled, baked 8-inch pie shell with the berries. Pour hot sauce over. Cool. (The trim on the rim of the pastry shell is two strips of pastry twisted together.)

Big Berry Mold

When you find the first big berry in the patch, celebrate it!—

2 packages strawberry-flavored gelatine
3 cups hot water
½ cup canned pineapple juice
¼ teaspoon salt

Dissolve gelatine in hot water. Stir in pineapple juice and salt. Fill 1-quart mold. Chill till firm. Unmold and garnish with the first big berry and a fluff of whipped cream. Pass more whipped cream and a bowl of sugared berries.

"Anyone can learn my tricks to a meal a happy ending" said ELSIE the

"You don't catch me," snorted Elmer, the bull, "telling all the smart tricks I know to every guy that asks me!"

"But there's no special secret," smiled Elsie, "about making a peppermint-marshmallow sauce and serving it over that good Borden's Chocolate Ice Cream that everybody loves."

"I get it!" bellowed Elmer. "Any old excuse to wave the flag for Borden's!"

"I'm only telling my friends," explained Elsie, "how their families will wave the flag for them. Anyone can get cheers a-plenty for even a simple meal if it winds up with Borden's Ice Cream."

"I'll cheer for you if you'll wind up your chatter," grumbled Elmer.

"But I've just begun," laughed Elsie. "I have lots of other Borden foods to talk about. That wonderful, rich golden cream, for instance. Now that strawberries are here, folks will want to enjoy lots of Borden's Cream in glamorous berry desserts."

"Does that mean," demanded Elmer, "that you have to tell every cook in the county about your own special strawberry cream pie?"

"Why not?" asked Elsie. "The Borden people take great pains to bring folks the best-tasting milk and cream fresh from the farm. The least I can do is to tell other housewives how many grand ways there are to enjoy them."

"All right, all right," sighed Elmer. "As far as I'm concerned you can forget about all your fancy desserts. A good strong cup of coffee at the end of a meal is happy ending enough for me."

"I was just coming to that," nodded Elsie. "No matter what the dessert is, folks will want to serve Borden's Instant Coffee for the finishing touch. It's rich, strong, and full-bodied!"

"You don't have to convince me!" declared Elmer. "I know good coffee when I taste it!"

"I know you do, dear," beamed Elsie. "Just like we all know that if it's Borden's, it's GOT to be good!"

Betty Crocker Chocolate Angel Food Cake

THIS RECIPE DEVELOPED FOR USE WITH SOFTASILK ONLY

Preheat oven to 375° (quick moderate). Have egg whites at room temperature. Sift an ample amount of SOFTASILK CAKE FLOUR onto a square of paper.

Measure and sift together 3 times.....
- ¾ cup sifted SOFTASILK Cake Flour
- ⅞ cup (¾ cup plus 2 tbsp.) sugar
- ¼ cup cocoa

STEP 2

Measure into large mixing bowl..
- 1½ cups egg whites (about 12 whites)
- 1½ tsp. cream of tartar
- ¼ tsp. salt
- 1½ tsp. vanilla

Beat with wire whip until foamy throughout.

Gradually add, 2 tbsp. at a time...
¾ cup sugar

Beat about 10 seconds after each addition. Continue beating after the last addition until meringue is firm and holds stiff straight peaks when wire whip is gently lifted out of meringue. (This requires considerable beating.)

STEP 3

Place flour-sugar-cocoa mixture in sifter and sift about 3 tbsp. over the entire surface of meringue. Fold gently with wire whip or rubber scraper until flour-sugar-cocoa mixture disappears using about 8 to 10 complete folding strokes and turning the bowl a quarter of a turn with each stroke.

Repeat this folding process until all of the flour and sugar and cocoa is folded in. Then scrape down the sides of the bowl with rubber scraper and fold 8 to 10 more strokes or until mixture is completely blended. This mixture will be very thick.

Carefully, with a rubber scraper, push the batter into ungreased tube pan, 10 x 4-in. Lift the last portion lightly from the bowl into the pan, being careful not to stir it.

Carefully cut through the batter going around the tube 5 or 6 times with a knife or steel spatula to break large air bubbles. Be sure to even up batter so it is level and touches the sides of the pan. Bake 30 to 35 minutes in quick moderate oven (375°) or until top springs back when lightly touched: Deep cracks in the top are typical of this cake.

Immediately turn pan upside down, placing tube part over neck of funnel or bottle. Let cake hang in pan until cold.

To remove cake, loosen from sides and tube with spatula close against pan. Turn pan over and hit edge sharply on table to loosen. Split cake crosswise in 3 even layers with a saw-toothed knife. Spread Chocolate Fluff (recipe below) between the layers and then over top and sides. Keep in refrigerator until serving time.

TO USE ELECTRIC MIXER

STEP 1 and 2 . . . Follow the above directions. Use medium speed (middle of the dial). After last addition of sugar, turn to highest speed. Continue beating until meringue is firm and holds stiff straight peaks. Scrape sides of bowl constantly with rubber scraper.

STEP 3 . . . Fold by hand as in STEP 3 above. BUT make sure to bring rubber scraper or wire whip down through center of batter and up at the side, turning the bowl a quarter of a turn with each stroke. This will insure thorough blending.

When mixer is used, the volume will be slightly less and the texture will be finer.

CHOCOLATE FLUFF

Mix together in chilled bowl: 3 cups heavy cream, 1½ cups sifted confectioners' sugar, ¾ cup cocoa, dash of salt. Beat mixture until stiff enough to hold a point.

A brand-new contest opens with $70 in the jack pot. You can qualify with your Holiday Candy and Cranberry Recipes. If the judges vote your recipe best, you'll be chosen Cook-of-the-Month next December and receive $10. Honor Roll mention and $3 go to each of the 20 other winners.

Holiday Candy. Part of the fun of Christmas is in the kitchen—when it's candymaking time.

Perhaps you have a wonderful version of the old-fashioned favorites—fudges, divinity, panocha, taffy, peanut brittle, candied citrus peel, fondant.

Or you may add special ingredients to the basic recipes for extra flavor. Such as brown sugar and sour cream to fudge, coconut to divinity, drained pineapple to panocha. Or black walnuts to taffy.

Your crisp, sugared walnut or almonds may win you praises. Or your specialty may be wafer-thin mint patties, rich caramels.

And don't forget the special favorites with the small fry—popcorn balls, lollipops, candy canes.

Cranberries. Anything is in order, as long as it's extra delicious and made with cranberries. You may start with the fresh berries, canned whole or jellied cranberry sauce, or cranberry juice.

Could be a refreshing salad with ground raw cranberries, orange juice, and crisp walnuts molded in cool gelatine. Or slices of jellied cranberry sauce topped with spoonfuls of chicken salad.

Maybe it's dessert—a pink cranberry and ginger ale sherbet or bright cranberry-prune tarts. Or a steamed pudding with hard sauce.

You may have a special way of flavoring cranberry sauce to go with the holiday bird.

And remember, the winners of these 21 prizes will receive the Better Homes & Gardens Certificate of Endorsement and six copies of the endorsed recipe.

1. Write your recipe clearly on one side of the paper. Send but one recipe at a time and mark it, "December Holiday Candy" or "December Cranberry Recipes."
2. Print your full name and address clearly in the upper right corner of the recipe page in ink.
3. Give measurements in level cups, tablespoons, and teaspoons, never in heaping or scant measurements.
4. Be sure to specify in your recipe the brand names of the nationally known food products you use as ingredients—products available everywhere. We must know them so we can test your recipe with the same brands you use.
5. Include 50 to 100 words about the history or origin of your recipe.

Hang your hobbies on the wall

By Edith Wolfe

Photograph: Hedrich-Blessing

A china collection arranged on a hanging shelf makes a formally balanced picture above couch in the living room of the J. Frederick Gagel home, Dayton, Ohio

If your room needs a lift, or your hobby needs a home—you'll find hanging shelves will brighten any corner. Shelves will hold anything from a collection of antique glass to fat little jars of spices or pots of favorite plants. When you arrange objects on shelves, pretend you're painting a picture. The arrangement must balance; the colors harmonize; the shapes please. And when you tire of the picture you have created—make another. There's no limit to what you can do.

There's room on this large maple shelf to display your hand-painted dinner plates, your tall figurines, and your prize plants. Besides the tall shelves, the drawers below are roomy enough to be useful. Hung low, close to a chest or desk below, the two pieces will appear as one unit of furniture

Star-Kist Tuna wins in nationwide taste tests! Coast-to-coast tests were conducted in 24 cities and towns. Both food experts and housewives chose Star-Kist Tuna over all other leading nationally advertised brands! Identity of brands was concealed, tests were supervised by independent certified public accountants. In thousands of individual tests Star-Kist Tuna was preferred 3 to 1 because Star-Kist packs only the smaller tuna and these smaller tuna are tender, better-tasting every time!

Now make this amazing test yourself! Buy Star-Kist Chunk Style Tuna at your grocer's and any other brand of flaked, grated, bite-size or chunk tuna. Compare them side-by-side. On the basis of taste alone, if you don't agree that Star-Kist is better, send us both labels with your comment and we'll refund twice the price of the Star-Kist Tuna.

Swans Down cakes (and the girls who bake them!)

SPRING RHAPSODY CAKE

To Mix: Prepare Happy Day Cake as directed on back of Swans Down Cake Flour package. And . . .

Be sure to use Swans Down Cake Flour. Then you're bound to turn out a man-tempting beauty—a cake as glorious as spring itself. It'll be finer, softer, more delicate.

In fact, you just can't get that glorious Swans Down tenderness—that rich 'n luscious Swans Down goodness—with any other flour.

To Bake: Bake in layers. Cool.

To Frost: Prepare fluffy 7-minute frosting. Flavor with ½ teaspoon vanilla and ¼ teaspoon almond extract. Spread half of the frosting between layers and on top of cake. Tint remaining frosting a delicate green and frost sides of cake.

Garnish frosted cake with gumdrop tulips and green gumdrop leaves. (To make tulips, cut large gumdrops in half and snip two small triangular-shaped pieces from each half, leaving "tulips," as shown.)

Easy? Why, even if you're a beginner your cake will be perfect! Just watch his eyes sparkle when you bring on this posy-decked dazzler.

Look at him go for that melting Swans Down tenderness—and then you'll know why women say: For fine cake—it takes cake flour; for superfine cake—superfine Swans Down Cake Flour.

The furnace for the radiant floor heating system shares a small, brick-lined space with the water heater. Centrally located, they function with maximum efficiency in a minimum of space. They share the chimney with a fireplace—yes, even in this small house, there's a fireplace. It isn't big, but it casts as cheery a glow as a roaring campfire.

The rest of the space goes into walls, hall, and bathroom. There is only 30 square feet of hall space, but it serves well its purpose of keeping bedrooms and bath private from the rest of the house. The bath is standard, except for a second wall cabinet deep enough to hold large bottles and toilet paper.

Beyond the basic house is a carport, with a deep storage cabinet at the rear for garden equipment. [Turn to next page

Cabinets hanging over kitchen work area are shallow enough so they aren't in the way when you use washer (under raised counter top), sink, or range. Pots and lids are within reach opposite the range

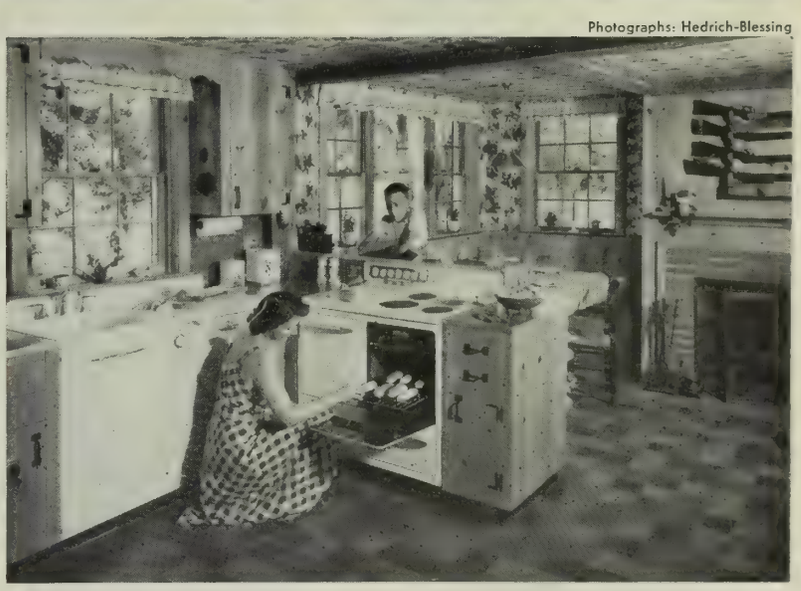
Look before you remodel

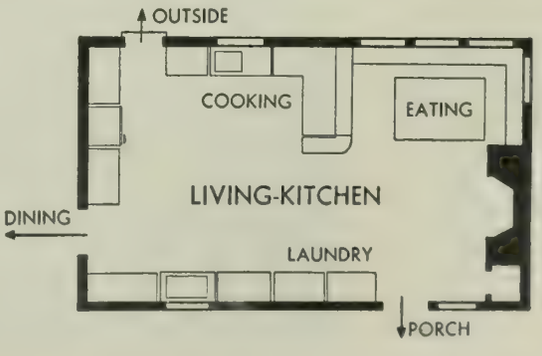
You can't remodel a wreck—so don't try it. But with some old houses you can literally work wonders. Here you see an excellent example

BEFORE: Square nails found in framework of older wi (wing at left) set its age at well over 100 years. On the op see the "after" version of the same house

BEFORE: The old place didn't look so bad from thi at this distance—but then it didn't look so very g



AFTER: It looks better now. Just pruning away the shrubbery helped a lot. The screened porch, opening living-kitchen, serves as a cool, pleasant, summer



d: San house, photographed from farther left. New roof of use w lowered, changed from hipped to gable. New win- aint. d columned porch were other major improvements

Photographs: Hedrich-Blessing

The Deagans have a living room, and they have a dining room, too. But neither gets as much use as this room—their living-kitchen. Floor plan appears below. Pine paneling is new; most of other wood used in remodeling came from old roof

By Jessie Walker

Ame ca has millions of old houses that could nd re odeling—but you'd break your back, your art, a d your bank account if you tried it with ne o them. With others, though, you can get ore t n a dollar's return, in good living and prid of accomplishment, for every dollar spent. Whe Jack and Martha Deagan found a 115- ac far near Prairie View, Illinois, they knew that hom tead was old, ugly, and superficially run- wn. hey also knew it was big enough for them d the two children, ideally located, structurally and— nd moderately priced. So, with a re- ealis glint in their eyes, they bought it.

No f mers, the Deagans first rented most of the re g thus greatly reducing their tax and worry ld. T en, planning their steps carefully in ad- nce, hey kicked off on the job of turning a ntry old farmhouse into a home for today.

Comfort A concrete house provides year-around comfort in any climate. In northern states and Canada all houses need insulation; a concrete house is easy to insulate. You can count on a concrete house being warm in winter and cool in summer. And inasmuch as it is weathertight, your concrete house will stay clean and dry in all seasons.

Economy A concrete house gives you more for your dollar. First cost is moderate compared with other quality construction. It lasts longer, requires less upkeep and needs fewer repairs. These factors add up to your assurance of a lifetime of dependable, low-annual-cost shelter.

HOW TO GET A CONCRETE HOUSE

. . . and what will it cost?

Key to "on time" production

CONSTRUCTION FOR WAR OR PEACE depends upon knowing how to get things done. Out of long experience General Motors has developed a system of pre-scheduling manufacture of parts that brings them to the assembly line on time. This typical GM scheduling board shows monthly requirements and daily output in a plant making some 800 different parts—ranging from man-sized pieces to clips so tiny it takes 75 to make a handful. Advance planning enables GM to produce parts in adequate supply for defense as well as America's finest cars.

Key to better engineering

SUPERIORITY IN DESIGN comes from infinite tests t check the staunchness of new body styles. Here, an enginee carefully measures strength around the door opening. Th jack applies extreme pressure—and any minute deflection are instantly recorded by the closely spaced gauges. Te after test like this insure the rugged sturdiness and greate value of Body by Fisher—exclusively on GM cars.

Key to better research

HIGHER STANDARDS OF PERFORMANCE are a product of painstaking research—well illustrated by this "gold standard" method of checking the smoothness of metal surfaces in moving parts. Some must be machined finer than others, and GM Research employs 27 degrees of smoothness—or roughness as engineers call it—as standard manufacturing practice. These are measured by gold-plated master blocks, diamond-ruled to millionths of an inch. These golden master gauges give you a smoother-running car a better value for your money.

Why give your children music lessons? To teach them to play? To make professionals of them? Because all the other neighborhood children are taking? Because you want them to enjoy music when they grow up? Because you are anxious for them to perform in recitals, over the radio, on television?

Which of these are your problems? Do you know at what age you should start your children taking lessons? Do you wonder whether or not they are musically inclined? Do you know how to choose a teacher? Do you have trouble getting your children to practice the required hours per day? Have your children lost interest in music, after several years of lessons?

If these questions have occurred to you, then Melvin Schneider, one of the foremost teachers of children's music in the country, would like to tell you how he feels about your child and music. He knows what he's talking about, for he and Mrs. Schneider are 6 years along in a 13-year musical experiment with children at Campus Elementary School, Iowa State Teachers College, Ce

A famous radio performer, a dauntless guest on many a "Stump the Experts"-type of program, was asked what were the most difficult questions he was ever called on to answer. He replied: "The little, simple ones my kids ask me!" Like most parents, he felt that his children were virtually backing him against the wall every time they came up with a vital question.

A growing child is likely to drop a hot potato of a question into your lap without advance warning. This habit may be annoying, but it's normal. Junior's confused by many of the things that go on around him and demands that his curiosity be satisfied. Nevertheless, there are pitfalls in the questions children ask—not because of the questions themselves but because of the answers they get.

Strangely enough, parents who spend hours studying the problems of their youngster's physical health, schooling, and diet are apt to spend no time at all on the kind of answers they should give to important questions raised by the same boy or girl. A thoughtless, off-the-cuff answer may really f

What are you going to tell a you time she was told to go to sleep. Her grandmother had died a few weeks earlier, and when the little girl asked what had happened to her grandma, she was told, "Grandmother went to sleep." The child, realizing that Granny had disappeared from the household, became frightened that she would suffer the same fate if she went to sleep. Obviously, the answer the child received was the wrong one.

Another popular method of explaining death to the child is to say, "Grandma has gone away." The imaginative child will keep expecting Grandmother to come back someday, and may even harass the parents by insisting on learning exactly when.

It's a mistake to hold out on a child in order to spare him grief. All children are sensitive. When you're troubled or in pain, they feel it even if you don't tell them about it.

"A child needs to be included in a family's sorrow," points out Dr. Julius V. Coleman, former head of the mental hygiene division of the University of Colorado Medical Center. "If he is not included, he will grieve alone, and he will not be able to bear it or adjust to it." Whether it is Grandma who has passed away, or Uncle Jack, or Rover the dog, the facts of life—and of death—must be brought home to the child. The best way to answer this question is by saying simply: "Grandma has died. She won't come back."

"When a person dies, where does she go?"

This ticklish question, which baffles philosophers as well as little children, is best answered with a simple religious explanation—assuming, of course, that the parents do have a sincere religious belief. In any event, a feasible answer would be: "She goes to a Hereafter (or Another World) where she rests forever." All children have some dread of death, and a question like this usually masks a feeling of fear the child has for his own security. He is afraid of what will happen to him if his parents die, and he may even have a feeling that death is a punishment meted out to little boys and girls who don't eat their oatmeal or go to bed on time. He should be told that death is something which comes to all people, and that it is not a punishment. He should be assured that death most often comes only to very old people, and that in any case, it brings peace rather than pain.

Questions about money:

"How much money does Daddy make?"

A question like this usually arises when a child hears a playmate sound off about the size of his daddy's income. Nothing is served in telling a child who hasn't the slightest conception of bookkeeping that his daddy makes $5,000 a year or $15,000. The best possible answer would be: "Oh, Daddy makes enough to give us plenty of food, this nice house, the nice clothes we wear, and all t have."

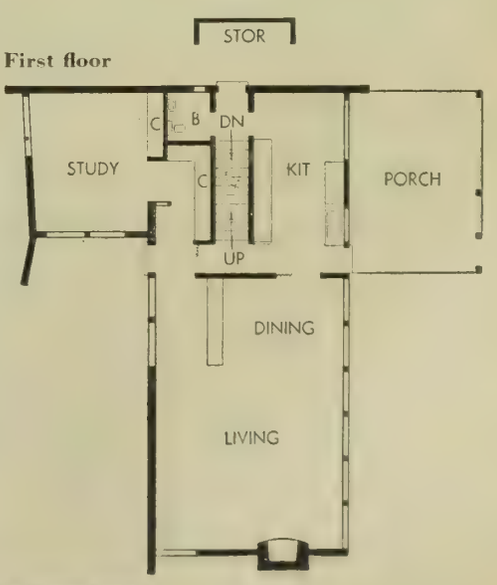
one-story wing onto a two-story house



By sticking to a rectangular plan for a two-story house, you can limit yourself so much that you end up with a poor plan.

The answer, as shown in the Minneapolis home of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Ptashne which Architect Harley Johnson designed, is to make only part of the house two stories high. Here bedrooms and bath ride above a study, the kitchen, and a screened porch. The living room is in its own wing, could be planned without restriction on size, shape, or height.

You can get more privacy on a narrow lot

THE house Architect Harry Bogner designed for the George Levins, of Milwaukee, fits an inside 50-foot lot.

A school in the block means children and extra traffic. There are houses on both sides, close. But because of wise window placement, the Levins have a 75-foot view from all windows in major rooms, and every room has light and privacy.

Less than half the first-floor area is topped by another floor. With the garage near the street, the main living area is far enough back from the street so thin slat blinds on windows on this side provide sufficient veiling. Windows on sides are few and high. Bedroom windows are placed near room corners, so inner parts of rooms are not visible from outside the house.

Four-year-old kindergarten visitor plu

key ingredients. Schneider says that the average child is not creative enough to take a lesson and then retire by himself and practice. That's why the child kicks and sometimes rebels! He likes company too much. In a group, he is happy, cooperative, willing and eager to learn. It does away with any antagonism to music he might have had. Too, he has the distinct advantage of hearing music as a whole—learning harmony as well as melody—and he's more conscious of time and rhythm. He has something in common to discuss with his playmates.

Schneider advises that neighborhood string quartet or quintets be formed and a good teacher secured to instruct. The teacher should not be the mother of one of the children in the group. Instead of each pupil taking a lesson separately once a week, this would mean that the lessons of four or five would be combined and given every day to the group for a 30- or 45-minute period. The cost, probably, would be the same, but the children would have the additional benefit of daily supervision whereby mistakes would be corrected immediately, leaving no room for the forming of bad habits.

Piano instruction classes—fast growing in popularity for both children and adults—could be conducted in about the same way, although a large group might be successfully handled. For piano, the children use a simulated keyboard on which they imitate their teacher and quickly learn to play little pieces.

Group instruction makes such a favorable impression on children and they are so stimulated with it

As they grow, the subjects change to meet their needs and interests. If your boy likes military marches but is required to play soft lullabies, watch out! The next thing you know, you'll be wondering whether or not you should spend any more money on lessons!

Lessons should always be flexible in order to meet the individual child's need and never presented on a fixed routine. Assignments straight through a course are seldom satisfactory. A good example is the little girl who was learning a Christmas hymn at May-basket time, simply because it was "next in the book." How on earth could music become important to this child, when nothing was being done to fit it into her living and thinking?

The child should learn how he can make music work for himself—how he can express his own everyday experiences through music. Composing simple pieces works exceptionally well in a group where children inspire one another, although the same principle could be used in the individual lesson.

Words are composed first and then the music. The children sing how they feel the music should "go," and Mrs. Schneider picks it up on the piano. If there's dissension, a vote is taken. Sometimes they are several days putting the finishing touches on a little tune, but when it is completed, the children are enthusiastic about it, and it is played and sung over and over again.

If it is a rainy day, perhaps they will compose a song about the rain. They'll talk about how it sounds, what it does for the soil, how it can become the foundation for many hours of family pleasure spoils picnics. Birds, springtime, holidays, new clothes, birthdays—everything that is vital to them is translated into little musical pieces which they love. As these children grow with their music, their music grows with them, and, when introduced to the world's greatest classical compositions, they possess a rare understanding of what the music is "saying."

Only to the person who thinks creatively is music meaningful!

The fact that many would-be musicians aren't thinking creatively could be illustrated by a recent music contest in which college students participated. After one contestant had finished playing his piece perfectly, the judge asked: "Why did you play the piece the way you did?"

"I don't know," came the answer of the fussed musician.

The most severe criticism the judge made of the whole contest was that only a very few participants could explain why they were playing as they did. Perfect technique had completely overbalanced expression.

In music, just as in conversation, very few children and adults possess the fine attribute of "listening." Like the tuba player in a big symphony who, after years of playing in the orchestra, sat out front to hear a popular opera he had played many times.

"So that's how it sounds!" he exclaimed. All those years he had been playing the "oompah, oompah" parts with precision, but had never been aware of the music as a whole. That's the way the average child plays in a band or an orchestra—conscious only of his own part.

Not long ago, the 7-year-old daughter of a college music professor helped prove that Schneider's pupils were hearing music as a whole. The professor called Schneider on the telephone, and almost screamed, he was so excited: "Schneide done, but she's d is playing her vi and singing in think it's easy, w it?" The little gir of the music as not-so-easy feat w effortlessly.

civic and school orchestras—even at junior-high age, when musical interests usually hit a decided low.

At the Cedar Falls Fourth Ward Campus school, a regulation Iowa school, where each year Schneiders' music classes are stepped up a grade, every child from kindergarten to the fifth grade, inclusive, is receiving music instruction. There are no screenings; no musical aptitude tests of any kind. Eventually, every child both in grade and high school will be playing an instrument. Schneider's Fifth Grade Symphony (composed of the entire class) is the largest children's symphony in the world and is comparable to that of most high schools.

Schneider believes it is possible for all children to attain the same proficiency, enthusiasm, and understanding of music as these Campus School children, if music is properly presented to them. The most important factor in this regard is the teacher, and extreme care should be used in making a selection. There are many excellent ones, but here are some suggestions from the Schneiders to aid you in your choice:

1. Find a teacher who likes children. (The graduate degrees and talent the teacher has are unimportant if he doesn't understand children.)

2. Talk with him about his philosophy. If his emphasis is entirely on technique and hard work, he isn't the teacher you want.

3. If the teacher assigns straight through a music book, watch out! No two students can be treated alike, and if the student is following a prescribed book page by page, the teacher is doing nothing for the student individually.

4. Technique should not be taught as an end in itself. Instead, scales, exercise, and so forth should be incorporated into actual pieces which the children can play with enjoyment and expression.

5. If the child is given a recital piece immediately, weigh the possibility that the recital might become the important thing rather than your child's enjoyment of a musical experience.

6. Length of lesson does not indicate thoroughness—better stop with the child wanting more.

7. The teacher should show signs of creativity, and should encourage and guide your child in creating

Wise up on wood

By Duncan Scott
U. S. Forest Service

People get a lot of wrong ideas about wood.

Does wood decay with age? Does sap rise in the spring and go down in the fall? Does a limb rise higher from the ground as a tree grows older?

If you answer "yes" to these questions, you aren't on firm scientific ground.

Every time the mailman empties his bag at the Forest Products Laboratories in Madison, Wisconsin, out comes a pile of letters proving that people don't know much about wood. Here are some of the questions that crop up frequently:

Does wood naturally decay with age?

According to researchers at the laboratories, it ain't necessarily so. When the White House was remodeled in 1928, roof timbers laid in 1816 were as sound as a prewar dollar. The 300-year-old Fairbanks house in Dedham, Massachusetts, is built of wood, and is still in top condition.

And here's one you might not believe if you heard it on a quiz program: A log 7 feet in diameter was found in a tunnel dug 150 feet below the bed of the Yakima River in Washington. A piece of the log was identified at the Forest Products Laboratories as a kind of sequoia that died out long ago. Its estimated age: 12 million years.

Wood doesn't decay because of age. Decay is caused by various plants called fungi, which can't grow if wood is dry. Or, if the wood is kept permanently saturated, fungi are drowned out. That's why the oldest pieces of wood are found in very dry or very wet places.

Is it true that some kinds of wood never decay, regardless of how they are used?

The answer is that any wood will decay if conditions are right for fungi to grow. The outer sapwood of all trees is easily and quickly destroyed by decay. But the heartwood of some species resists decay longer than the heartwood of others—species like cedar, catalpa, chestnut, bald-cypress, juniper, black locust, osage orange, and redwood.

Recently a Forest Products Laboratories man inspected a floor that was falling in. The subfloor was cypress, put there to ward off decay. But the cypress was laid on damp ground and covered with tar paper before the finished floor was laid. The owner had built a high-powered "fungus pit" that ate up the cypress.

Is there such a thing as rot-proof wood?

No. Though fungi cannot grow without water, they will not reduce water-conducting cells which carry water from the source, usually the ground, to buildings. But you can keep your house free from decay by building on a well-drained site, using seasoned lumber, and keeping the ground after it's delivered. Use only treated lumber where the wood is in contact with the ground or subject to dampness.

Is wood more dangerous than steel in case of fire?

Contrary to what many people think, wood beams will usually support a heavier weight for a longer time in a fire than will unprotected steel beams. A wood beam chars on the outside and the inside of the beam retains most of its strength for a long time. An uncovered steel beam, on the other hand, quickly gets hot and weak.

For this reason steel beams are usually enclosed in wood, plaster, or some other protective material.

Will a fence post last longer if set in the ground upside down?

No. Put the larger end of the post in the ground. It will last longer and be stronger. And when you go fishing, you don't put the bait on the smaller end.

Does oak, hickory, or some other hardwood have more heating value than pine?

This is a tricky question. A cord of hickory has more heating value than a cord of pine. But a cord is a lot more. But pound for pound, dry pine gives off more heat than dry oak. For a quick heat—as in starting a fire—pine is better than oak. But for home heating, where a long, slow fire is better, stick to the hardwoods. It stretches out the heat over a longer time.

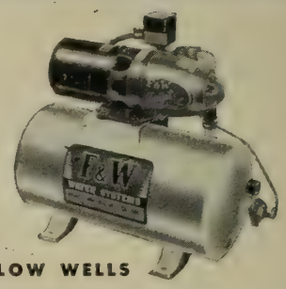
Does sap rise in the spring and go down in the fall?

This is another tough question. Some people say that sap rises in the spring and never comes down. That is not correct. It is circulating more rapidly in the spring and summer. Because of this, logs cut in the spring, weighing, logs cut in the fall. Logs cut in the spring have more sap in them than logs cut in the fall. But they have more sap in them than logs cut in the fall season. If sap were the only thing that couldn't freeze in winter, trees would often do.

Is the wood of trees in one state or region better than that in another state or region?

You hear people say that wood from a Michigan tree is better than wood from a Vermont maple, or that wood is better than another wood, or that more than 600 species of trees in the United States, that a tree's location has nothing to do with the strength of its wood.

Can an experienced person tell the strength of wood by looking at it?



No. An experienced person can tell what kind of wood only by looking at it. He can tell the stump or the piece of wood is cut. Looking at a piece of wood only shows the piece to be. It does not show the piece to be strong. The rate of growth may have occurred in 1900 or back Fabric. Five fabrics are naturals for dressing tables: taffeta, chintz, dotted swiss, organdy, and cotton lace. The last three need glazed chintz or taffeta underskirts to emphasize their sheerness. We chose rayon taffeta because it has no right or wrong side, gives a big effect for little money. Besides, it is easy to sew, and pretty for a long time.

Quilted plastic covers the top of dressing table and stool in the picture. It wipes off clean and is inexpensive. You might want to cover this with cellophane. Then when it gets untidy from powder and such, you can put a new piece over the regular cover.

Shape of dressing table. Follow these directions for a kidney-shaped table, a shelf fastened to wall, or a kitchen-type table. The measurements determine amount of fabric you'll need. The method of finishing is the same for all.

Measuring. Measure from top of table to floor, allowing for hem at bottom. Hem can be as wide as 9 inches or as narrow as 3 inches. You need 3 lengths of 50-inch rose taffeta for a skirt like the one in the picture. If your table stands out from the wall, buy 4 lengths, since the skirt will need to go around the back. For stool skirt, measure from top of stool to floor, plus hem, which should be half as wide as hem on table skirt. For width, allow approximately twice as much as the stool measures all way around.

By Adrienne Bak

The Hilding Anderson family of Seattle wanted an easy-to-take-care-of, basementless, three-bedroom house on their pint-sized (7,200 square feet) lot. They have it.

They also wanted—but didn't think they could have—a big patio and an enclosed play area suitable for both grown-ups and kids. Those too they have, though, thanks to ingenious space-planning by Architect Harrison J. Overturf.

In attaining such full use of the lot, one of the major problems faced by Architect Overturf was maintaining privacy for both indoor and outdoor living areas.

His solution was a U-shaped house with the patio filling the U, and with the game court at the rear. Thus, instead of looking at the neighbors, the house looks at itself. The only windows on the street side are in the dining room and kitchen. So the Andersons do have privacy.

Finally, they wanted time time to enjoy their house, game court, and patio. To get this time, they did what many threaten, but few do. They paved their lawns. Thirty-inch cement squares, with wood forms left in, fill all open spaces except for a few flower beds and small trees. It worked, too; no lawns, no mowing, more time for fun.

To see how the inside of the Anderson house makes life easier, more pleasant, better, turn to page 170.

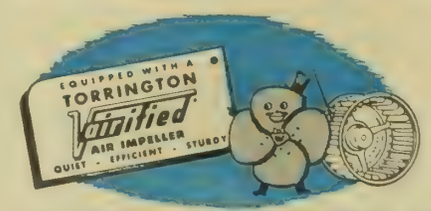
"This Summer we'll have Comfort... thanks to moving air!"



"Our house used to be like an oven every hot or humid day. But last July, after a week of 90° heat, I got mad and told Bill he just had to do something—I wasn't going to suffer another summer. So Bill talked to our architect. He said everyone could have comfort, cheaply, by simply moving air. So we did! The men were so rushed that we were well into the next heat wave before they came, but Bill had them install a kitchen ventilator and an attic fan.

"It's hard to put into words the difference these fans have made in our comfort—even in our dispositions! We sleep with covers while our neighbors toss and turn. And I seldom need to scrub the paint, now we have a kitchen fan.

"So if you, too, want comfort this summer, don't wait—buy your fans now. Be ready! But be sure whatever you buy is big enough, and be sure it has the Torrington V*air*ified Tag. Everyone we asked said, 'What's a fan without a good fan blade?'—and Torrington makes the best blades!"

's sphalt Tile came along. The moi ure in concrete directly on the ground ruins most flooring materials, but it has no harmful effect on Armstrong's Asphalt Tile. Its tough composition will give long service under hard usage.

Bare concrete floors create dust and are hard to keep clean. Armstrong's Asphalt Tile puts an end to dust and simplifies cleaning. Routine sweeping and occasional washing and waxing are all the care that's needed.

The bright colors of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile overcome basement drabness, help make this area as inviting as any room in the house. Design possibilities are almost unlimited with this floor since it comes in a wide range of colors and is laid tile by tile. For this design, nine tiles of Regimental Blue No. E-382 have been used to make 27" squares in a field of Arizona Tan No. E-383.

Find the low cost of a floor of Armstrong's Asphalt Tile by taking the dimensions of your basement to your Armstrong flooring merchant. He will gladly tell you how little it will cost for the materials to do the work yourself or to have him handle the job for you. He can also show you color samples and help you work out design ideas. A list of equipment in this workshop and a floor plan of the basement will be sent free on request.

To most of us, "workbench" means some planks made into a work area—about so high from the floor. It's a general catchall for tools, paint cans, wood scraps, bent nails, shavings, and sawdust. By shoving the clutter to one side, or off onto the floor, a man can clear an area big enough to nail together a birdhouse.

I labored long under that delusion until I realized that you spend more hours at your workbench than anywhere else in your shop. Then I converted my bench from a worse-than-typical hodgepodge into an efficient piece of workshop equipment.

I didn't rebuild. I just added on and had fun doing it. It took me a couple of days to build the special features pictured, but already they've saved over two days of my workbench time. Use them to make your bench as efficient as possible.

as at J. Tack from center front around each side to back. Keep tacks close to top edge of arms. When tacking is complete, bring skirt down to position.

To cover the tacks, cut and join enough 4-inch bias strips to go completely around. Fold this in half and stitch edges in ¼-inch seam. Turn strip right side out, and press seam to one edge. Lay seam line of strip downward along edge of table top, as shown at K, and tack in place. Alternate tacks with those in plastic top. Smooth bias strip down to give a nice finish. You can use braid, velvet ribbon, silken cord over this.

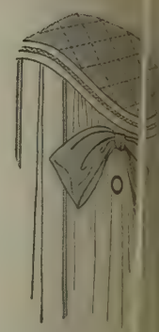
Skirt and cushion for the stool. First, cover stool top with piece of plastic, as on table. Seam skirt, cord hem edge, then join selvage edges to form circular piece of material. Bring corded edge to position on right side and stitch like bottom hem of dressing-table skirt.



Gather top edge of skirt with two rows of shirring. Draw up to fit top of stool. Tack gathered edge to plastic-covered stool as for table.

Stitch cording all around edge of the right side of one of the pieces of plastic cut for cushion. Clip edges, as in L. Place two pieces of plastic for cushion right sides together. Stitch all around edges, leaving an 8-inch opening, as at M. Clip seams on curve as at N, to retain shape. Turn cushion and fill with kapok or cotton. Slip-stitch opening. Pat to shape.

Extra trim. If you wish to use bows of taffeta, as in O, make these of true bias about 12 inches wide and 24 inches long. Seam bias edges together. Turn right side out and make a bow for each side of dressing table.

in whe you trade in high, twin windows

BEFORE Grim-looking fireplace and high, twin windows were cold-looking, inhospitable

AFTER Bookshelves cover windows. To scale down its size, fireplace is concealed behind paneling of wide boards. Bricks are the same—like woodwork, they are painted turquoise to match wallpaper print. Carpet is a darker tone

BEFORE Poorly placed windows chop up wall space. Behind them, unseen, is a garden

AFTER To take advantage of view, the Jacobs removed twin windows, substituted single pane of fixed glass, framed like a shadow box. Top of storage cabinets is a useful buffet. Walls, draperies repeat the living-room colors

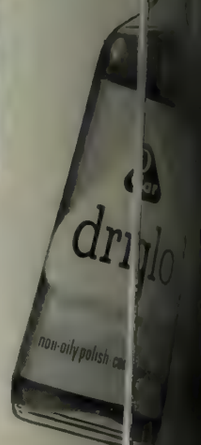
New for furniture! A lasting hand-rubbed l with a few easy wipes!

O-Cedar Dri-Glo is faster than old-fashioned wax, its rich luster lasts months longer than any other polish!

Now you can give your furniture a lasting hand-rubbed look with a few easy wipes. It's a snap with O-Cedar Dri-Glo.

Not a wax—contains silicone! Dri-Glo is O-Cedar's new, non-oily silicone polish for furniture. It covers wood with an invisible glass-like film that brings out all its natural color and gloss. Dri-Glo's clear, silky sheen lasts like wax, but eliminates the hard work of rubbing!

The 10-ounce bottle of Dri-Glo does all the furniture in the average 6-room house. And the lovely luster lasts months! Ask for Dri-Glo where you buy your cleaning supplies.



60 day shine in 60 seconds! Smooth on Dri-Glo, let it dry, polish for 1 minute or less. The deep, soft hand-rubbed look lasts for months.

Hot coffee won't mar this surface! Wipe away spills and sticky finger marks with a damp cloth. Zip—your lasting Dri-Glo luster gleams again.

Dust can't cling to Dri-Glo! There's no oily-film or sticky wax to catch dust. Dri-Glo's satin-smooth, dry finish stays bright with less dusting.

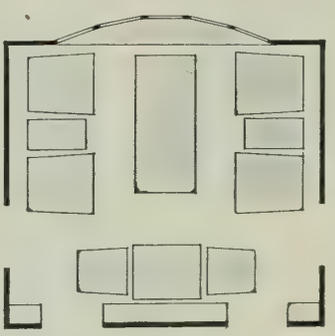
Nature help you decorate

with texture, design, and a view from the bay window

By Marguerite Cottington



When you have a view as breath-taking as the Clarence Godshalks' panoramic sweep of the Morton Arboretum in Lisle, Illinois, your decorating is more than half done. To finish, you simply supply comfortable chairs, and a subdued background that underscores Nature's colors. Here, it's a natural-colored hemp rug, light-finished wood furniture, textured wallpaper of split-bamboo design

Plan furnishings to double room's convenience, and you'll spend more time enjoying your view. On the wall opposite the bay, the Godshalks placed a small table. It's ideal spot for lunch—serves, too, as a study desk and table for games. Bookcase-cabinet wall offers plenty of storage room for games, books

Meat is money—take care of it

Careful meat storage pays you big dividends

By Peggy Kre

You hustle home with your wisely chosen packages of meats. Of course you planned your meals and were well armed with a shopping list when you arrived at the meat case. The meatman helped you select the right cuts. You're not through yet—if you're a dollar-stretching shopper. Not until you get the meat out of its market paper and into the refrigerator, as shown below.

The bigger the cut, the longer it keeps is the rule, so unless you have a freezer or a roomy free unit, don't plan to keep steaks and chops over t days, roasts more than four or five. you have an old violin that might be a genuine Stradivarius, don't expect the wood expert to tell you how old it is.

Do some woods breed bedbugs and cockroaches better than other woods?

No. Insects are indifferent to the kind of wood in which they live. Don't blame poor housekeeping on Mother Nature.

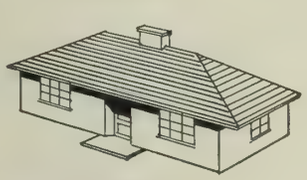
Is lumber on the market today inferior to lumber of the "good old days"?

You can get as good lumber today as you could in the days of Paul Bunyan. Lumber is now machined better, graded better, and seasoned better. Good lumber may be scarce in some communities, but you can still get it if you insist on buying by grade.

These are among the questions cheerfully answered each week at the Forest Products Laboratories. But every new mail brings in new questions.

"Is it true that a tree growing on a stormy crag is tougher than one growing in the valley?"

We suspect their answer to that one will again be a polite but firm "no."



Does a limb rise higher from the ground as the tree grows older?

This would require stretching of the interior wood, and trees don't grow that way. If there is a limb 10 feet from the ground now, that's where it'll be next year and the year after, unless it dies and falls off.

What is a hip roof? A hip roof (also known as a hipped roof) is a roof with sloping sides and sloping ends. If you see a continuous horizontal eave all the way around a house, that house has a hip roof.

What is a gable roof? Unlike a hip roof, a gable roof has sloping sides only. The ends are vertical—a continuation of the end wall of the house which runs all the way to the roof ridge.

attention and affection in ridiculous ways because she had never received them in normal ways. May was trying—wrongly, foolishly, but still trying. I hope that sometime she found the affection she sought.

The girl who babbles to her companions in the park and then looks around to see how many strangers are impressed, the boy who brags about the family car or about some adventure he never had, may be victims of inattention or indifference at home. Each, at any rate, has an inward picture of himself filling his rightful place in the world—but has chosen the one sure way of not finding it. For sooner or later, the difference between the fact and the fiction will be freely and cruelly pointed out to him by people who don't care.

And the same thing can happen to your child if he is allowed to dominate every scene in your home—if he's allowed to interrupt you whenever it suits him and to "perform" without restraint for all visitors. He will progress from embarrassing you to embarrassing himself—suddenly and painfully. It may take him a long time to live down some ill-timed display of the self-importance which you have allowed him to develop. The other kids won't care how he feels; they will remember only that he spoiled the gang's show by putting on one of his own.

But you, the parent, care a great deal. Only perhaps you don't know how to begin, how to take hold of this problem which you suddenly see is too big for your child to solve without help. Here's a safe general rule: Begin by trying to understand how he feels.

Remember how it felt to be 3 or 7 or 12, and what a bang you got out of a laugh or a word of praise or a look of astonishment from Mother or Dad? Remember how, having done it once, you felt you had to do it over and over and over again—the same way? On the positive side, your child's natural desire for and pleasure in the attention of others can be put to work for him through some activity which gives him a chance at definite, measurable achievement. He needs to know that he can and does make progress in something he enjoys doing. He needs to be shown himself as others see him. He needs criticism from someone he regards as authority.

Music, dancing, dramatics, or athletics may be the means of teaching your youngster that if he is going to show off successfully, he must put a great deal of energy into learning how. And the more he learns about what it really takes, the more modest he is likely to become about what he can do himself. Sports and the "performing" arts are not the only means to this discipline; any art, any hobby, is valuable.

With a little guidance, Janet can advance from imaginary faces, all a good deal alike, to portraits. Tom can sort out his collection of pretty stones into types of stones for the beginning of a small geological museum. Benny's photographs will gain in clarity and interest. Cindy will stop mispronouncing French phrases to impress her school friends and buckle down to really learning French.

Then, when your child has acquired some new knowledge or skill, let him display it, in moderation, with your approval and encouragement. Let him play in a tennis tournament, and you be there to watch. Let him appear in a play or a recital. Let the young musician play regularly for the family and occasionally, but briefly, for visitors. He will soon learn who, among his friends, is interested and who is not, and act accordingly. Let the collector, craftsman, or artist get up a hobby show with some of his friends, and be sure you attend it.

For it is up to you in the last analysis. If you show that you seriously and deeply care what he does, if your praise is given not casually but thoughtfully, if your censure is delivered not harshly but with reason and with love, if you can help your child be objective about himself, his abilities, his successes, his failures, then you can make your show-off more than socially acceptable. You can make him welcome in anybody's parlor.

What's right

It is the job of parents to determine the rules. Cleanliness is a matter of social custom which we learn gradually as we grow up. Sometimes it's hard for parents to have exactly the same ideas about the rules and to understand that they need to vary with a youngster's age and development. How much cleanliness they should demand of Jerry is rightfully based not only on the Wilsons' own feeling of self-respect, but also their concern for the opinions of neighbors.

What's wrong

In refusing to let Jerry play, Mrs. Wilson was forgetting that all children need the chance to play with sand and water, modeling clay, paints, and other "messy things." It's one way of learning how to use their hands and create something from everyday materials. True, Jerry will get his clothes, hands, face, and hair splattered if he plays in the mud, but Mrs. Wilson might try dressing him in clothing that is suitable and easily cleaned. Whatever Mrs. Wilson feels about the neighbors, it's more important for her to appreciate that Jerry's actions are completely normal and desirable for his age.

Letting children play freely with messy materials and dressing them suitably for such fun doesn't mean however, that you need surrender them to being perpetually dirty. Jerry should be learning that there are times when he is allowed to be dirty and other times when he has to be clean.

Jerry's father is undoubtedly right about its being natural for boys to be dirty. But he's apparently wrong about something else. Fathers are not always as sensitive as mothers as to what the neighbors will say. It is true that when a family fails to follow the standards commonly accepted in a neighborhood, their children may suffer through being ridiculed by other youngsters as "dirty and smelly."

Both Mr. Wilson and Mrs. Wilson are a little too rigid in their views. They should get together on when Jerry can play and get moderately dirty, regardless of the neighbor's views, and also when he should be learning to be clean and in accord with social custom.

Sun, soil, and where you plant it can make or break your garden.

Vegetables need at least a half day of sunshine daily, preferably in morning. They come off second best if pitted in competition with tree leaves and roots.

Plant as far as possible from trees in well-drained, fertile soil. As a working rule, soil that grows big weeds will grow big vegetables. Put your garden close to the kitchen—because vegetables taste better if prepared soon after picking.

After spading, pulverize the soil with a rake before you sow any seeds. Plant kinds your family likes, and avoid waste of land, seed, and work on unusable surpluses.

Home gardens need an inch of water per week for success. A canvas hose that leaks along its surface spreads water evenly on the soil, eliminates disease danger to wet leaves. Keep topsoil loose with a mulch around plants, or stir soil no more than one inch deep.

To get full production, make several sowings of short-harvest crops so one harvest follows another and you get top-quality vegetables until frost.

To plan the right number of sowings and when to make them, see the tables on page 224. Because there are both quick- and slow-growing kinds of most vegetables, check your seed catalogs for the time needed for the varieties you plant.

Here's the BIG 3 in vegetables

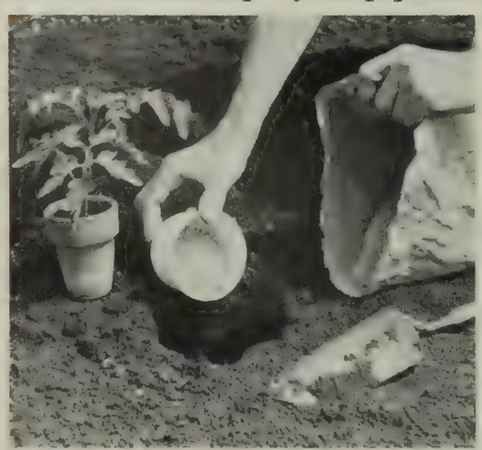
Tomatoes

Here's how to grow beans, tomatoes, sweet corn—tops for production, dollar return, tasty eating

Sweet corn

Gascoigne & Owen

By Dr. L. C. Gr

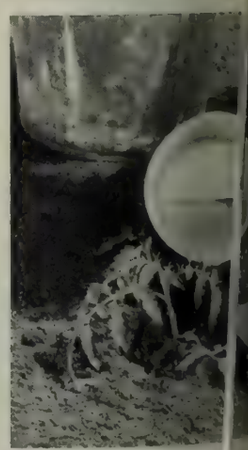


Rank the vegetables you like for the amount of food they will produce in your garden space, the dollar return for your work, and the zest they'll add to your summer eating. Odds are you'll rate snap beans, tomatoes, and sweet corn as indispensable—fresh or for canning or freezing.

Tomatoes and beans adapt especially well to small gardens, sweet corn where you can spare 2 square feet of ground per plant. Vigor, uniformity, and heavy yields—plus the fact ears come all at once—make hybrid sweet-corn varieties good for canning. Older, open-pollinated kinds are best for regular eating.

Wait to plant all three until the earth feels warm to your touch.

(See page 222 for "How to get the most from your vegetable garden.")



Follow these step-by-step planting procedures for best garden success

Tomato plants started indoors need sun, but not too high temperatures. Sow seed 50 days before setting out plants, about 2 weeks after last killing frost. Put ½ cup balanced plant food in hole and mix with soil. Cover mixture with fresh soil. Lift plants with their roots still intact in a ball of soil

Deep-set plants grow better tomatoes. If your plants are spindly, remove leaves from lower stalk and set roots and part of stalk in a trench 4 inches deep; roots will grow along stem to make root system sturdier. If plants are to be staked, it's safest to drive your stakes before the plants are set out

Know how to plant a shrub or tree

Success in growing healthy, beautiful shrubs and trees is mainly a matter of basic planning and care. Here are nine fundamentals to follow

By William R. Heard

Measure dimensions of the space you want shrubs to occupy before deciding which kinds to plant. You'll eliminate overgrowth and the need for heavy pruning with plants that mature at desirable size. Put tallest at corners

Success with shrubs and trees, as with most othe around your home, hinges on your good sense.

You'll need to plan the space you want to pla vance, buy the kinds that fit your wants and ho set them in the soil with care, and give them th up attention that means superior bloom, foliage

Close-knit groups are better than plantings
And they'll look better if all aren't the same hei

Over most of the country, you can plant trees in spring or fall, preferably before grow in spring, and after a hard frost when plants ar in fall. Best time in the Lower South is durin mant period in December and January.

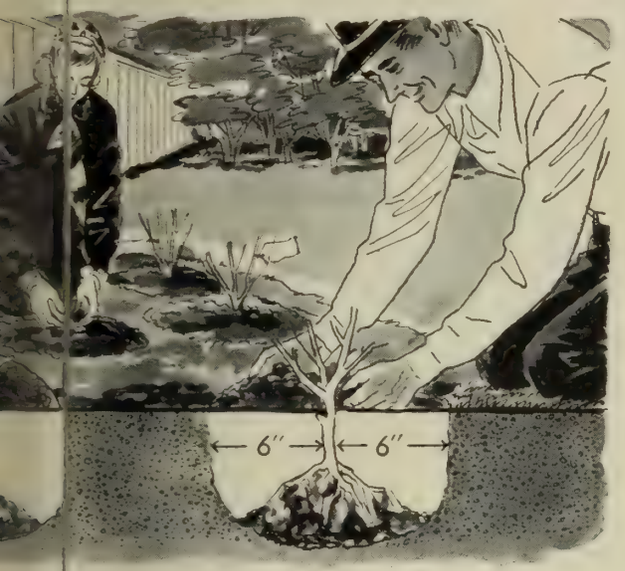
"B&B" means "balled and burlapped" i terms, applies to plants dug with a ball of about the roots with a tight burlap wrap. L tied up and the burlap on roots until plant is i Cut cord holding burlap to stem, and it rots

Sun and wind can injure or kill tender roots before you get the plant set. Keep roots cool and moist until holes are dug, or partially bury in garden if planting is delayed. Carry balled kinds you buy by the ball, not by the stems



Assemble the right tools for the job. You'll need a stakes for locating plants, garden hose or water bucket to keep loose soil off the lawn, and a garden cart to car ase lin indicate outlines of planting. Close-knit groups are lanting a line, and you'll avoid an open path between shrubs an to s plants at least 30 inches from house. Peel back the sod

Start with good soil. A pocket of sand or plaster left by your contractor can kill a healthy plant. Take out rocks, bricks, debris from area you are to plant; replace with good soil. Mix compost or peat into the soil, if possible

r shal w planting can spoil a plant's performance. Set ees no eper than they grew before. Set graft unions above roots oil leve Space border shrubs 36 inches between plant centers

Plant roots compete for food, water. If nearby tree or hedge-plant roots are dense, lay a root barrier of asbestos shingles to protect roots of your new shrub. Grow shade-tolerant plants for success near trees, fences, buildings and ees need water. Get yours off to a good start by poking hout a ozzle, into the soil every few inches as you fill the plant-lt mu onto the root system before leveling hole with loose soil

Long-range success lies in follow-up care. Plant food applied before and after flowering increases bloom size, hastens new growth. Arrange hose in position for slow, deep soakings weekly. Trim out dead, unsightly stems we can't quite trust people who employ subterfuges and counterfeits, who are hypocritical and not quite honest with us.

"I'd rather have my dad sizzling mad than cold and silent!" said 8-year-old Eric sagely. When asked what he meant by this, he elaborated. "Like when he gets frozen-faced mad. He never gets loud. Just cold. And he pretends like he's pleasant. I wish he'd be like Bob's father, full of yells and cusses. It would be a relief."

About the cruelest thing you can do, and the most dishonest, is to spank a child and say, "I'm doing this, not because I'm angry, but because I have to teach you . . ." You're mad and he knows it. And he knows you're lying! Suppose your hand slips with your temper, it's far better to be straight. "I'm sorry, Butch! I got mad at you." And by then you will no doubt feel sorry!

Perhaps your Butch will counter as 4-year-old Ann did, "I know, Mommy. I get mad and sorry, too." And perhaps then you'll feel as Ann's mother felt. "I knew from that we were friends."

All of this doesn't mean, though, that you will want to go slam-banging around, warring indiscriminately whenever the mood overtakes you. You can't kiss any man (or woman) every time you find one charming. Neither can you slap any child every time you find him annoying. You can do other things about it, however. You can let him in on your feelings in a number of ways. "I feel angry now!" in downright fashion is better than a masklike, honeyed

Frank Bowman used paints to get out his anger. "I discovered the trick one day when I was mad at my boss, and got hold of my kids' finger paints. I'm no artist. I just sit there and smear—well, and swear, too—and tell myself how abused I am by my boss, as I was once by my dad. Only, after a while, I come to see I'm abusing myself worse than anyone else is abusing me, and the madness usually fizzles out."

Louise Renton found herself getting "mad at everything, yet at nothing tangible." She felt she couldn't stand things much longer. Her children's incessant demands irritated her. Suddenly, Louise realized she was resenting her children's demands as she had resented her own mother's commands to wash the dishes, make the beds, help with the younger children, watch the pot on the stove, not stay out late.

When Louise talked over her discovery with a group in my office, she saw very clearly what she had been doing. She had been

What you should know about bug

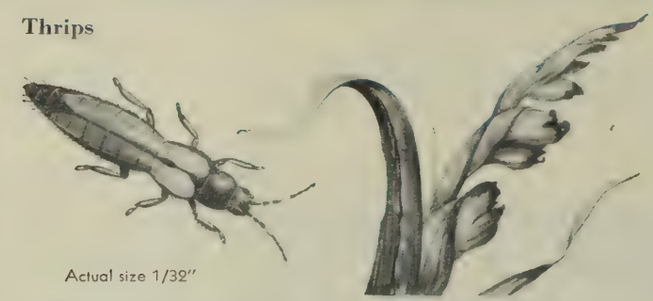
By Dale Somers

Here are 10 insect pests out to share your garden bonus—and how to control them

Aphids

What to look for. More than 200 kinds of these tiny plant lice suck juices, spread diseases on nasturtiums, roses, calendulas, carnations, mums, cherries, peaches, grapes, strawberries, peas, beans, spinach, cabbage, cucumbers. Form dense clusters beneath leaves, on stems and joints. Symptoms are leaf-curling, malformed flowers, weak plants.

What to do. Kill them with combined spray or dust of 1 percent rotenone; P-R mixture; or Lindane. Or spray with nicotine sulfate solution made by adding 1¼ teaspoons of 40 percent nicotine-sulfate mixture to a gallon of soapy water.



Leaf h

What to look for. Tiny, wedge-shaped bits of l green that fly up in clouds before you as you walk presence of leaf hoppers that feed under the leav dahlias, China-asters, grapes, raspberries, toma shrubs, and trees.

What to do. A 2 percent nicotine dust on the u leaves is effective. Or control them with chlordane A 3 to 5 percent DDT-sulfur mixture also is effecti use on melons or vine crops. Dust every 7 days, o 10 days, for best results.

Thrips

What to look for. Of greatest concern to home gardeners are flower thrips that feed on roses, gladiolus, dahlias, onions. Wee but active, they enter developing buds to feed on tender parts. Flower buds may not open; blooms may be deformed, petals flecked, discolored. The pest also works underneath husks of bulbs stored over winter.

What to do. Start dusting your glads when the first spikes peek out. Continue to use 5 percent DDT in a dusting sulfur at least once a week until they bloom. Sprinkle same-strength dust on stored bulbs. Use DDT or Lindane on roses and onions, but don't apply to onions if tops are to be eaten.

Re

What to look for. These minute mites suck jui and tender plant tissue of phlox, roses, cucum hawthorn, strawberries, and many fruits, ve greens, and other ornamental plants. Effect is fol like stippling, and unthrifty plants. Tiny web feeding vicinity; spiders look like red dust if you over a sheet of white paper.

What to do. Dust or spray under leaves with w use azobenzene. Or use ½ pound cabinetmaker lons of water. Don't use sulfur when temperat Garden sanitation is an effective precaution.

First step in controlling the insects that can sear garden beauty and cut deeply into yields is to recognize the pests themselves—and to recognize the damage they can do in your garden.

Secondly, keeping harmful insects in check means developing "allies" and bringing several factors to bear on the problem.

Predatory insects—lacewing fly, praying mantis, ladybug—will help you clean out pests. They deserve a better fate than spraying. Birds, notably wrens, prevent untold insect damage.

Cultivating soil in the growing season and spading in the fall destroys some pests. You can starve out others by rotating plantings from year to year. Late plantings in pest-infested places will help you escape first broods. Keep weeds cut and remove the trash that may harbor insects over winter.

Before turning to chemicals, be sure the condition you want to treat is caused by an insect. Too much pla too little water, can m damaged by insects.

Here are chemicals pesticides—not comm safe and effective. Ta your store; check wit tents of what you bu scribers' Information formation you need t

The diary of a plain dirt gardener

By Harry R. O'Brien

May 3 was the joint birthday of the two young gentlemen of the household, and, as always for family birthdays, Maggie baked a big angel cake

May 1 Warm today—and David moved our new duck to a pen he made for it out of wire netting on the back lawn. My, how that duck is growing. Dear me—no name for it yet. We don't want to make the mistake the boys did on the old duck that we had for 13 years. They named it Alexander, and then it laid eggs. Anybody have any good name suggestions for a beautiful lawn and garden duck?

As I was spading in the rose bed, I kept turning up earthworms. Several times I carried some to the duck in his pen. At first, he looked scared. Then he grew curious. He gobbled them up—and looked for more. "What a wonderful world I am in," he seemed to say.

May 2 One of the biggest items of garden news in recent years is in full evidence now alongside the front cross path in our garden. It is the collection of the new John Evelyn Hybrids—a new family of narcissus brought from Holland since the war. I put out a few bulbs last fall of each of the entire eight varieties available.

Seven of these by now are in full bloom, and they make news. They are twice or more larger than good John Evelyn, one of their parents and itself notable. They are so large and so beautiful, they fairly take your breath away. The plants are so thrifty, and the flowers have amazing substance. I've just been out taking color pictures of them. To take my pictures more readily, I cut one flower of each and put it in a little pitcher. After I finished, Maggie took the cut blooms indoors. They stayed good as indoor flowers for eight days.

I have a number of other varieties of new narcissus, too, planted last fall. One of the most lovely is the white Mount Hood, with a large trumpet which, when it first opens up, has a faint yellowish tint that soon fades to white. Some of the other new ones are Titanic, President LeBrun, Inglescombe, Insurpassable, and two pinks, Mrs. Backhouse and Pink Fancy.

There is no need for me to describe these. They can be found listed in the catalogs of the bulb specialists. Much better would be a visit to some garden, either public or private, where they can be seen in bloom about now.

May 3 Along came Neighbor Russell and Mary, his wife, to see our new narcissus. Come fall, they aim to order some bulbs of same. There was a merry debate as to just which varieties were best. But they wrote down Brookville and Wodan, of the John Evelyn Hybrids, at the top of the list, and then Mount Hood.

As they were here, what should I spy flitting around our bushes, but our little friend the catbird, back from his winter down South. Right at that minute, there was a brown thrasher singing an aria, high up in the top of a maple tree. So the catbird will have to tune up, too, and come on the air with his own assortment of tunes.

But sad, oh sad, I never did get my little electric hotbed going. So with shame, I paused at the seed store on my way home tonight and bought a dozen each of Marion Market and Golden Acre cabbage plants.

Also this was the joint birthday of the two young gentlemen of the household. As usual, Maggie baked a big angel cake. I had to hurry off right after dinner because our men's rose club was having its usual monthly meeting. What do you suppose we talked about on the program? First, final check on plans for our big rose show in June. Second, review of control of pests.

May 4 Summertime. Thermometer at 80 by worktime. So I put on my summer garde light-colored shir clean pair of cott Once again I took started in on the doing to the ros process but it pa cided. Rain halt wet running to t change clothes. B and I was out ag of downright ha once to gather a asparagus of the later than usual meeting. I had promised to show up and take part in a panel discussion of roses. Bless my soul, if Mrs. Maggie didn't leave the dirty dishes in the sink, put on her new spring suit, and go along. Usually I go alone to such meetings. But her going along has its handicaps.

Maybe I shot noon today I study, doing sor there than at stuck her head see she was all spring finery.

In that discussion, as I was questioned, I had explained how I take the spade and spade over all my rose beds in spring. On the way home, Maggie criticized my remarks. "You should have explained," said she, "that you can do it that way because your roses are planted further apart than most people plant." She is right, of course.

Maggie let the duck out of its pen. Chasing it, she stumbled and fell. And clutching wildly, she caught it May 7 "What makes part of the rose rows look so much cleaner than other parts?" asked Maggie, as I labored by my lonesome self.

"That shows the difference between where the boys worked and I worked," says I.

Somehow, I guess I've failed to educate the boys to the need of doing detailed and exact garden work. But they are both experts at going out and ripsnorting through beds and rows with the little tractor. Prefer it to the wheel hoe.

May 8 Relax—the worst is over. All the rose beds by now have been spaded. Every bush has had a personal going over with the hand hoe. All the beds have had a cultivation. While I finished up, David was getting the main vegetable garden space ready with the tractor.

I whipped up my special gardener's pancakes for our friend, Mary Williamson, originator of Wabash (iris) radishes and peas are by now coming on fast. Then hand-hoed the new strawberry bed. Great are the merits of power and machine gardening. But with strawberries, there is no subsitutue for careful, exact, detailed, close-up hand-hoeing. With a two-pronged weeding hoe, I got millions of little weeds just germinating. Easier that way.

May 13 Back from a business trip of a few days, and find that David has brought home, for trying out, a new kind of little garden tractor. Hope I get a chance to run it.

May 16 Disaster on the home front. Maggie let the duck out of its pen on the rear lawn. Tried to catch it. Couldn't—and you should have seen her dash about. Alas, she stumbled. Fell headlong. Reached out to grab something—and caught the duck.

May 17 Something happened today that makes parents glad they have children. It so happens that at the moment I'm sorta sick with spring flu—you know, sore throat, etc. David went out tonight and planted our main crop of potatoes—four rows across the vegetable patch. He cut seed pieces, made the furrows, put plant food in bottom of furrows, and worked it in. Did the whole job.

May 20 It is a question whether David is growing up or settling down. But with nary a word of telling, he mowed all the grass. Then he astonished the world by going out and hoeing four rows of iris in the big bed at the back. By the way, the table iris in the bed across the path is coming into bloom. This table iris, with the wiry stems, the miniature blooms—well, you should see Maggie snip it off for arrangements indoors.

May 22 At breakfast Maggie was making oration because I never pruned the lilacs enough, and they shut out her view from the front windows. She didn't listen to me finish my explanation, for she interrupted to ask why we didn't have the right tool to prune off limbs from shade trees from the ground. At this point the boys went into a loud argument over brakes on autos.

May 25 Main news today is that the rugosa roses have come in bloom, as they grow against the fence hard by the turn-around space in front of the garage. This rose is ironclad hardy and not bothered by pests. Maggie says there are still some yellow blooms on the hugonis rose, another beautiful species.

Then she called me over to the east side of the yard in excited tones. There was my hybrid rugosa rose, Sarah Van Fleet, all out in bloom. Maybe it is foolish to even mention that great rose, for there are only a few places in the country where it can be bought. The bush of ours in the shrub border has been there about 20 years and is about eight feet high.

Started in to give the roses their second feeding of plant food. Then mulched a few rows with coffee grounds. This is a pure experiment, you understand. I was able to get some grounds from a nearby plant where prepared instant coffee is made. Maggie wants to know if she should put sugar and cream with it.

May 26 As the boys and I were working, along came Maggie. The first Oriental poppy was out. She wanted to know if it were something important, the color looked so different and attractive. "You bet it is important," says I. "That's one of the new Curtis varieties that I planted two summers ago. Mr. Curtis is just about the most important originator of new Oriental poppies in the world today."

Forgot to mention yesterday that I put up the annual scarecrow in the oncoming sweet corn. Nailed it up. Put on my old overall coat—the one with the buttons off. On top nailed that old felt hat of Maggie's—the one that Scratch, the dog, chewed up. Tied on a red bandana to wave in the breezes.

May 27 As day declined and I was down on my knees doing some hand pulling of weeds, along came David, on the long way around to the garage for the lawn mower. He stopped and watched me.

"Suppose we trade jobs," says I. "You do this weeding and I'll mow the lawn." As he walked rapidly off, I heard him say, "No, I think we make most progress when each one sticks to his specialty."

Then Maggie and I put on our Sunday clothes and hurried downtown to the iris show being staged by our local iris society. Then to a dinner and meeting of our sixth district of the American Iris Society. Besides the local folks, a lot of old friends from elsewhere were here—Mrs. Waters and Mrs. Emigholz from Cincinnati and Walter Welsh from out in Indiana, who's an authority on dwarf iris, and dozens of others.

There was our good friend Mary Williamson, too, from Bluffton, Indiana, and after the meeting, I sorta overheard Mary and Maggie talking together. It was something about pancakes. On the way home, I learned more details.

May 28 Maggie had invited Mary Williamson to our house for breakfast. Had guaranteed her that I would cook up some of my special gardener's pancakes. So when Mary drove in, there I was in the kitchen, apron on, ham about cooked, and batter ready.

Now the pancakes weren't bad. But I was surely ashamed for Mary to see our poor display of iris. There was one stalk of Wabash in bloom though, that saved the day. Mary, you see, is the identical young woman who originated Wabash, introduced it and with it, won the Dykes Medal.

NO JOB for a woman?
What do you think?

NO! says CHARLES H. TURNER

YES! says MRS. DAY

Should you buy that one-third-lighter Koroseal hose and let lawn sprinkling be a woman's job? If your wife never uses the hose maybe you don't need Koroseal. It costs a little more—but only $9.80 for 50 feet and makes up for it by being so easy to handle. It is guaranteed to last ten years.

"Garden Club", also made by B. F. Goodrich, also guaranteed 10 years, is lighter than most rubber hose, a wonderful value.

But Koroseal is a third lighter still (weighs only half as much as some hose). It's clean; the surface has a high polish, doesn't hold dirt. Leave it out all year round if you want to. Its brilliant colors may fade a little, but neither sun nor air will weaken it.

SOME MEN SAY NO

"I prefer to do those outdoor chores like sprinkling the lawn," says Mr. Charles H. Turner, of Atlanta, Ga. "I don't think my wife should have to do it. Besides, I need the exercise, and that's why I save money with 'Garden Club' hose."

"Lawn and garden work is a pleasure to me," says Mrs. Norma Day, of East Point, Georgia. "It's not really work at all, especially when I'm using our new Koroseal hose. It's so light I can move it around as I please."

Look for the label. Decide for yourself but look for the label if you want real Koroseal. Every length is plainly marked. Be sure you see the name to be sure you're getting the real thing. The B. F. Goodrich Company, Industrial & General Products Division, Akron, Ohio.

Try these play ideas on your children

By Lou Richardson

A plank, some canvas, and a piece of plywood will help keep your cowboys and Indians riding their own range

Fasten a bracket or support to a corner of your garage; then attach simple undercarriage and use the plank as a teeter-totter

By leaning the same plank at an angle against an orange crate or large box, the boys have an incline for car races, and many other games that boys make up

Place the plank across two supports on garage; children can play house or store. Add canvas for shade. Good display place for the youngsters' treasures

Pin canvas to the side of garage and stake down; the Indian chiefs have a tent. It's a welcome refuge where the young Hop-a-longs can take cover during attacks by enemy raiding parties pasting a picture of a demanding personage onto her children. She had carried this picture over from her childhood. She was letting out anger that she never realized she had felt toward her mother. Unwittingly she had been letting her children be substitute recipients for feelings that had not come out in their proper time and place.

Spread waterproof canvas on ground, and it's a playhouse. And your children can play outside on it even if ground is wet. It takes hard wear, too

Many of us do this. We've been taught that the most despicable anger that a person can feel, the most condemnable resentment is toward one's parents. And yet, as a child, you were bound to have your resentful moments as all children do. Don't you remember feeling abused, and threatening under your breath to drown yourself or run away? Now you can say in tempered fashion: "They did what they did for my good."

Resentment isn't always reasonable, but it still is real. The more willing we are to go back into the deep, dark thoughts of our childhood and to admit the unloving moments we had against our parents, the easier it will be to get away from those inexplicable angry feelings we have now against our loved ones.

It will help if you and your mate can develop into good listeners for each other at moments when one of you is involved in anger. For talking and "griping" and "spilling" are the simplest ways for adults to reduce their resentments. The thing to know and remember is that a good listener is one who listens with a sympathetic ear rather than a scolding tongue.

Of course this won't be possible all the time. On many occasions, you'll be angry simultaneously, angry at each other. Again, being forthright works best. And you needn't worry that your children won't understand.

Of course, it isn't good for children to grow up in an atmosphere of perpetual or intense conflict. But occasional quarrels between their parents are as natural as anger.

When parents differ as all people differ at times, the point isn't that a child should witness all. Nor should we have to explain all the gory details. The point is that we are frank about the fact that we do have moments in which we feel mean and angry toward each other.

Then, as children see that we work things through, as they see that peace can be restored after a battle, their confidence grows. They come to understand that all human beings are human. That no vital companionship is insipid, milktoast and sugar, but that there is struggle and clash in every close relationship and that this is not apart from but rather a part of loving. They come to know that differences can be taken openly in stride and be worked through, and this will stand them in good stead with their own husbands and wives when they grow up.

The Everetts worked things out in this way. "We've learned to spill to each other and to tolerate each other's outbursts and anger. It doesn't throw us like it used to. We know it's human, and we're human, and all our feelings count—not just the pretty ones. We've arranged, too, for each child to have his own special time every day for a talk or play with one of us, whomever he chooses. We try to avoid interruptions. That's their own time. Fifteen or 20 minutes does it. Sometimes they tell us about things like Tim's finding a bird's nest under the eaves where he shouldn't have climbed. Nothing told during this time is censored either then or later. I've found, though, that if I don't jump on them but just keep listening, when a thing isn't right the children admit it eventually all by themselves. And even it they don't, talking it out makes it better.

"Our children have found, as have many others, that with things talked out, you get through faster to the positive warmth that human beings find most sustaining. There's more room somehow for the good feelings to come in and grow." That Everett conclusion, dear reader, is pretty sound!

Painting metal. Don't pile up layers of paint over rust. It neither looks good nor wears well. Scrape down to bare metal with sandpaper, steel wool, or a stiff wire brush. century, there is still so much demand for it that the price remains in the medium range for good peonies.

Even among the better-known double peonies, you've a wide choice both as to form and color and also earliness. A good peony list will include indications of the blooming season of each variety—early, midseason, late.

To get the effect pictured on pages 60-61, plant early-blooming peonies so they'll open along with the iris, for which the main season comes just ahead of peak peony bloom over most of the country.

Richard Carvel is the best early double among the bright reds in the popular price range. It's delightfully fragrant, and blooms freely. Adolphe Rousseau is darker, a ruby red, also early enough to combine with pale yellow and blue iris.

The big white peony balls that show just above the Golden Eagle iris on page 61 are Frankie Curtis, known as the "white Jules Elie." New Era is also very similar.

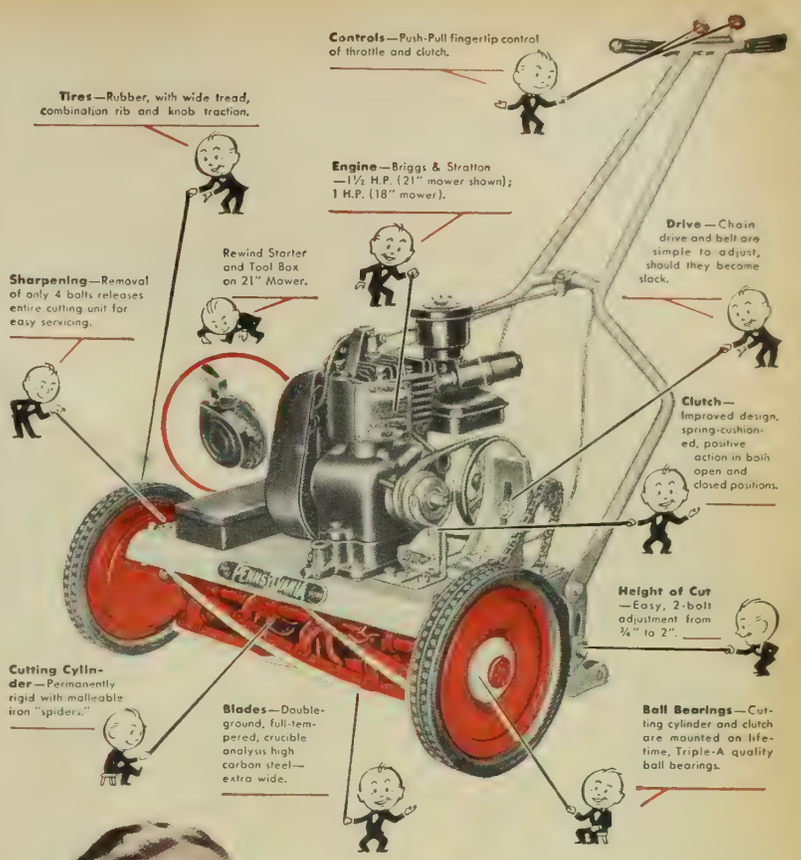
The real Monsieur Jules Elie is the justly popular rose-pink so widely grown by commercial firms for the early part of the peony season. Each flower expands into a gigantic bomb. And each season the performance is just as amazing, just as delightful as before. For showmanship, combine Jules Elie with a light blue Siberian iris such as Amelia Earhart or a clump of aromatic white dictamnus. The small blue butterflies of the iris and the fluffy spikes of the dictamnus supply excellent contrast, make the huge peony bombs look even larger.

Do this first. If you're sold on having fabulous color in your garden every May and want a high peak of bloom right after the tulips fade, do this: Decide on how much space you have to devote to it. To bloom well, both iris and peonies must have full sun for half of each day.

They need soil that's well drained. They cannot compete successfully with the roots of trees or hedges.

You plant roots—not seeds—this summer or early fall. You must protect the plants from damage by breakage, flooding, fire, and from drift and vapor of any chemical weed killer you should be using on your lawn nearby.

You can expect your first bloom next May. After that, with ordinary care, the plants and bloom will increase. Iris needs to be reset, usually after the third year. But peonies, if well planted, can be left in the same spot for 10 to 15 years. I know of one thriving plant that's been left undisturbed for 35 years.



How to plan. Allow a minimum space of three feet each way for each peony. Four feet is much better if you have the space.

Iris travels a little each season. So be sure you set each root with the green fan of leaves to the side you're willing for the plant to move.

Lift your entrance out of the ordinary

For narrow-border beauty

Where passenger traffic is not a problem, try this eye-catching idea. Set panels of metal lath painted white in a fence made of sturdy 2x2 lumber. Train a Henry Clematis, Clematis henryi lawsoniana, on each panel and flank with delphiniums. Set a peony in front to shade the vine's roots. For more accent, cream or golden-yellow iris and daylilies in lemon yellow combine well

Set off a shrub with brick

The pattern of bricks set in sand offers contrasting texture for a 2-foot strip between drive and property line. For a different effect, leave small soil pockets for the Everblooming Honeysuckle, Lonicera heckrotti, which has two-tone crimson and yellow blossoms all summer. This variety won't get out of hand as easily as some, does well in most soils, and gives you all-summer fragrance

Or fit your strip with flagstone

Front a lot-line rail fence with flagstones for another narrow border variation that lets you get out of the car anywhere along the drive you stop. Plant grapes in the soil pockets and train the vines on the rails. Set the flagstones in sand for good drainage. If the fence is in a place that gets more shade than sun, an ivy vine may be more successful. Either way, you eliminate strip mowing

For a better show next spring, buy 3 to 10 plants of a kind and plant them as a clump. Space the roots 8 to 10 inches apart, fans outward, with a good root in the middle of each of the larger clumps. Iris clumps shaped like a figure eight look well in a long border that you view from the side.

I know of no better way to arrive at a workable arrangement, one that's good for the plants and good to look at, than to start with a bundle of stakes. To help you visualize color, stick strips of colored construction paper on the tips, or use little cloth samples. You'll find it helps wonderfully.

How to combine. Since you're planning for a show that will repeat for several years at least, doing something serious in the way of color planning is very worthwhile.

See as many peony and iris plantings as you can right away. Study good catalogs. Then order soon. Ask for early delivery. That will be July for iris in the northern half of the country. September planting is better for southern gardens.

Peonies can be planted from mid-September to late November.

Recommended: The four groupings given here will provide a good start toward the gorgeous garden show we've been talking about. The varieties are all rated highly by experts. Their comparatively low cost results from a plentiful supply of stock.

One plant of Peony Richard Carvel, an early-blooming, bright red double. Set a clump of three plants Iris Gloriole or Iris Great Lakes (light blue) on one side, a larger or smaller group of Iris Wabash on the other. Wabash is very tall—to 40 inches—has a pure white top and bright purple lower half to each flower.

One plant of Peony Helen, a light, pure pink single. And one clump of the starchy white Iris Winter Carnival and a clump, larger or smaller than Winter Carnival, of Iris Nightfall or Indian Hills. Plant both, if you've room, so that late buds of the iris will be certain to open with the best of the peony flowers.

One plant of Peony King of England, dark red Japanese type with dull satin finish, mingled red and chamois-buff pompon in center. Plant a clump of tall Iris Ming Yellow to one side and back of the peony. Add white dictamnus and the soft medium blue of the Iris Missouri at the other side.

One plant of Peony Edulis Superba, medium rose-pink double, valuable because it blooms in time for Decoration Day. Surround it with clumps of soft yellow Iris Desert Gold, the giant cream-white Iris Gudrun, and the black-violet Iris Sable. Tuck some gold and pansy-purple Johnny-jump-ups down in front.

What are you going to tell a youngster?

Questions about religion:

"Does God like me?"

Parents explain the subject of God to their children in various ways, depending upon their own religious beliefs. While there is certainly no harm in describing God as all-powerful and all-seeing, whatever you do, don't describe God as a fearsome person who descends upon little boys and girls in a fury if He catches them doing something wrong. The best answer is: "God loves you and all his children. He loves you best when you are a very good boy."

"Why do Johnny and his folks go to a different church than we do?"

Discrimination is not born into a child. He won't pick it up unless he learns it from his family or his friends. If you want your children to have a love for democracy, never say that Johnny is different or that the church or synagogue he attends is inferior to the one you attend. The best answer would be: "Many people go to different churches in this country, but they are all nice people and they all love God, just as we do."

Questions about family love:

"Do you love me or Ruthie more?"

The average young child is likely to become jealous when a new brother or sister enters the household, particularly since his folks have to spend more time with the baby than they can with him. This question reflects a child's insecurity. The answer he thinks he wants is: "We love you more." The answer he should get, however, is: "We love you both the same." Tell him, that when he was a baby and unable to take care of himself, you also spent a lot of time with him.

"Can I marry Mommy?"

This poser really gives many parents the willies and often causes them to lose their sense of balance. If they act scandalized and indicate to their little son that he has said a horrible thing, he may become so frightened of his mother that he will actually be afraid to go near her. Actually, a child has no deep, dark, dangerous thoughts when he poses a question of this kind. It's a very natural question for him to ask. He should get a matter-of-fact answer, something of this nature: "No, dear, children don't marry their mothers or fathers." If the child follows this up by asking, "Why not?" the most effective answer would be: "Well, you usually marry somebody your own age."

"Can I marry sister?"

Like the previous question, this should be answered simply and without involved explanations that may cause the child to dwell more and more on this situation. "No, dear, boys don't marry their sisters. They marry girls from different families," is an answer that will probably fill the bill.

Questions about divorce:

"Why are you and Daddy getting divorced?"

ARDENS, .Y, 1951

The child who comes up with an off-color word picked up in the street or at school will naturally want to know exactly why he is being told not to say it again. Many parents make the mistake of calling down the wrath of God on him unless he promises never to repeat the word in the future. Others answer by saying, "Because if you do, I'll spank you so hard you won't forget it." This kind of answer explains nothing and forces the child to think that the dirty word must be extremely important if it gets his parents so upset. Next time that he wants to upset them for any reason, he'll know exactly how to do it. The best answer is: "Nice boys don't say the kind of word that you just said. We want you to be nice, and we're sure that you want to be nice."

Then, if he continues using the word to shock you, your best course is to ignore it until he forgets about the expression.

"Why did you tell a lie, Mommy?"

When Mother informs Mrs. Jones over the phone that she can't make the bridge party that night because Junior is sick, she should be careful that Junior isn't listening on the bedroom extension. Inevitably, however, parents get caught in white lies, and if they try the casual explanation that they were only "playing games with Mrs. Jones," they will soon find their child beginning to "play games" with them.

The best answer to this question is: "Well, dear, I just couldn't make it tonight, but I was afraid Mrs. Jones would feel very bad if I told her that, so I made up that little story about your being sick. I meant well by doing it because I didn't want to hurt Mrs. Jones' feelings, but it isn't really a nice thing to do, and I'm going to try not to do it again."

"What's the difference between boys and girls?"

This is another perfectly natural question for a growing child to ask, but it often puts parents into a state of embarrassed confusion trying to answer it. Parents who tell their child that "only naughty boys ask such questions" are only inviting their youngster to work his own imagination overtime. A little boy will keep wondering—he sees little girls and he knows they're not built the same way he is. A little girl may feel there's something wrong with her because she's missing something which she sees on little boys. It is important, therefore, that a young child be answered in this fashion: "All little boys are built differently than the little girls. Boys are built like their daddies, and girls are made the same way as their mommies.

"Where do babies come from?"

This age-old question, a historic source for comedy material on radio, stage, and screen, still remains a soul-searching problem for many parents who can't seem to decide whether to answer in terms of fact or fantasy. A surprising number of parents still resort to that old saw: "The stork brings them." That's the wrong answer, for the same reason we've mentioned before: Sooner or later, a pick up tidbits; where beavers work unconcernedly in the marshes, and bull moose stick their ugly whiskers into your camera.

Or how does a land of ice and snow in the middle of July appeal to your love of adventure? And roads so narrow and steep that you'll learn what it really means to "hug a mountainside"? Would you care to warm your very bones before the sun has topped the mountain peaks, in waters so hot that they send clouds of steam into the crisp surrounding air?

If this sounds like the vacation your family has always wanted, pack your warm travel clothes and head for the Canadian Rockies. "Fifty Switzerlands in One" the travel folders call them, because they cover an area far greater than that of the Swiss Alps. It is this overwhelming mass of grandeur, this seemingly endless chain of snow-capped peaks which makes them one of Nature's most colossal productions.

If you're a trout fisherman, you'll find dozens of lakes and streams, continually stocked from hatcheries at Banff and Jasper. In June, July, and August, the season is open for Rocky Mountain whitefish, and for Dolly Varden, Brook, Brown, and Great Lake trout; the season for Cutthroat and Rainbow opens July 1. A 7-day license is $1; one for the entire open season for all kinds of fish is $2.25.

Your actual mileage for the entire trip into Canada—border to border—will be 1,079 miles, including 198.4 miles of side trips. If your car averages 18 miles to the gallon, you'll use 59.9 American gallons, or 49.9 Canadian gallons—remember, the Imperial gallon is 20 percent larger: 5 Imperial gallons equal 6 United States ones. Pause long enough to see the Canadian Pacific Railways bridge which rises 307 feet from the valley floor, which it spans in 1 mile and 47 feet. Completed in 1909, it is said to be the longest, highest bridge of its type.

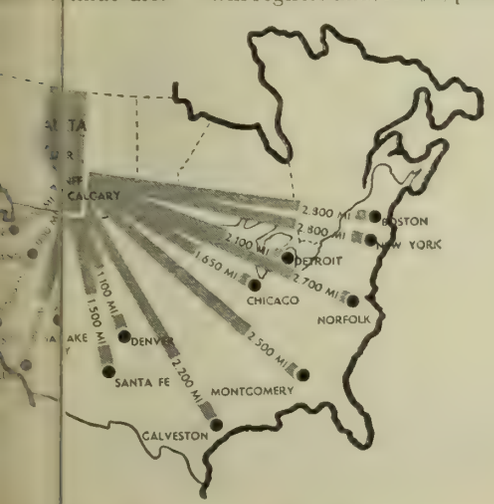
At MacLeod take Highway 2 to Calgary, your overnight stopping place. There are modern motels along both sides of the highway just south of town, with rates of $7 or $8 per day for four.



Be sure to take the children to Dinosaur Park on Prince George's Island, where, in addition to brilliantly colored, life-sized plaster replicas of prehistoric monsters, there is an extensive zoo.

Second day—Calgary to Banff: 82 miles.

Leave Calgary early in the morning on Highway 1, following the Bow River all the way to Banff. As you drive westward across the plains, the small bumps on the distant horizon seem to grow ever taller, and as you approach them, appear to be a solid wall. Just as the mountains are towering over you, you round a turn, and there is the pass through the Rockies.

Be prepared for temperamental weather. You can't always trust crisp, sunny mornings with a bright blue, cloudless sky to remain so. You may leave the plains in full sunshine, only to be met by a terrific thunderstorm in this first high pass. Lightning may leap in blinding flashes, and the thunder clap in booming reverberations from peak to peak and down through the valleys, while white sheets of rain obscure the road. Or perhaps a hailstorm will whip around you with equal fury. By the time you arrive at the park entrance, however, the sun may break forth again upon a shining, clean-washed world of snow-capped peaks, rising one behind the other as far as the eye can see.

Here at the park entrance, you will register and, for $2, purchase a

Banff National Park covers an area of 2,585 square miles. Banff and Lake Louise are its best-known resorts. The little town of Banff snuggles in the green valley of the Bow River, completely surrounded by mountains. This is the best place to stock up on fresh meats, vegetables, fruits, and bakery goods if you intend to prepare any of your own meals.

Third day—Sight-seeing in Banff.

Attractions at Banff include a visit to the Banff Nuisance Grounds (artistic name for the city dump), where you can get a closeup of bears feeding, and sight-seeing launch trips on the Bow River. The river trip provides excellent views of broad, slope-topped Mount Rundle and slender Mount Edith, whose sharply pointed peak all aspiring members of the Canadian Alpine Club must scale unaided.

A 10-minute drive from Banff up the winding road on Stoney Squaw Mountain will bring you to the Ski Lodge on Mount Norquay. From here you can take a breath-taking ride on the 3,240-foot chair lift. It rises through a vertical distance of more than 1,300 feet to deposit you at the 7,000-foot level ($1.50 per person). If you're lucky, you may see a herd of bighorn sheep grazing beside the lift. For splendid views of peaks and ranges on the eastern side of the Athabaska River, turn left at the Jasper railroad station and drive past the public campgrounds at Patricia Lake (3 miles) to Pyramid Lake. The lake lies at the foot of massive Pyramid Mountain, which you've seen towering in the distance ever since you got close to Jasper. Now you're close enough to see its vivid reds, oranges, and purples reflected in the cold, blue waters of the lake. You can fish in the lake and picnic on the little island reached via a narrow footbridge.

An effortless trip, starting from the huge totem pole which stands beside the railway station on the main street, is the 4-mile drive across the Athabaska River to Jasper Park Lodge. The grounds of this large log hotel with its numerous surrounding guest cabins are a fairyland of flowers, and unless you see for yourself the spacious lobby, you can't imagine anything quite like it for rustic luxury. Just as the Canadian Pacific's Banff Springs Hotel remains true to its exterior medieval fortress appearance in all its inside appointments, just so does the Lodge maintain its appearance of being created from the surrounding forests.

Maligne Canyon is reached by a winding drive from the east edge of town through the lovely, green forests around Lake Edith and an easy ascent to the Maligne Canyon Tearoom and picnic area. Park your car here. This is one canyon where you explore from the top down. The trip is well worth taking, but heed a word of warning. There are four bridges which cross the canyon at various levels, and on these are the only guardrails you'll see. The steep downward path follows closely along the canyon rim, and without a danger signal, makes one right-angle turn to the left where a stumble would roll you over the edge. Keep the children in check and don't pose on outcropping boulders. Finally, remember that the return trip is a steep climb.

Q. Which insulation should I choose?

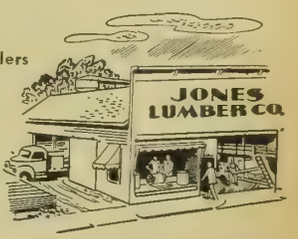
☐ Loose fill ☐ Batt ☐ Reflective Blanket

A. A reflective blanket insulation offers two important advantages. First, it will not pack down or sag to leave thinly protected areas. Second, an insulation like new reflective KIMSUL* provides a double barrier against heat loss (many-layer fiber blanket and reflective aluminum cover). The cover also acts as a vaporseal to shut out condensation.

Q. How much does insulation cost?

☐ $50 ☐ $150 ☐ $600

A. In the average 6-room house, complete insulation costs less than a good easy chair—about $150. New KIMSUL blanket insulation with Reflective Vaporseal employs the most effective method of stopping heat loss ever devised. It makes possible yearly fuel savings up to 44%—and pays for itself within just a few years.



Q. How much cooler is an insulated home in summer?

☐ Up to 15° ☐ Up to 5° ☐ None

A. It varies with each insulation, but new Reflective KIMSUL offers maximum protection. Lowers room temperatures as much as 15° on hottest summer days. In winter, it keeps your home warmer, healthfully free of drafts, and helps maintain humidity at the comfort level.

Q. Where is insulation sold?

☐ Building material dealers ☐ Lumber dealers

A. In the case of KIMSUL, both answers are correct. And most dealers can arrange to have KIMSUL installed for you, or you can install it yourself. Provides lifetime protection for your home, plus resistance against fire, vermin and mold.

Sixth day—Jasper to Lake Louise Junction: 149 miles.

Now for your second journey through the Icefields. This return trip gives you a second chance at a cloudless day.

At Lake Louise Junction, the Canadian Pacific's log station, post office, and two small stores are the whole town. Temple View, an excellent modern camp with 16 spacious, well-planned cabins, and a tearoom is ½ mile south of the station right on the Bow River at the foot of Mount Temple (11,636 feet). Here you may rent a cabin (two bedrooms, one with twin beds, kitchen with breakfast nook, bath, and long living room with native-stone fireplace) for $7 a day for four. Unless you prefer a hotel, make this your headquarters for the next three nights. Your wood boxes are filled twice a day. You can cook your own meals if you like and have a blazing log fire at night to offset the chill which creeps down off the snows on Mount Temple.

Seventh day—Sight-seeing in Lake Louise area.

Lake Louise itself is reached via a 3-mile drive up a winding road from the railway station at Lake Louise Junction. This, the most famous of all the lakes in the Canadian Rockies, is a small body of bright blue water cupped in a round bowl between the mountains, with towering Mount Victoria's immense glacier forming a perfect backdrop for the whole setting. Chateau Lake Louise, the well-known Canadian Pacific hotel, is spread across the near end of the lake. Here again is a profusion of flowers, the yellow alpine poppies p

Your longest trip from your base camp at Lake Louise Junction is the drive over a good gravel road through Yoho National Park. Though small (507 square miles), this park vies with the Columbia Icefields in awesome beauty. Instead of taking the left turn off National Parks 1 toward Lake Louise, continue your climb past the gates used to close the highway for winter snows or sudden rock slides. A 3½-mile drive brings you to the Great Divide, where a massive log archway separates the provinces of Alberta and British Columbia. This is also the boundary line between Banff and Yoho National parks. Here you can solve another geographical mystery for your youngsters—the riddle of the Great Divide (5,339 feet).

As you stand under the archway in the middle of the road facing westward, down the slope to your left flows a fairly calm mountain stream, rising in the snows which are visible higher up in the mountains. As you follow down the stream to the right of the archway, toward the tracks of the Canadian Pacific, you come to the dividing of the waters. The tiny stream which wends its way westward will eventually flow into the Pacific Ocean. The equally tiny stream flowing eastward is starting its longer journey to the Atlantic.

According to a sign at the spot where the waters divide, if you will take a handful of water from the main stream, then place your other hand on top of the sign, and, while making a wish, toss some of the water into the eastbound stream, and the remainder into the westbound, your wish, providing it is within reason, will come true.

The rest of the drive through the Kicking Horse Pass, with its excellent views of the Canadian Pacific's spiral tunnels and the 7-mile branch road up through the Yoho Valley, provides some of the most thrilling sights in all the Canadian Rockies.

The Yoho Valley Road itself, which turns off Highway 1 7.8 miles beyond the Great Divide, and is mostly through heavy virgin timber, provides the unwarned driver with two surprises. First is the spot where the steepness of complete S-switchbacks held to the rocky sides by a wall of huge logs, requires that two safety switches be provided. These are run-ups at the sharp turns where a driver, seeing that he will fail to complete the turn, can run up this steep man-built embankment, and thus prevent his car from going over the side into the turbulent waters.

The second surprise comes at the very top of the climb over this Yoho Valley Road where a ¼-mile stretch of one-way road winds around the canyon wall with only slender wooden guardrails between the road's sharp edge and the roaring white foam below. Takkakaw Falls, which are at the upper end of the road, are well worth the exciting journey. They are 1,200 feet high, and are said to be the second highest in the world.

Once you're back at the junction of the Yoho Valley Road and Highway 1, turn right for the 4-mile drive into Yoho Park headquarters at the mountain town of Field, situated on the banks of the now broad Kicking Horse River.

Two miles beyond Field, turn to your right on a good gravel road which takes you on a 5-mile drive through more virgin timber to Emerald Lake. On your road back, take the first right fork and drive through more deep woods to reach Highway 1 again at the Natural Bridge, a rocky causeway through which the Kicking Horse River, narrow and wild once more, roars its way to pass into its lower canyon, a gorge about 100 feet deep. The trip back to your cabin from this point is a 45-minute drive of 22 miles, a wonderful journey at sunset at the end of an exciting day.

Ninth day—Lake Louise Junction to Radium Hot Springs: 87.4 miles.

Now comes the last of the Canadian mountain parks on your itinerary, Kootenay National Park. It is reached via the Banff-Windermere Highway (National Park 1B). From your camp at Lake Louise Junction, turn south on 1 and, following the beautiful Bow River all the way, drive the 16.1 miles to Mount Eisenhower Junction. Turn right at the bungalow camp grounds here, onto 1B over a new, wide gravel road. Nine miles from here you enter Kootenay National Park, British Columbia.

This road crosses numerous creeks and three rivers; the Bow, Vermilion, and Kootenay. You drive through the Kootenay River Valley before you begin a steep ascent to the Sinclair Pass Summit (4,950 feet), the highest crossing in the Sinclair Range. You drive between rusty-colored cliffs known as the Iron Gates to reach the official gateway to the park at its southern entrance. Along the deeply pointed arch of this entrance gate appear the words: "The Mountains Shall Bring Peace to the People."

minutes is a long time to concentrate! Interrupt the lessons occasionally with a little fun and frolic. All work and no play makes dull dogs.

Next, lean heavily on the praise-and-reward formula. Dogs love praise, relish rewards. "That's a good boy, a fine boy," accompanied by an affectionate pat on the head, is just about the equivalent of your boss handing you that raise you've dreamed about so long. As for rewards, we mean something like a piece of boiled liver or a cooky.

Next, you can't be a success at dog training by being wishy-washy and lax in your discipline. Once a command is expressed, the dog should be made to carry it out.

Be patient. Some dogs are brighter and quicker to catch on than others. Like people. But they will all learn, sooner or later. Ninety-nine times out of a hundred, it's the fault of the teacher when a dog "can't be trained."

Several dogs have been poisoned in our neighborhood. What is a good first-aid method if my dog should be poisoned?—C. W. W., Colorado.

First thing is to make the dog vomit. This will get most of the poison out of his stomach. Put a half teaspoon of salt far back on his tongue; then hold his mouth partly closed to force him to swallow. Don't hold his mouth shut tightly, or the dog can't swallow. Next, get all the water or milk into the dog you can. This will expedite the vomiting. After this, lose no time getting the dog to a veterinarian. Different poisons call for different antidotes and treatment.

My dog eats the same things in summer as he does in winter. He seems to thrive. Is there any reason to change diet with the weather?—A. N., Canada.

A dog needs no seasonal change in diet. Nor does geography change food requirements. A well-balanced diet is just as necessary in summer as in winter, just as appropriate in Florida as in Alaska.

A friend recently bred his female, with the understanding that the owner of the male was to have the pup of his choice from the resulting litter. Only one puppy was born, and the sire's owner took him.—J. V. B., New Hampshire.

Technically, the owner of the father was entitled to the pup. Morally, it sounds like an episode from The Merchant of Venice.

A couple of summers ago, I lost two pet canaries. I now have two more. How can I protect them against hot weather?—Mrs. W. W. F., New Jersey.

On extremely hot days, place wet bath towels over the cage, all but the front. This brings down temperature inside the cage. But do not allow the towels to become dry, as they will then make the birds hotter than ever. Change their water several times a day.

Exciting New Planning Booklet

There has never been anything like "How to Plan and Decorate Masterpiece Rooms." This beautiful, full color booklet is based on a new idea that leading authorities are hailing as one of the most exciting in the history of home decoration.

Now you can give your rooms the same color charm found in the world's great paintings, even though you may have no previous knowledge of color harmony. The booklet explains how a simple device makes this possible—a device so simple that it is actually automatic.

Marie E. Stosskopf, A.I.D., a contributor to "How to Plan and Decorate Masterpiece Rooms."

In this booklet you'll see one magnificent room after another, each revealing the color magic of a great masterpiece translated into fabrics and furnishings.

You need only make a choice among paintings you love and the automatic device will render the color decisions for you. You just can't go wrong! Rooms that result will have the authentic color employment that the great masters themselves would have used.

Leading decorators and editors are unanimous in approval. As one of them put it, "No woman should think of planning a room until she has one of these really amazing booklets."

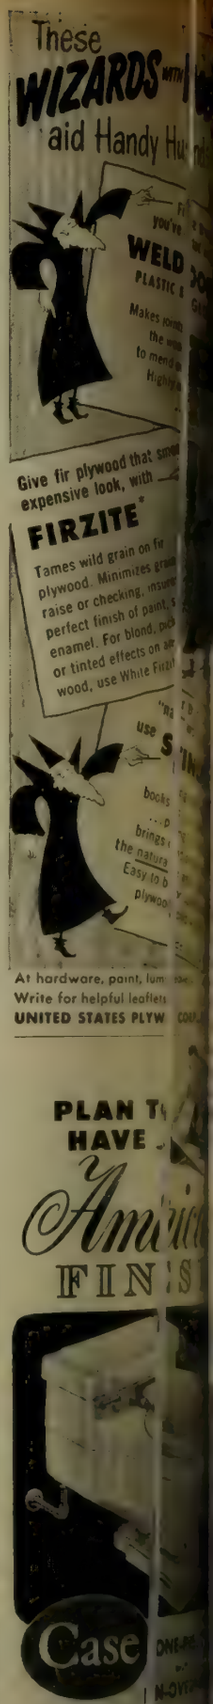
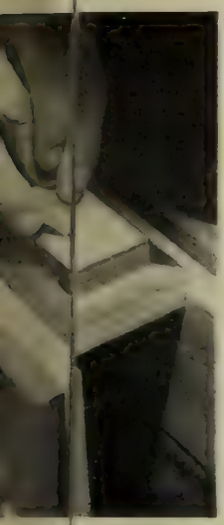
Hardboard top. Removable bench top of hardboard covers oak flooring for drawing, delicate repair work, and other "clean" jobs. Frame is made of 1x2-inch stock, fits over regular bench top, is gripped by vise at one corner. Back edge fits in sweepings trough. If you omit trough, frame only front and sides. Here, hardboard slips into mortises cut in frames on all four sides

Bench hook. Make a bench hook by screwing a cleat at each end and on opposite sides of a 6x10 board. Bottom cleat hooks edge of bench, while heel of your hand holds stock against top cleat. Pencil line, squared with front of top cleat, guides the saw for square cuts





Toe room. It's a good idea to build the drawers of your workbench down to the floor, so you won't have to sweep under them. But plan a 2- or 3-inch setback at the floor line to clear the toes of your shoes. That way you will be able to stand close to your work with increased comfort

Rough measuring. Nail a yardstick on a vertical surface by your bench and put a stop-cleat at one end. Then you can shove a piece of stock against the stop and mark it for length. This saves time and bother of hunting up and handling a rule to measure rough cuts

Sharpening stone frame. Miter, brad, and glue a frame for your sharpening stone. Frame should hold the stone securely, but not so tightly that the stone can't be turned over. Clamped in vise, stone will hold still while you use both hands to guide the tool being sharpened to a fine edge

Extra table. A table with casters provides extra work space when needed. This one, an old porcelain-top table, doubles in the laundry and in the photographic darkroom. Rolled up beside the bench, it holds dimensioned stock laid out in proper order for assembly. It's a perfect go-between from any power equipment to your workbench, too child finds out the truth, and then he'll remember that his parents deceived him. A more suitable answer would be "A child grows inside his mother's body."

No more need be said unless the child himself comes around with the follow-up question "How does the baby get in and out?" The answer to this should be phrased with care but in matter-of-fact fashion, so that the child gets the feeling that the process is perfectly normal and not to be dwelled upon in his mind. The best answer is: "The baby grows from a small seed which the father plants in the mother's body. It comes out through a special opening."

Iron Fireman RADIANT VORTEX* Oil Heat

Iron Fireman Radiant Vortex oil fired furnace. A complete, self-contained warm air heating unit with the fuel-saving Vortex flame. Warms, cleans, humidifies, circulates the air for health and unexcelled home comfort.

Iron Fireman Radiant Vortex Conversion Burner

Turns your present furnace or boiler into an automatic heating system with bowl-shaped Vortex flame, located at the grate line, it is the most efficient oil burner you can buy for a furnace or boiler designed for coal firing.

Iron Fireman Radiant Vortex Oil Fired Boiler

Very compact, quick heating boiler-burner unit for steam, hot water or radiant panel heating. Wide range of sizes.

YOU are not dealing in penny-ante savings when you install Iron Fireman Vortex oil heating. It cuts important dollars off your fuel bills. Iron Fireman users have reduced oil bills as much as 30% after replacing their former oil burners with the Iron Fireman Vortex burner.

You can easily see why such savings are possible. The Vortex flame is not enclosed in a pit. Its radiant, bowl-shaped flame spreads outward over a heat-reflecting hearth and sweeps the sidewalls of the furnace or boiler. It is a highly efficient flame, extracting maximum heat from every drop of oil, and all of its heat is applied instantly to the heating surfaces. Costly warm-up period is reduced to a few seconds.

In addition to saving fuel, this quick-acting Vortex flame provides steadier, more uniform heat. It is controlled by the heat-anticipating thermostat and other precision instruments of the exclusive Iron Fireman Syncrostat control system—engineered and built by Iron Fireman specifically for Iron Fireman equipment.

Iron Fireman products sold in Canada are built by the Iron Fireman Mfg. Co. of Canada, Ltd., Toronto. Visit your local Iron Fireman dealer and examine his display of new equipment, or mail coupon for further information.

the fungi haven't yet invaded your feet, they soon will.

If you try to diagnose your own symptoms, you take the responsibility of distinguishing between athlete's foot and psoriasis, nummular eczema, lichen planus, keratoderma plantaris—but let's stop this listing before it runs away with us. The list of diseases that can look like athlete's foot is impressive and hard to pronounce. Some are very rare. Some are more than skin-deep; diseases of the body, really. Everything that itches isn't athlete's foot. A fungicidal powder is no cure for a foot rash of allergic origin. Some women can't wear nylons. Some men can't stand wool socks. Prickles and itches resulting from allergies or irritants are likely to show up as reddish, mottled, or eruptive areas on the skin surface rather than between the toes.

Let's suppose your confidence is still unshaken and you're positive you have athlete's foot. Won't the doctors let you use anything for it? They can hardly help it. Self-treatment for this affliction is here to stay, and for the general run of mild, nonacute cases can be fairly satisfactory. The main thing is to use preparations that won't themselves injure the skin.

Mild measures suitable for self-treatment include, certainly, dusting the feet, including the between-the-toes area, with plain talcum or with powder containing a small percentage of salicylic or boric acid. Ointments and powders containing fatty acids, bearing such improbable names as propionic and undecylenic acid, made a good showing against foot fungi during the war, and many doctors prescribe them. Your skin is slightly acid if it's healthy. When it gets on the alkaline side, fungi have a fine chance to thrive. Some of our best household antiseptics, excellent for ordinary domestic first aid, are too powerful to use on skin that is already sick from athlete's foot—especially since the warmth and moisture of footwear makes for more intimate drug contact than would be the case, say, with a bandaged finger. There are dozens of proprietary products, some very good and some not so good. If in doubt, ask your doctor.

In any case, give your feet a chance to breathe and stay healthy. A satisfactory pair of shoes, say Doctors Underwood and Gaul, should be porous enough to allow sweat to evaporate and excess heat to escape. Thick-soled, weather-tight, heavy-duty shoes don't do that very well. They keep moisture out, but they keep it in, too. Rubber soles tend to hold heat. The National Foot Health Council polled 2,000 specialists and found that they overwhelmingly preferred leather soles as opposed to rubber, composition, or other materials, largely because the latter favor excess perspiration. Perforated or ventilated

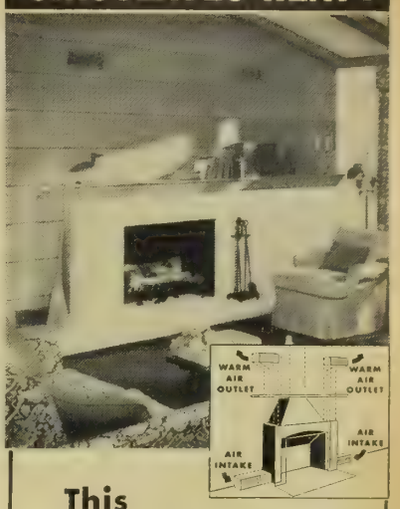
No, there was no butler; only Lorena at $3 a week. But that butler's pantry constituted a splendid buffer state to bar noise and odors from the rest of the house as no eye-level cabinet can hope to do.

There were even a cellar and an attic. Both were bad, I grant. One was dank and dark below. The other was either roasting or freezing above. But they did offer a place for skis and sleds and old wedding hats and graduation pictures and bicycles and Christmas-tree decorations and a workbench and discarded furniture which, at 20-year intervals, would be resurrected and done over by some daughter getting married.

As for the modern house, can you imagine Sister entertaining her young man in one of the conversational groupings, with several of the other areas already populated? Of course not. She takes him out, and a parked car substitutes for the front parlor. Yet most of us will concede that smooching was safer in a front parlor.



And as for those dramatic confidences behind closed doors, apparently they disappeared when there were no doors to close. In Victorian days, there always seemed to be hushed, exciting tidbits about pregnancies and infidelities and marital rifts. But now pregnancies are heralded over the radio almost before the obstetrician is sure, and infidelities and marital rifts are aired on the front page. The facts of life are hurled at squirming or bored children just any old time and place. Even business conferences seem to be best conducted on the golf course. As for "thinking," who does it at home any more? Club papers are written at the library, with the librarian doing the heavy end. And the reading of books has been taken care of by condensations and digests and book reviews. I sometimes wonder where the book reviewer does his reading!

Children seem to have been conditioned to studying in a hubbub, just as they are trained from diaper days by preschools to be herd-minded. There is little room left, it seems, for that lonely animal, known on the Western range as the bunch-quitter. Yet I maintain that good, solid thinking is best done in quiet and even in solitude.

A modern house is the enemy of memories. It refuses to serve as a link between the past and the future. It denies the continuity of the generations. There are no antiques to be handed on, no family silver, no sideboard to keep the silver in, no mantel for trophies, no photographs, no souvenirs . . . no wound stripes, no medals, no scars. It is a house suspended in time, a tabula rasa, paradise for extroverts.

And, alas, it is not the place for me or my kind. Much as I like its common sense and lack of sham, I shall have to forego all that in favor of a few cubbyholes and a chopped-up interior—and a chance for solitude. A place for a bunch-quitter, an introvert. Until someone makes doors that close and walls that wall off, I shall hang on to my Victorian horror.

The MAN NEXT DOOR

Our neighborhood is divided between the pessimists who are waiting for the atom bomb, and the optimists who are waiting for color television.

During the winter I argued the kids into sliding on our bank instead of in the street. Now I have to argue them off again to give the grass a chance.

Europeans would understand us better if they realized that the more a cause means to an American, the more quietly he champions it. Two Americans who can discuss politics and religion without raising their voices, will come to blows over who was first in a parking spot.

I can never lose the feeling, when I spread plant food on the lawn each spring, that somehow I am working against myself.

Resort keepers dread a cool, rainy summer. So do housewives.

"I've finally served a lunch that pleased the entire family," Nancy Rutgers announced in triumph. "Waffles and sausages for Hal, dry cereal and candy bars for the older children, a soft-cooked egg for the baby, and a cup of tea for myself."

I had lunch with the Marine recruiting officer yesterday. I pretended to be greatly interested in going back in, and he pretended to be interested in having me.

The most durable Christmas toy seems to be the crate our new stove came in. First a wild-animal cage in the basement, it's now standing outside as a frontier fort for every young cavalryman in the neighborhood.

The first time I knew how solidly I was married was when I went shopping and realized that my "natural reactions" to men's styles were carbon copies of my wife's ideas.

When I went on trips alone as a boy, I usually got homesick the first night away. Now I get homesick the moment the kids wave good-bye.

More than one woman has started out playing with fire and ended up cooking over it.

"I'm willing to admit the California climate is better than ours," my wife said as we did dishes together after our West Coast visitors had left. "But it makes me mad when Alice acts as though we're old-fashioned because we let it snow."

If I kiss my wife when she happens to be cooking something I especially like, she accuses me of making "cupboard love." But when she kisses me after I've burned the trash without being asked, I'm content to act as though my charm has nothing to do with the way I hold a match to wastepaper.

Gift for a girl who has graduated to sterling—Gorham Grea

Lovely Gorham "Greenbrier"* is called "the pattern of growth." Its delicate design suggests the growth of a flower from bud to bloom. And Greenbrier is only one of sixteen timeless, fashion-right Gorham Sterling patterns.

Unlike most precious possessions, Gorham Sterling is easy to acquire, the place-setting way. A girl simply selects and registers her pattern; friends and family do the rest by giving place-settings on graduation day, birthdays, and so on. You know, a six-piece place-setting is a service for one person—a knife, fork, salad or pastry fork, teaspoon, soup spoon, and butter spreader. Priced from $29.75 to $39.25 (Fed. Ta incl. A MILLION PEOPLE have put their money in the Bell Telephone business

Today, for the first time in the history of the United States, a company is owned by a million people. The American Telephone and Telegraph Company has reached that mark. No other company has half as many owners.

These million men and women owners live in 19,000 communities throughout the United States. They are in cities, towns and on farms and from all walks of life.

Most of them are small stockholders. More than half are women. Over 350,000 have held their stock for ten years or longer. Some 200,000 are telephone employees and thousands more are buying the stock under the Employee Stock Plan. About one family in every forty-five in the United States is now an owner of A. T. & T.

You can see that many, many people have a stake in the telephone business. It's their savings that have helped to give this country the most and the best telephone service in the world. Important in peacetime, the telephone is vital in time of national emergency.

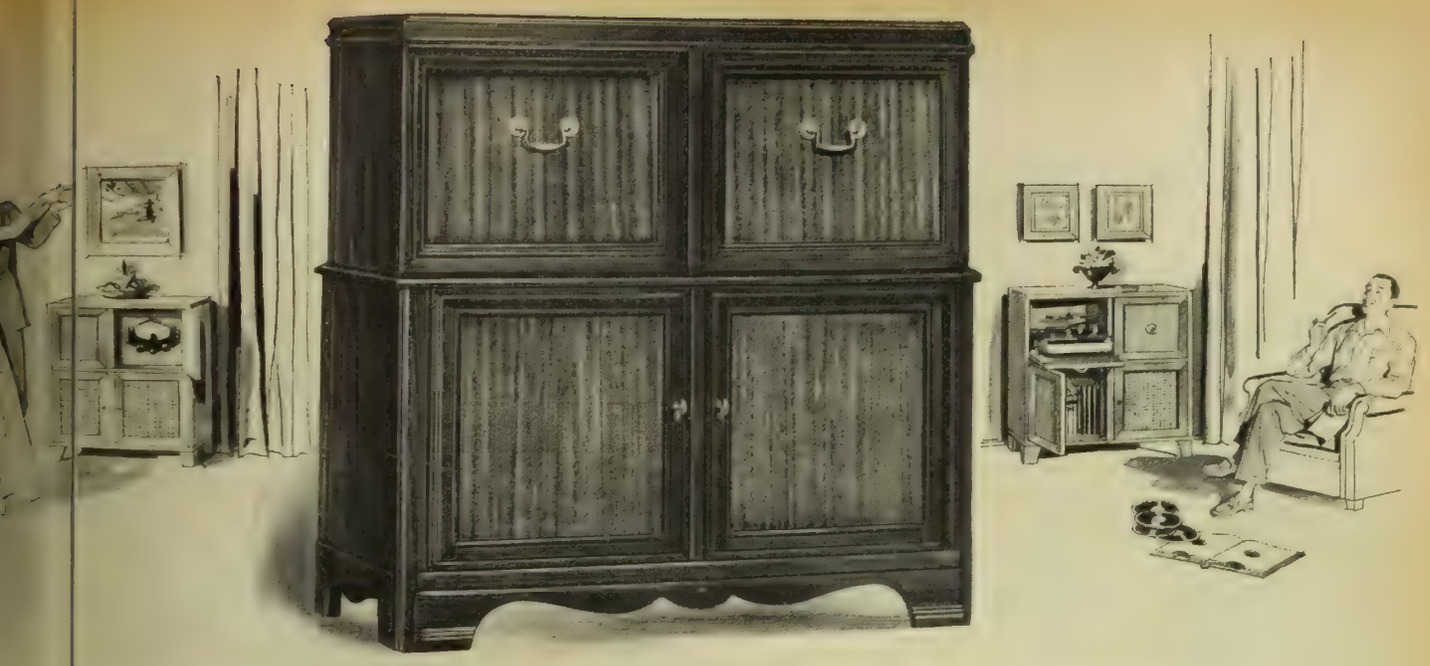
By André Fontaine



Number 300 Mulberry Street is a drab old brick-and-graystone building with chipped, high front steps and two fresh coats of soot. You'll find it in one of downtown New York's unlovelier sections. It was built just after the Civil War, and in the subbasement are dungeons the size of two cots, and iron chains that say it used to be a prison. Later on, it was New York Police Headquarters and after that the Chief Magistrate's office. The temporary-looking sign now over the door says "Home Term Court," and it was the place where I was going to prove that I was right and some other people were wrong.

I was down here because I'd gotten a letter from the editors of Better Homes & Gardens saying they'd heard Judge Anna M. Kross was running an experimental court that seemed to make a lot of sense and would I look into it? The main idea, they added, appeared to be that nice gs in a whale of a differenc n in

In six months they were a different family. The husband no longer drank; the wife no longer nagged. Both were so busy working to fix up their home that they had no time for discontents—and the fact that they were pulling together toward a common goal recemented their marriage. They had no more money than before, but they had the will to make their home attractive, and both found ways of doing it without it costing too much. And the husband began to be active in local civic affairs.

They became, in fact, respectable, responsible members of a community—as most American families are—and remain so. Of course it would be ridiculous oversimplification to say that owning a house did all this for them. No doubt there were many less tangible and possibly more important factors. But the house was both the symbol of their marriage's rebirth and a means of removing one of the chief irritations that had threatened it.

Judge Kross would sympathize with this couple's dilemma. She knows how drab a home can be—she grew up in a tenement in a Manhattan slum, the daughter of a buttonhole-maker. She remembers nights when New York's sweltering heat drove people out of their flats and onto the streets to breathe the air that, if no cooler, at least had some movement.

Anna Kross, a tiny woman with the drive of a bulldozer and a heart big enough to encompass a city's huddled masses—a sort of female LaGuardia—fought her way out of the slums. While going to high school, she worked in a suspender factory, taught English to foreign-born and, at 17, earned a scholarship to New York Uni-

Flat point. Here is a carpenter's trick that will help you avoid splitting when you are nailing near the end of a thin board or through small blocks. Turn the nail over and blunt the point slightly, resting it on a hard object or on the spot where it will be driven. The flat point tears its way through the wood, rather than pushing fibers aside and causing splitting.

Clean teeth. No file card handy? Here's a gadget you can make in a hurry to clean bits of metal and dirt from your file's teeth. Cut the point off a large nail and hammer the end flat. Then push it back and forth over the file to cut a series of tiny teeth. Then, as you scrape the nail on the file, the matching teeth will do a very thorough job of cleaning.

Handle with care. When you have to pull a spike with a claw hammer, don't put all the strain on the handle or it might snap. Put one foot on the hammer head and push down with body weight as you pull on the handle. After the spike is started out, slip a scrap of wood under the hammer to relieve the strain.

Press point into wood to make starter holes. Centered nails are least likely to split out, especially if you are using thin lumber.

With a little ingenuity, you can turn even the most down-at-the-heels room into a pleasant place to live. Take the room pictured here, for instance.

When the Dick Sloans bought an abandoned farmhouse in Martin City, Missouri, this was a box of a room with tall, narrow windows breaking right into the middle of each of three walls. If any room ever looked "hopeless," this one did. But, as you can see, it's now quite livable.

Some of the things they did, with the help of Dick's mother, Decorator Peggy Sloan, may be just what you are looking for to make a room in your home more attractive. The room is quite small, so all furniture is small and in proportion.

Here, flying away by Government order, is Reynolds Wrap... the pure aluminum foil that kept leftovers fresh, covered bowls so neatly and quickly, made roasting and baking so much easier and better. Aluminum foil is needed by the armed forces ... to protect rations, medical supplies, rustable parts and delicate instruments.

This protection is the more important because our supply lines are long, and because they must extend to whatever future fronts the defense of Freedom may require. The amount of aluminum used as "fighting foil" is small compared to the tons of aluminum in planes, ships, tanks, trucks, pontoon bridges, bazooka and other rocket tubes. But a first aid packet can be as vital as any weapon; all these needs have the same urgent priority.

For all this, and to restore civilian supply as soon as possible, the U.S. aluminum industry is rapidly expanding production. We face a double job: fighting shortages and inflation while we fight aggression. Reynolds is working at that double job full time, full speed!

Key to better engineering

new, roomy seats... marvel of many checks and up GM engineers to improve comfort. To increase weatherproofness, a new, improved pump works out air inside car. They a smoking torch is passed along door and window guides. Smoke leaves where a gap or seal is needed. It was such as this, unseen, greater comfort, safety, dependability.

We carry a torch for your comfort

Comfort in a car is a matter of continuously checking countless details, like engineering a weather-sealed fit between door and pillar.

So GM engineering persistently studies and restudies every detail in a car from engine to axle, from bumper to bumper.

At GM, moreover, engineering is sparked regularly not only by the latest discoveries of long-range research—but also by continuing reports on cars in action from General Motors car-building divisions.

And—it keeps proving the value of all innovations, from cotter pins to automatic drives, out on GM's own 1,268-acre Proving Ground.

The pay-off on all this is something more than the greater comfort and driving ease you find in all GM cars. It assures, too, advanced skills and unmatched production facilities for renewing America's strength in these critical times.

New enzyme combination clears the way when "wonder" drugs bog down

By Lawrence Galton

Of great importance to your family's health in peace and to our servicemen in war is a new medical development which will be available to your doctor when you read this article—or shortly thereafter.

Its laboratory initials are SK-SD. It has produced dramatic results in a wide variety of troubles ranging from heart inflammations, lung infections, and osteomyelitis (the dreaded bone trouble which often strikes children) to such common and long-lived ailments as chronic sinusitis and chronic middle-ear infections.

It has proved wonderfully effective, too, in wounds of many kinds—even bullet and stab wounds—not only cleansing them and making them heal more rapidly but also reducing the formation of scar tissue.

Recently, when the Lasker Award of the American Public Health Association, one of medicine's highest honors, was given to the scientists who originated SK-SD, the Awards Committee called the development "a therapeutic landmark."

For this is not another antibiotic "wonder" drug but rather something that makes wonder drugs succeed in cases where they've frequently failed. It even puts new punch into the body's own ability to fight trouble so that antibiotics, in some cases, may not even be needed.

A 68-year-old man lay extremely sick in an Eastern hospital not long ago. He had a lung abscess. And he kept on having it. Penicillin at first seemed to be doing some good. But then, despite continued dosage, the man's temperature shot up again. Drugs seemed powerless now. And X-rays showed a huge and ominous cloudy area in the chest.

Then, by means of instruments placed down the man's throat, SK-SD was injected into the cloudy area. Penicillin was administered again. By next morning, the man's temperature was normal. It stayed that way, the cloudy area cleared, and the man went on to a quick and uneventful recovery.

A woman in a Midwestern hospital had pneumonia—the slow-resolving kind that drags on for weeks. Antibiotic medicines just couldn't seem to clear it up. X-rays showed great shadows on the lungs.

Now, down through the throat and directly into the lungs went SK-SD. Within 36 hours, the X-rays were clear of shadows, and the sick woman was recovering.

This family's living in the present tense

By Elizabe[illegible] Gil[illegible]

Here's a house that makes a strong case for both Modern furnishings and Modern architecture. It was designed through the combined talents of a husband-wife team, and it carries many practical ideas to incorporate into your own home. Owner Floyd Mueller is an architect with a flair for the Modern in both houses and furniture. Mrs. Mueller is also known as painter Susana Geuvara.

So far only the entry hall, living room, and den-bedroom of the house are finished, and the family is living partly in the new house and partly in a garage that was on their property when they bought it. Someday a wing containing a powder room, dining room, kitchen, bedroom, and bath will be added.

You can get a lot of ideas on dramatic use of color from the Mueller's home. And notice the accessories. They're completely different in period, style, and material, but share the same simplicity of line and design.

Color at the front door gives a hint of what to expect from the interior of this house. The door and underside of the overhang are coral, contrasting with the gray-green exterior of the house.

There's another colorful picture of the living room of this home on our front cover.

Here's privacy by a busy highway

Like most people, this family wanted a quiet place to relax outdoors. They got it with a fence, and so can you

By Alice L. Buxton

Privacy inside your house isn't enough. What a family needs for complete home enjoyment is a place to relax and entertain outdoors—with gates shut on the bustle of life outside.

Ask Mr. or Mrs. James M. Symington of Springfield, New Jersey, will tell you that the "secret" of the restful quiet that marks the garden beside their home—roughly 50x75 feet in area—is the solid-board fence which cuts off both noise and view of the traffic thoroughfare in front of the house. They call what's inside a "rural island!"

With its roomy concrete terrace and colorful flower borders, the enclosed area is like a quiet study outdoors—perfect for relaxation at day's end and for all family entertaining activities. Carefully chosen and cared for plants make fall rival spring for color around the terrace-garden perimeter.

The fence is simply designed, with single panels and plain, Colonial-type posts that suit the architecture of the 200-year-old house. It's painted white to match the house trim. Two gates, one to the front area and the other to the back, are dark green and match house shutters. Where the grade changes, the fence "steps down" to conform.

The most abused grass in the world

By Phil Amundso

Here's Walter Owens, official Stadium groundkeeper since 1928, who arrives by subway each morning at 7 a.m., earlier in dry season. Soil spiker shown has been used for many years

There's ripping, tearing, crushing action on the g ss at the Stadium, home of the American League's Yan s. It starts with the first jolting impact of horsehide and nd-growth ash and a runner streaking to first in the mi April opener. It lasts through some 70 home games a the World Series (13 world championships since 19 0 in October. To one Yank of 23-years standing, the Sta m is considerably more than the site of team conquest.

Spry, white-thatched, 63-year-old Walter Ow s, of-ficial groundkeeper, keeps the grass on the 3½-ac field growing, green, and trim. He drops in daily for a lo even while he's on vacation. To Owens, baseball accounts only part—and not the worst—of the beating the Stadiu grass takes.

Owens' 1950 headache included 77 home game nd 6 exhibition games. Other events that made it worse ere a circus for a week's stand, the national assembly of a gious organization for 10 days, a wrestling show, two ch pion-ship boxing matches, and a collegiate football game o top

Loosen up your soil if you want good grass

Stanley

There's little difference in a profile of compacted soil from your lawn or Yankee Stadium. Lack of air spaces keeps out water and plant food, confines grass roots to a layer near the surface. Dry spots usually develop under the thatch, making the grass brown

Aerating tool designed for spot treatment on home lawns has three curved, half-open spoons that make small holes at the surface. The spoons scoop out soil cores. A wire coil around spoons keeps grass from lifting up and crumbles the cores as they are lifted to surface

Here's a close-up of new grass roots in a hole left in the soil when a core was removed. Such holes keep plant food you put on your lawn from washing away, cut down on rain runoff so there's less need to sprinkle artificially, and help the grass roots grow deeper

How to turn nickels into dimes

By Esther McCoy and Theodore H. Kimble

Not literally, of course. Uncle Sam wouldn't like that. But when someone builds—for just $5,700—a house with 930 square feet of highly livable floor space, plus a carport, then that nickel-into-dime trick is practically what he's done.

How do we figure? Well, the house you see here cost $5.48 per square foot (allowing one-third credit for carport space) to build. A house the same size, with the same features, and built at the same time—but of standard construction—would have cost, on the national average, from $10 to $12 a foot. Twice as much. O.K.?

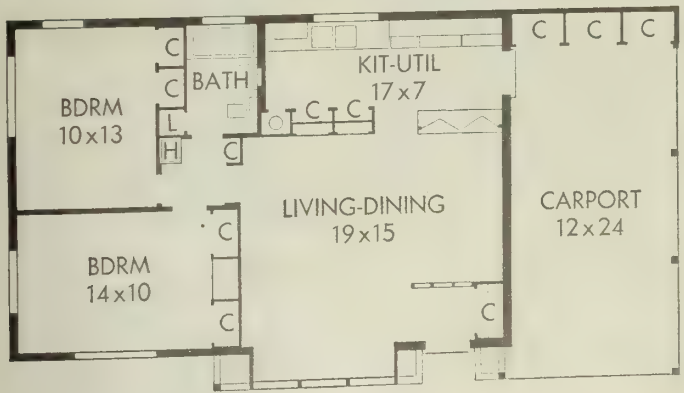
There's no catch, either. This is a solidly built, well-designed house. Though native to Arizona, it could—with but minor changes—be a fine small home for any state.

The big question, of course, is: "How can you get so much for so little?" The answer lies in the number of cost-slashing ideas incorporated in the house by its designers and builders, Charles and Arthur Schreiber, of Phoenix:

- Perfectly rectangular floor plan; no costly jogs in walls
- Simple gable roof; no valleys, no flashing to be done
- Outside walls of 8-inch-thick pumice (or concrete) block, painted both sides; no studs, sheathing, or siding
- Inside walls of wallpapered gypsum board or sealed and stained cedar planking; no plaster anywhere in house
- Concrete slab floor; no basement—no need for one
- Carport with ample storage; no garage walls or doors
- Simple, built-on-job shutters, bay window, louvered doors, and other details; no purchased millwork anywhere
- Centralized plumbing; one stack, no long runs of pipe

Ten-foot-long window gives important look to economy house. Built on job, it cost $100 less than if milled. Colors are carried on i le

There is an unbelievable 36 linear feet of storage space tucked into the house, including this wide guest closet



← Cedar walls and ceiling look expensive, are far from it. Actually, No. 2 wood—reselected for use on exposed surfaces—was used. Planting boxes in bay and grill at left came out of the resulting savings

Built-ins are a big part of this home's secret. Bookcase, backed with wallpaper, is fully as effective as a costly breakfront. Louvered doors of the pass-through close off kitchen when desired

On your walls, color is powerful. A tiny sample may seem just right; the same color on a broad expanse of wall will seem stronger and bolder. Check the sample by daylight and artificial light before making a final decision. Some colors change when they dry, or they vary slightly under artificial light.

Moneysaving and mighty good

By Myrna Johnston

The trick to both the moneysaving and the mighty good is to find delicious ways to stretch meat flavor and to make the most of the abundance of vegetables pouring in from summer gardens.

So you look to the thrifty canned meats; to tuna; to cheese and eggs; chicken; and to the good foods like rice and noodles that can make every bite taste meaty.

The big, round platter at left above has that June favorite, creamed new potatoes and peas. The potatoes, tiny and so tender you can scrub the peel off; the peas, plump and green and tasting as only June-garden peas can taste. Bundles of green onions cooked just tender, little carrots, new green beans buttered crumbs on top. Wedges of lemon for a squirt of fresh. And hot, browned slices of canned, deviled ham luncheon meat. Recipes on page 124

How to sit down on the job

Sit down to plan meals, grocery lists

Here's a good chance to relax! A comfortable chair, a table or desk with telephone. That's all you need. Put your imagination to work thinking up all the good meals you can serve your family. Really "think out" your grocery list with no items forgotten

By Frances Madigan

Ever hear about the lady who was all the time complaining about how she was on her feet all day long, never had a chance to sit down, was completely tuckered out at the end of each day?

Trouble with this lady was that she'd never learned how to sit down on the job. Never stopped to figure out that feet were made to get her places, instead of just holding her up while she did her ironing, her dishes, planned her meals, fixed her family's food.

Actually, she and her story don't have a leg to stand on, because here are just a few of the jobs she could do sitting down.

Family ironing takes time, is something you can do sitting down

Line up your work for easier ironing. Put a basket of dampened clothes at your right, this handy table for finished ironing at your left. Then take a seat

Big projects like sandwich making are easier on you when you do them assembly-line style. Line up bread, butter, sandwich spread, knives, waxed paper—everything you need—on a table. Then, you can take it sitting down

Pull out a lap table, pull up a chair, and get close to your work. Lap table puts extra work space in your kitchen, is a good height for sit-down jobs like frosting cupcakes, pitting cherries for a pie, decorating cookies, fixing relishes, other time-takers

Have a special Thrifty Main Dish you fix to bolster the budget at the end of the week? Or a favorite Dried-fruit Special? If so, why not cash in on your recipes? We'll pay $10 for the recipe the judges vote best; $3 to each of the 20 other winners.

Thrifty Main Dishes. The race is free-style—anything is in order so long as it's economical. Might be a tempting dish that started with Sunday's roast. Or a trick to make a little meat go a long way. Or even a hearty main dish that doubles for the meat in the meal.

Just think of the ways you stretch your meat dollar. Perhaps you bring leftover meat or chicken to the table in a savory meat pie topped with flaky biscuits—in crusty croquettes, hot sandwiches.

Or maybe you start with some of the less expensive meats and fix a dish fit for a party. You may buy ground beef for Italian spaghetti and meat balls, wieners to stuff with mashed potatoes and cheese. Or canned meat for a jiffy casserole.

Dried-fruit Specials add the flavor pickup your winter meals need.

There's wide variety—dried apricots, prunes, peaches, dates, raisins, pears, figs, apples.

Your family may vote for a simple Apricot-Marshmallow Betty, served warm with rich cream, an airy prune whip, or apples stuffed with dates and raisins.

And what about a pretty upside-down cake? Or a steamed pudding or moist loaf cake?

Maybe you like to use dried fruits in appetizers—such as stuffing prunes or figs with cream cheese. Or do you spice dried fruit to serve with a thick ham slice?

And remember, the winners of these 21 prizes will receive the Better Homes & Gardens Certificate of Endorsement and six copies of the endorsed recipe.

1. Write your recipe clearly on one side of the paper. Send but one recipe at a time and mark it, "January Thrifty Main Dishes" or "January Dried-fruit Specials."

rea flakiness every time!

Old-time pie hands know that chilling is important when combining ingredients for pie crust. It makes the crust flakier, more tender, more yielding to the fork.

Now Pillsbury does this chilling (and more) for you in its easy-to-use and exclusive Chill-Blended mix.

As the name suggests, flour and shortening are blended together at low temperatures so that the particles of shortening stay separate and are distributed evenly throughout the flour. When the heat of the oven hits these particles, they bubble, burst and turn into a wonderful crust of delicate flakiness and tenderness.

Lots and lots of women can make superb pie crust. The trick is to make a really good one every time. Don't you want to see what this Chill-Blended mix can do for your pies?

CHILL-BLENDED

Make this simple test. Pour a little of this mix into your hand. Rub it between your fingers and feel how completely the particles of shortening are distributed throughout the flour.

Some particles feel about the size of a pea — others the size of coarse meal. That's the way many famous cookbooks agree they should always be. That's the way it is in package after package of Pillsbury Pie Crust Mix.

Morning

From blessed sleep I rise and hear
My little ones at play.
Oh, 6 a.m. is much too soon
To start another day.
When I consider all the things
Before me yet to do,
The infant meals, the infant baths . . .
I'm glad I've only two.

Noon

Oh, John's upset my favorite lamp
And Kathy's smashed a dish.
They're foraging in the goldfish bowl
Intent on eating fish.
My hair is graying rapidly,
I'm rumpled and I'm harried.
My voice is hoarse, I look a sight.
I wish I'd never married.

Night

The moon is high. My innocents(?)
Are nestled in their beds.
Aglow with love I lean above
Their downy little heads.
How sweet the lashes shadowing
The gentle faces, creased
By chubby fists! I hope I have A dozen more, at least.

"In-the-store" taste tests prove Durkee's has most natural coconut flavor!

We thought we had the best coconut in the world! After housewives taste-tested this new "secret process" Stayfresh, we KNEW we had the best. You will too . . . just by tasting it!

HERE'S THE SECRET: Durkee's new Stayfresh Coconut is closest to the flavor and freshness of tree-ripened, freshly-opened coconut. It is the ONLY packaged coconut that does NOT have a "packaged" taste!

In Cleveland and Syracuse, we asked women to compare Durkee's with a sample of a leading competitive brand . . . to judge by taste alone! Their unbiased taste selected Durkee's . . . 4 to 1!

Pick up a package of Durkee's at your food store today . . . try it on your next pie, pudding or cake. That's one taste-test that will get the okay from every member of your family!

This picture is typical of the many taste-tests made in the Foodtown Super Markets, Cleveland, and the P & C Super Markets, Syracuse.

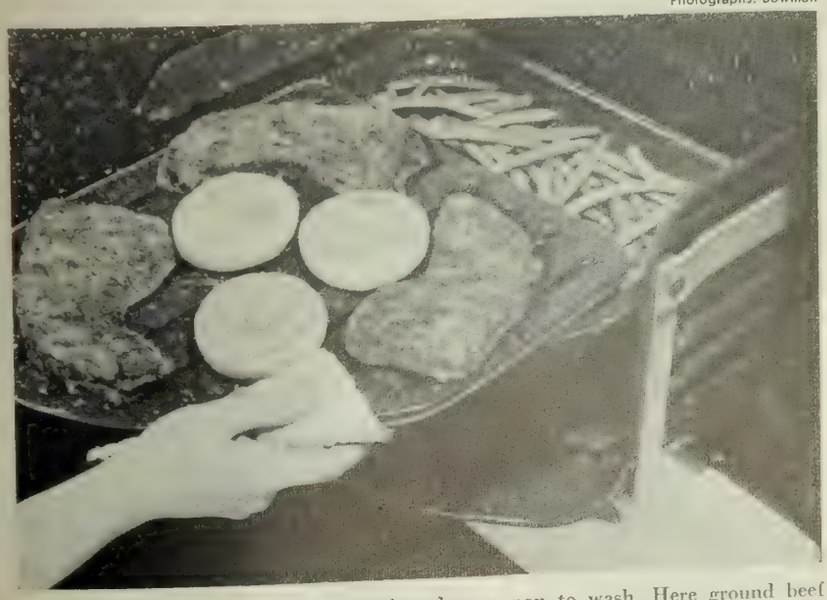
Broiling is easy when you follow these tips

By Doris Adams



For a fast and delicious dinner, turn on your broiler. In a matter of minutes you'll be serving your family a hot, tempting meal.

Remember that meat will be more juicy if you broil steaks that are at least 1 inch thick, lamb chops at least ¾ inch thick, and ham slices at least ½ inch thick. If you want rare meat or have a thin cut, broil it fairly close to the heat; the outside will brown before the inside has overcooked. Thicker cuts and meat you want well done should go farther from the heat. Actual distance [Turn to page 143

Right distance is easy to tell when inches are marked on the wall of the broiler. In this range, cheese-filled franks wrapped in bacon, tomato halves, and rolls brown to perfection when the top of the food is 4 inches from the heat. Look in your range instruction book to check the distances and times that you should use when you broil

Photographs: Bowman

Dinner from the broiler means there's only one pan to wash. Here ground beef (shaped into "T-bones") and precooked onion slices brown on the rack. Canned green beans heat in the pan below where they get extra-good flavor from the meat drippings. Everything's done in 20 minutes, ready to serve to your family at its sizzling best

With the photographs on page 80 to guide you and the recipes below, you can fix food as delicious as that served at the McDonald Tea Room. The recipes are from Virginia McDonald's cook book, How I Cook It, Frank Glenn Publishing Co., Inc., Kansas City.

Fruit Meringues With Ice Cream

½ cup egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vinegar
1 cup sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Beat egg whites until stiff, adding salt, cream of tartar, and vinegar. Gradually add the sugar and vanilla. Beat and beat until so thick the mixture climbs up on the beater. Shape as desired either with a spoon or pastry tube on a cooky sheet lined with unglazed brown paper. Bake in a very, very slow oven (200°) 1 to 2½ hours. The meringue should not brown but should become crisp. Remove while hot. Cool. Top with scoops of ice cream. Drizzle with sliced, sweetened berries. Decorate with delicately tinted whipped cream as shown in picture on page 80.

Combination-salad Baskets

1 bunch celery
6 firm, ripe tomatoes
2 large green peppers
1 onion, cut coarsely
1 cucumber
1 head of lettuce

Crisp the celery and cut in pieces. Peel tomatoes and cut in eighths. Cut off ends of peppers and sliver them and mix with celery and tomatoes. Add the shredded head of the lettuce. Peel cucumber and slice thin. Toss all ingredients together. Crisp lettuce leaves. Take pairs of them and put together to form baskets. Fill these with the tossed vegetables. Remove seeds from green peppers and slice in ⅛-inch rings. Insert one of these upright in each salad to form the handle of the basket. At each side of the handle where it meets basket, place a carrot flower (see page 108 for how to make). Top salad with French or Russian dressing. Sprinkle with coarsely crumbled Blue cheese.

French Dressing

1 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
⅓ cup lemon juice or vinegar
1 teaspoon sugar
1 teaspoon paprika
1 cup salad oil

Put ingredients in tightly covered glass jar and shake vigorously. Chill.

Potato Nests or Baskets

Peel potatoes and shred. Select two round-bottomed, fine-meshed strainers (individual size) of different sizes. Pack potatoes on bottom and sides in large one and press smaller one on potatoes to hold them firmly. Fry in deep, hot fat till golden brown. Fill with hot, buttered peas, butter-browned mushrooms, chopped pimiento.

Note: Special gadgets for making potato baskets are available at housewares departments.

There's a best way to take care of nylon

Ben wondering if you could put your nylons in the washer? Or use bluing, a bleach; or dye them? You'll find the answers to these questions and more below ash the clothes frequently and squeezing the suds through and fabric. When the wash water be- and dirty, replace with fresh. ughly.

Why do my nylon underthings come gray after a few washings?

've noticed that nylons sometimes or pink cast. What causes that?

ver: This may be the result of washing rgarments with hosiery or colored nylons. Even when stockings are reasonably fast, the slight excess of dye can be picked up by white or pastel nylons. Nylon is unusually sensitive in this respect—it readily absorbs even very small quantities of dye.

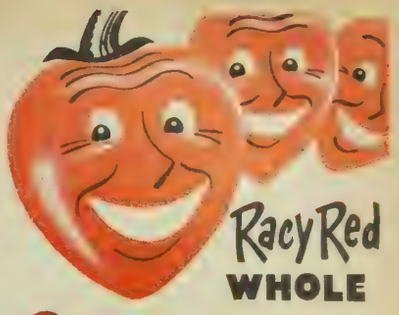
Question: Should I use bluing on nylon?

Answer: A bluing rinse helps to overcome yellowness or even the pinkish cast. But keep the nylon's dye sensitivity in mind. Don't have the rinse too blue. Be sure to have the bluing completely dissolved and well stirred up before adding the garments. Otherwise streaks and spots may show up to mar their appearance. And never, never let nylon stand in a bluing solution.

Question: Can I use bluing in the wash water?



Answer: You can use bluing in the wash for both white and colored nylons. In fact, recent tests have shown that bluing in bead or flake form, with no soap or synthetic detergent added, is excellent for laundering nylon by hand. This bluing has a detergent base and cleans as it brightens. This helps keep nylons white, and nylon hose keep their original color better when cared for in this way.

Question: Can I dye nylon garments?

Answer: Yes. Dyeing solutions are effective for changing the color or restoring color to fabrics which have lost their freshness. Thoroughly clean garments first. Then treat them with the dye solutions, prepared according to directions on the package. Follow same precautions here as for using bluing (above). And do not boil.

Question: Which should I use for washing nylon—a soap or a synthetic detergent?

Answer: It just depends on which you prefer to use. Good-quality, mild soaps or detergents are safe and will do a good cleaning job. The detergents have an edge [Turn to page 161 versity Law School. She was graduated in 1910 and straightway started a career that has won her the love of the city and the respect of her colleagues. .

She became the tough, resourceful champion of the city's unfortunate women and children. She abolished the Women's Night Court, in which prostitutes were paraded like animals before the leers of the curious. She started New York's Youth Authority, the Girls Term Court, the Youth Counseling Service in the District Attorney's office—all of which helped delinquent youngsters. And she capped her efforts when in 1944, she almost singlehandedly started the nationwide campaign against delinquency which the General Federation of Women's Clubs has waged so successfully. She is enough of an expert on family relations so that she was invited to help write New York State's Domestic Relations Law.

She opened the revolutionary Home Term Court four years ago and has built it to the point where Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark, after visiting it, said that every city in the country ought to have one like it. A few months ago the State Probation Commission, after a lengthy inspection, reported that the court was "an enlightened, progressive, humane, and intelligent approach to the handling of family problems" which has "clearly demonstrated that the idea is a practical and effective way to strengthen and rebuild the family."

You know what the average court looks like—a marble floor that hasn't been scrubbed in a month and is pocked with cigarette butts; walls painted a dirty brown to shoulder height, and a dirtier cream a woodwork aroun long unwashed t sunlight has a ha through; surly an attendants in slop Judge Kross' cour a court—it looked you do," Judge Kross said. "You want your home to be nicer than your parents', and that's a wonderful thing. But you want your lives to be better too."

She paused a moment and sighed. "I think you're both right —and both wrong," she said. "Of course your wife has to dress well or she'd lose her job, and then where'd you be? And of course you want a nice home—so does she. Now I think we can show you how you can make it better without its costing much at all. You go downstairs and see some of the things we've done—maybe you'll get some ideas."

The couple left, and the last probation officer's report said both their home and their home life were transformed.

The downstairs, to which Judge Kross referred, is one of the most remarkable things about her unique experiment. It's a model, furnished seven-room home with a twofold job: to provide a nursery where children can play while their parents are in court, and to teach by demonstration how a home can be attractive on a limited budget.

It is also an unusual example of cooperation toward a social end, between private industry and a public institution.

The rooms in the home are painted in soft, pastel colors. Gay cretonnes soften the windows, and rugs warm the floors. The furniture is tasteful, but inexpensive. The dinette, which is small and dark, is brightened by a yellow luncheon cloth and ruffles on the shelves that hold the dishes. The nursery, presided over by a matron who looks after the children while their parents are in court, is gay with a bright red tricycle, blue-and-green blocks, games, coloring books, and a child's primitive art work on the walls. Everything in the apartment, says Judge Kross, is "the kind of thing that a family making $4,000 a year could afford."

"I recognize," she added, peering earnestly through her round, plastic-rimmed glasses, "that we Americans react to things. Everything in our culture pattern emphasizes material things. But we don't teach people how to use them properly. Why, we're the only country in the world that can bring beauty to homes at the very lowest level. We have the know-how—just look at our 5-and-10-cent stores; they're full of wonderful, inexpensive things. But people in all walks of life haven't been educated to know the difference between a gadget and something that's really useful."

Because she wanted to do such a job of educating, Judge Kross conceived the idea of the model home. The budget for her court didn't allow any such frills. But this did not stop her. Skirting normal political channels, she took her need straight to people who could answer it.

She became, in her own words, "a schnorrer, a ghetto beggar." She went around to fabric houses, furniture concerns, and appliance firms asking for handouts. And got them. Schumacher & Co. gave her the drapery fabrics, and the Singer Sewing Machine Co. made up the curtains. Lamps came from Lightolier, decorative pieces from Revere Copper, baby food from Gerber & Co., and other items from other firms.

"And do you know," Judge Kross said, "I think the people who gave these things got a bigger kick out of it than the court clients who use them."

But Anna Kross' job of teaching by demonstration has paid off for many families who have passed through her court. One recent case—rather extreme, it's true—demonstrated pertinently her belief that the misuse of things can get a family in trouble.

The couple, a European university professor and his wife, had been in this country less than a year. Both had survived the horror of concentration camps. Because the husband spoke no English, he was eking out a living here by cleaning a night club. Now, determined to fight his way back to the station in life that his training and skill qualified him for, he was slowly learning English via one of the free night-school courses.

His wife, also college educated, was figuratively gazing wide-eyed at this wonderful new country. Two things dazzled her: the freedom of American women and the unbelievable wealth of things in all the stores. It was like turning a half-starved child loose with $10 in a candy store. In a misguided, but wholly understandable, attempt to establish her independence and acquire some of these things, she was spending too much of their meager funds on cheap and relatively useless gadgets. Which, of course, infuriated her husband. Because he was already under heavy pressure, he exploded one night, and they had an argument that landed them before Judge Kross.

With quick sympathy, Anna Kross heard their story. She spoke first to the man. She adi ed she said, for his guts in fi or to America and then ati hard to re-establish hi elf told him that it is men sh who have made Ar ica strong, independent co ry and she welcomed hir s and valuable citizen. he interpreted to him th ca their trouble.

The trouble is so many people don't know how to start; once you show them, they can often take the idea and run away with it. I remember one bride who was completely defeated by the mess in her home. I took a couple of hours to show her how to fix places for everything and put them in it. You'd have been amazed at the difference it made just to straighten the place up. She was delighted."

In another home, an 8-year-old daughter was heading for trouble. She was skipping school, was silent, withdrawn, and unreachable as only a sensitive child can be when she's hurt.

"I noticed that she liked to make things," said Mrs. Mayer. "The paintings she did in school were remarkably good. So I suggested that her mother tack up some of her pictures in their home. It brightened the place considerably and, because it made her feel important, brightened the little girl's life, too."

Max Blaustein, supervisor of Home Term's probation officers, told why an attractive home and well-cooked meals can help build stronger family life. "The great preponderance of our cases," he said, "come from noisy, cluttered, poor homes. And you can see why: Quiet and order in a pleasant home tend to relax both parents and children—they're much less liable to blow off their tensions in violence. I've known several cases where merely changing the arrangement of things in a home has provided relief."

He leaned forward eagerly in his chair. "Look at it this way," he said. "A man comes home tired from a rough day at the office. He walks into a sloppy house—or a drab, colorless house—in which the kids are yelling at each other; the mother, looking like a slattern, is hollering at them. Maybe she slaps a hastily cooked, tasteless dinner on the table. And these added irritations, rubbing on nerves already raw, make him do one of two things—roar for peace and quiet, or get out of the house to find it elsewhere.

"So he goes out. And what does this mean? It means, if he keeps it up, that there's one less thing he shares with his wife. The way things are set up today, about the only thing a man has a chance to share with his family is recreation; if he seeks that alone too, there's not much common interest left."

So the family blows up and, if it's very lucky, lands in Judge Kross' understanding hands.

"The greatest explosion of our time," she said, with quiet intensity, "is not the atomic bomb. It's the explosion that takes place in every home where our personalities, tensions, and interests come into conflict. If it is a poor home, it blows up into court. If a better-educated one, the explosion is smothered more, but the impact is felt by all members of the family.

"The family is the basic unit of life. So long as there is war in the family, that splendid United Nations building up on Forty-second Street is a tower of Babel, for the world can have no peace."

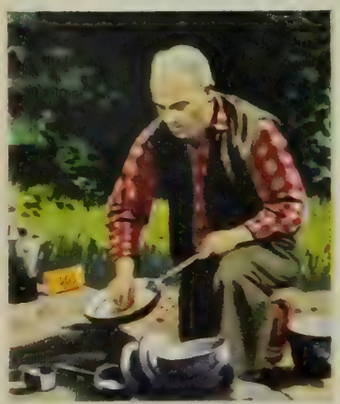
TAKE ALONG S.O.S

says CHARLEY MILLER

America's top outdoor cook



(The title: "America's greatest outdoor cook" belongs to Charley Miller, Maine Guide. Charley came out of the woods to write this column.)

"I can cook steaks, chicken or fish, as well as biscuits and johnny-cake, out-of-doors as well as most housewives cook 'em in high-priced ovens.

"But in twenty years, guiding hundreds of hunters and fishermen (including many notables of screen, stage, radio and sports), I always thought my hardest job was cleaning pots and pans.

"Until I heard of S.O.S., I used sand, mud, scalding water, soap powders and lots of elbow action. In the woods, soot bakes hard and grease sticks like glue. I hate to think of the hours I lost cleaning pots and pans until I started using S.O.S. Now, S.O.S. magic scouring pads travel with me wherever I cook. They lick soot, grease and they polish and shine.

"Hope to see you some day in the Maine woods. I can promise you some good outdoor meals because all my pots and pans are cleaned with S.O.S."

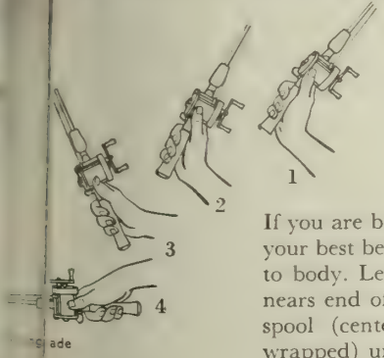
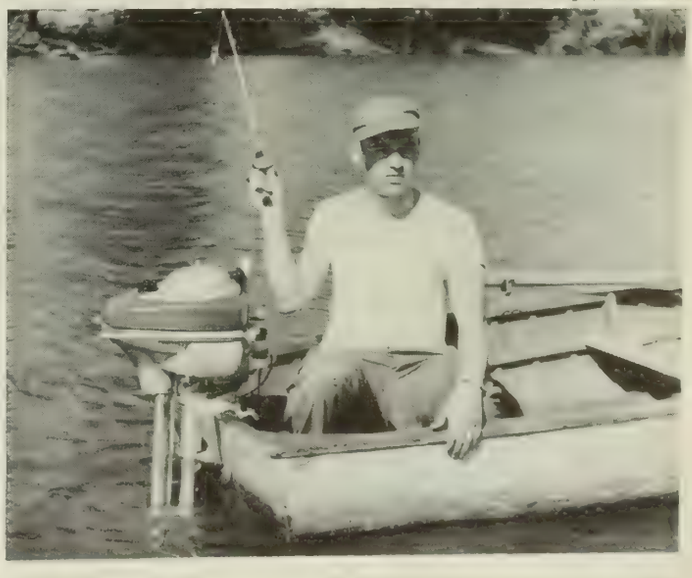
How to fish if you don't know how



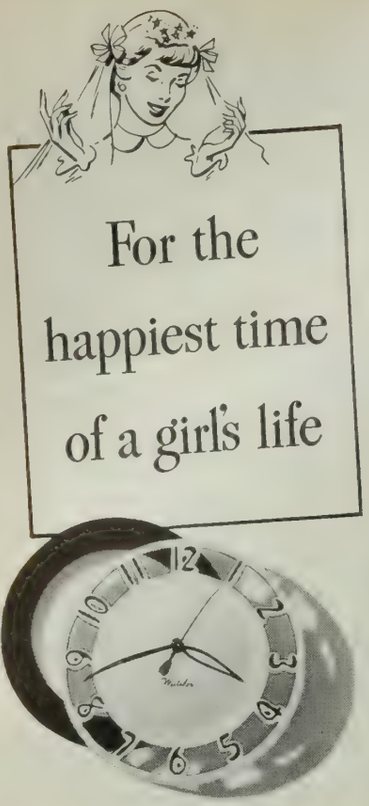
By Bink and Vera Bradshaw

Many a family has shied away from fishing because it doesn't know a fly from a fishworm—or which you use to catch what. The editors of House & Gardens, who don't know much about fishing either, asked us to write a piece for amateurs, and their wives and kids, who get tackle up in the tackle, and let even the little ones get away. Maybe you've gone fishing. You didn't ask questions; you were afraid you'd be laughed at. Even guides and resort men seldom volunteer advice. They've been snubbed too often, made too many people mad. So it's obvious that a lot of families aren't going to enjoy the thrills, companionship, and outdoor fun that go with fishing unless somebody gives them the facts simple and elementary enough for any beginner to understand. The Izaak Walton boys will have the room while you read this.

Think this kind of thrill is only for the experts? You're wrong. Fishermen are made, not born, and it's never too late to learn; even if you've never had a rod in your hands



The right way to cast with casting rod and reel



If you are buying only one rod and reel, this is your best bet. Cast with wrist snap, elbow close to body. Let reel spin, handles up, until plug nears end of arc. Then drag thumb lightly on spool (center of reel around which line is wrapped) until plug begins to fall. Then press line with thumb to stop spool, and prevent backlash, the snarl-up you get when spool revolves after line stops running. There's no easy way to untangle backlash; you have to pick out the loops with your fingernails.

How to fish if you don't know how

How to cast with fly rod: Rod moves only between 2 and 10 o'clock positions. "Strip" a yard or more of line from reel before backcast, hold this loop of line in left hand, pull on it slightly against rod tip, and release during forward cast, permitting line "stripped" to "shoot" forward to lengthen cast. Flip your backcast high, wait until you feel pull of line, then snap your wrist and forearm forward. Try to make fly hit water before line does.

How to still-fish: In shallow water, up to 8 feet, use a bobber. If you tie bobber in place, have line below bobber no longer than pole. Sliding bobbers are better because they slide on line as water deepens, keeping bait at bottom. In deeper water, use straight line. If using a 3-inch minnow, or larger, direct square hook under skin alongside dorsal (top) fin, beginning at back, bringing up and out toward head, permitting minnow to swim right side up. If minnow is smaller than 3 inches, hook through both lips to prevent drowning. With live bait, let fish nibble awhile.

How to troll: Trolling is moving slowly, dragging a baited line behind the boat. Let out lots of line and let bait get close to the bottom before you begin to troll. Use heavier weight than for still-fishing. Let out more line gradually. Remove any weeds immediately; fish won't bite when weeds drape across the bait. If your hook gets snagged on something, let line run out until boat can be stopped. Back up until you pass over spot where hook is snagged. Then jerk repeatedly. Hook should come free. If you're using minnows, start hook through minnow's mouth, out a gill. Then twist hook and run it through back under dorsal fin, permitting hook to stick out on opposite side. When fish bites, let him pull on line a second before jerking line to "set" hook. With artificial baits, set hook instant fish bites. Boat should be moving just enough to keep bait off the bottom.

How to make and use a sounding line: The most important single "secret" in catching fish is to know depth at which fish are feeding. Make your own sounder of heavy weight and chalk line; mark off, with single, double, triple, etc. knots, depths in 5-foot stages. Then keep accurate mental record of depth at which fish are striking.

Spinners and hook sizes: Spinners are oval discs that revolve above lure or hook to attract attention by flashing. When fishing in weeds, use weedless hook. Some artificial lures are weedless. Hook sizes are indicated like this:

—also available in the SUPER Series is named "Estate Wagon" for very good reasons

HERE is something vastly more than a car for transporting guests and their luggage from the station—or a week's supply of groceries from the store.

While it's true that the rear seat flips ingeniously over to form a carpeted platform, more than six feet from front to back and almost five feet wide—this smartly styled conveyance manages to look distinguished, even when playing truck at the wish of its master.

You might say it "doubles in class"—for it's equally at home before the stately porticos of a mansion or sweeping serenely through the night to a white-tie-and-tails affair.

It has, of course, every Buick feature—Fireball power—Dynaflow Drive*—four coil-springed wheels and honest heft that level the miles with majestic smoothness.

In its ROADMASTER version, this is the costliest of Buicks. It is built for those who want something finer than fine—and of course, that makes possession ultraexclusive.

Have you ever examined the Estate Wagon? Better ask your Buick dealer to arrange a viewing of this "limited edition" soon.

How to put a crayfish on hook

Where: Lakes, small and large. Perch are native or have been introduced into almost every state. Lots of them in north-central lakes.

A good method: Still-fishing off docks or where shore line drops to deep water. If fish don't nibble within 5 minutes, wrong place.

Depth: 15 feet or less.

Best time: Usually so numerous they can be caught any time, by anybody. Easy for children.

Size: Average: ¼ pound; up to rare maximum of 3 pounds.

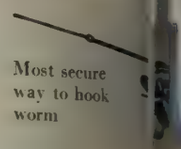
Fighting habit: Pecking at bait, dropping it, returning to peck again before trying to swallow.

Bullheads

Rod and reel: Cane pole, casting rod, fly rod, or a tree limb.

Line: Anything strong enough.

Hooks: From bent pins to 2/0 size. Sometimes treble hooks.



Leader: Not necessary.

Weight: Heavy enough to get to bottom of lake or stream, or to hold bobber upright.

Bait and lures: Angleworms, grasshoppers, cut bait, crayfish.

Where: Most of eastern half of the United States and Canada. Lakes, rivers, creeks, stagnant pools, almost any kind of water, the warmer—and sometimes the muddier—the better.

4 average; up to 160. Flathead, 2 to 4 average; up to about 60.

Fighting habit: Will mouth bait (except blood), drop it, and return, for unusually long time before eating. Once hooked, seldom gets free.

Lake trout

Rod and reel: In early spring and late fall, when lake trout are near surface, use 5- to 5½-foot casting rods or stiff fly rods, 7½ to 9 feet. Otherwise, heavy steel or wood rods, adequate for handling metal lines that are needed to get to bottom and stay there in water as deep as 100 feet. Standard casting and fly-rod reels early and late. Other times, big reel, multiplying or not, which will handle minimum of 150 yards metal line.

Line: Heavy rods: braided steel, or single-strand steel or copper, 70-pound test or less. Casting rods: 100 yards of 18-pound nylon or silk. Use backing with fly line.

Leader: If trolling with 70-pound metal line, use 5-foot leader of 45-pound twisted wire. With casting rod, steel leader, 6 inches or more long. With fly rod, 3 feet or 9 feet, stout.

Weight: When trout near surface, none—or very little—needed. In summer, get to the bottom, even if it is 100 feet down.

Bait and lures: As ice goes out and comes in, flies, preferably underwater, and streamers with little spinner. Medium or small underwater plugs or spoons with casting rods. For deep trolling, large metal spoons, very bright.

Where: Rocky, cold, deep lakes. Usually found along precipices or sunken reefs. Almost all of Canada. In the United States, from northern Minnesota east to Maine.

Depth: From 40 to 100 feet.

Best time: Before 3 p.m.

Size: Inland, average 3 pounds; maximum 18 to 20. Great Lakes, average 5 pounds; up to 100.

Fighting habit: After being hooked, turns tail to fisherman and pulls straight away.

When steel puts on its party manners

Metal sculpture, executed in Weirzin—electrolytic zinc-coated steel that resists heat, moisture, rust—demonstrates the exceptional workability of this easily fabricated metal.

You don't have to own a country estate to enjoy the fun of parties, steak fries and barbecues right on the home grounds.

With a little imagination—and the right furnishings—any smart couple can transform the area outside their home into an attractively functional site for outdoor living.

You have the imagination—you know what you'd like outside. And the right furnishings are available and agreeably priced. They are made of steel—America's great bargain metal.

Steel outdoor furnishings are handsome as well as hardy. They resist corrosion, rot, fire and warping better than any other paintable material. You know they'll last through years of hard use, years of hard weather.

Steel costs so little . . . gives so much.
Make steel your standard—and save.

Treat soiled spots by rubbing a little dry soap or synthetic detergent into the wet fabric before starting the washing. Rinse thoroughly. Hang dripping wet on hangers in a warm, airy place to dry. Or use an automatic dryer.

Question: Should I starch my nylon curtains?

Answer: Normally nylon curtains keep their crispness through washing and do not require starching. But if you like extra crispness, give them a light starching with a thin starch solution. Follow package directions for preparing the starch. Have the curtains evenly wet, and be sure to work the solution through the fabric thoroughly. Hang evenly and smoothly over a line. Or roll in towels to absorb excess moisture and iron immediately. Press on the wrong side.

Question: Can I wash nylon shirts in the washer with a load of other white things?

Answer: Certainly, and they will get a more thorough washing than by the average hand method. Put them in with other lightweight garments. For traveling and other emergency purposes, nylon shirts and women's blouses are wonderful. They can be washed out by hand, dried in shape, and worn without pressing. But there is no reason why you should not use the more convenient washer at other times.

Question: What is meant by "heat-set"?

Answer: During the finishing process, nylon fabrics can be set to any desired shape or size by certain temperatures and moisture conditions. Not all types of nylon fabrics are heat-set. Those that are properly set will keep their shape and may require very little, if any, ironing.

Question: Can I bleach nylon safely?

Answer: Yes. A bleach in a weak solution will remove specific stains, but it is not effective at all for reducing over-all discoloration. As always when you use a chlorine bleach, rinse it out thoroughly or the fibers will gradually weaken. For best results, follow directions on the bottle. If directions aren't given for nylon, use the amount recommended for a normal cotton bleach.

Question: Will nylon sweaters and socks shrink?

Answer: No.

Six good ways to support pot plants

By Janice Eastland Shane

Plastic-coated "glass cloth" comes 36 inches wide. Space vertical 2x4s three feet apart, center to center. Tack on screen. Nail lath batten to 2x4s where screen edges come together. To hold pots on 2x4 ledges, nail 1½-inch lattice slats ½ inch above ledges. To accommodate clay pots up to 5 inches in diameter, put 1½-inch wood blocks between slats and the 2x4s

If you're looking for a simple, inexpensive way to display house plants outdoors, here are several you can adapt to your own needs.

To begin with, a combination trellis-plant rack backed with "glass cloth" will hold securely the flowering and trailing plants you want to accent your house. It will give you privacy plus an attractive backdrop for your terrace or back entrance and protect your plants from the wind.

All of the supports shown can be used to hold plants on the trellis, or wherever you want them.

For information on plants to set out now for summer color and how to grow bedding plants successfully, see "Color now where you want it," page 54.

To secure small pots from all the st winds, drive large-headed, gal nred na ledge. Let heads protrude en 0 to 00 holes in the pots. Nails won't p the d

how one family found a place to play

this was our BASEMENT grim and stark...

now it's transformed —thanks to Mr. CLARK

Why wait to have a beautiful basement playroom like this? The job can pay for itself if you stop costly heat losses in your home by applying Balsam-Wool in your uninsulated attic!

I confess I was a little shocked when my teen-aged Jim said, "Gee, Mom, Sis and I would spend a lot more time at home if we had a real place to entertain our friends. Why can't we fix up the basement to be a play room?"

Of course, I'd often thought of that. But remodeling seemed such a big job—and I dreaded the muss and fuss. That's when Mr. Clark, our lumber dealer, entered the scene.

"Strangely enough," Mr. Clark said, "we'll start your basement remodeling in the attic. First, we'll apply Balsam-Wool attic insulation to cut down your fuel bills, and give your whole house year-round comfort. I'll tell you why later.

"The basement will be easy. We'll put Nu-Wood Sta-Lite tile on the ceiling—and carry out the effect with Sta-Lite board and Nu-Wood tan plank on the walls. Nu-Wood is the ideal material because it provides extra insulation—absorbs noise—and doesn't need a bit of painting. We can do the whole job in just a few days—and you won't have any housecleaning to do afterwards.

"And—oh, yes—you were wondering about the cost. The Balsam-Wool insulation in your attic can save enough in your fuel bills to pay for itself and your Nu-Wood basement room, too. That's the Nu-Wood and Balsam-Wool System!'

Begins on page 74

Garden Salad Bowl

It can be as beautiful as the one on page 74—

Crisp lettuce
Water cress
Tender spinach leaves
Green celery tops
Cucumber slices
Chopped green onions

Green ideas for salads

Vary combinations of greens. Use Romaine, Bibb or leaf lettuce, escarole, endive, dandelion leaves, red and green cabbage, nasturtium leaves and stems, with others available in markets. Use edible greens in pleasing combinations.

Have you tried herbs?

Add fresh herbs from summer gardens—chives, parsley, tarragon, dill, thyme, summer savory, fennel, and others.

Vary the vegetable

Add finely diced green pepper, crisp celery, carrot, radishes.

New toppings

Use crumbled cheese: Blue, cheddar, Parmesan, and others. Slivered toasted almonds, walnuts, pecans, ground nuts. Julienne sticks of cheese, ham, pork, veal, chicken. Orange and grapefruit sections, avocado slivers, tomato wedges, cucumber slices, egg slices, radish slices and roses, scallions. Sprinkle with sesame seeds.

Experiment with dressings

Add blended herbs to basic French dressing (recipe, page 110), using 2 to 3 tablespoons to 1 cup French dressing. Add crumbled Blue cheese, ½ cup to 1 cup French dressing. Blend French dressing with a little chutney; chili and chives; minced anchovies, pickles, and chives; or chopped green olives, chives, parsley, pickles.

Season French dressing with dry mustard, Worchestershire sauce, a little curry, celery or garlic salt.

Vary the vinegars. Use fruit juice—lime, lemon, orange—for part of vinegar used. Use mayonnaise, sour cream, Thousand Island, or variations of these.

Easy Quick Salads

- Sliced tomatoes with salt, pepper, and vinegar, or French dressing, on lettuce or water cress.
- Diced, cooked beets and minced scallions, crisp lettuce. Tarragon French dressing.

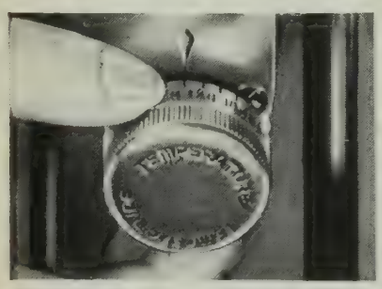
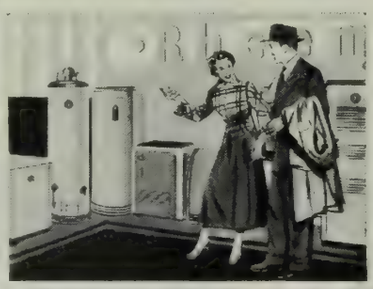
Placed nearer to the major hot water outlets, this efficient Rheem automatic gas water heater keeps hot water instantly on tap, at all times, at lower cost.



How to get enough HOT WATER!

Add up your hot water needs BEFORE you add an automatic water heater.



Don't make the costly mistake of buying a new water heater to meet only your present needs. It will surely fall short later if you add a new bathroom or an automatic laundry or a streamlined kitchen.

The automatic Rheem gas water heater is rated to show exactly how many gallons of hot water it can supply. A washing machine, for example, needs 15 to 36 gallons, a tub bath 12, shower 10, dishes about 1 gallon per person.

Your plumber can recommend the correct size Rheem so that you will always have enough hot water. Because it's AUTOMATIC, you'll never have to bother with lighting, waiting, or servicing. And, because it's built by the world's largest maker, you can always rely on Rheem.

Laundry and Dishwashing machines may need hotter water to operate properly. The Rheem thermostat dial can be set up to 180°. Burner goes on and off by itself, conserves fuel.

Rheem Makes Models for all fuels. All are backed by the Good Housekeeping Guaranty, the A.G.A. or U.L. seals. Call your Rheem Reliable Plumber, listed in the Classified Directory.

It's 10 times faster with a Johnson's Wax Beautiflor Electric Polisher! You can rent one almost anywhere—available in 50,000 stores. Or you can buy one for $44.50.

Your floors get real protection when you use genuine wax

Begin today to protect your floors from ugly "wear spots" with genuine Johnson's Polishing Wax. If you delay too long only costly refinishing will make them presentable again.

You'll find it takes a little more time to apply genuine Johnson's Polishing Wax than it does to use self polishing waxes. But it gives longer-lasting protection so you don't wax too often.

And waxed floors are really easy to keep clean—much easier than carpeted floors. A dry mop whisks dust away.

Genuine Johnson's Wax comes in two forms—Paste and Liquid. Many people prefer Paste, because it's highly concentrated. Liquid is especially easy to use, and dry cleans as it waxes. Both give your floors real wax beauty and protection. Use either or both for the loveliest floors your home ever had. Begin today!

For lasting beauty and protection insist on genuine

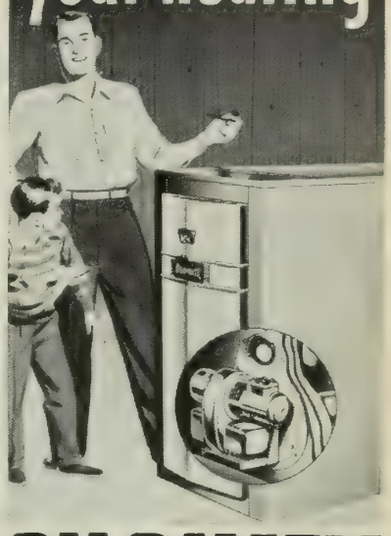
United States Forest Products Laboratory ..., Wisconsin—from men who have devoted all their lives to the study of houses.

These men know of many an old house, built of fine materials, that has broken out with paint rash. Neither wet lumber nor poor paint was to blame.

These blistered houses were simply allergic to winter's indoor moisture, they told me. Tightly built houses are most likely to have this allergy. But older ones can contract it, too.

Fortunately, there is a reliable cure. Once you know it, you can administer it yourself, as I did. But first you must know the cause.

It's really quite simple. Warm air, like that inside your house in winter, can hold a lot more moisture vapor than cold air. This indoor vapor, like indoor heat, tries to escape outdoors. It can pass right through such things as plaster and wood and brick.



If you have an old, uninsulated house, the space inside the walls is fairly warm, even in zero weather. The moisture vapor moves outside. But the walls are also leaking heat.

It's a different story with tightly built, well-insulated houses. The inward side of the insulation is warm; the other side many degrees colder. That cold is a vapor trap. The moisture vapor condenses into water that soaks the sheathing. It may even change to frost. Then, with warmer weather, even a January thaw, it soaks through the siding and swells the paint into blisters.

At the same time, moisture may collect around cold nails holding [Turn to next page

ELECTRIC AND KEYWOUND

A door that saves space

By Louise Price Bell

If the rooms in your home are small, and doors take up too much space, here's an inexpensive idea that will help solve your problem.

The tall, narrow door pictured here, was once an old-fashioned door that took up too much space when it was open and made furniture arrangement difficult.

The family needed the door for privacy. But they also needed the wall space that they couldn't use when the old door was open.

The problem was solved by sawing the door in half. It was then repainted, and impressive (but inexpensive) door pulls attached. The pulls are actually drapery holdbacks. These are sometimes called "rosettes." Door halves are hinged on inside of the casing.

The narrow doors take up much less room when open than did the "old" one.

Sometimes it takes only the simplest of decorating tricks—something like sawing a door in half—to give your home a distinctive, "well-dressed" look.

Actually, constant gnawing on bones wears away tooth enamel, and invites dental trouble.

Bones have a value for young puppies in the teething age. Chewing on something hard satisfies the instinctive urge to rub off the baby teeth so the new ones can come through. But again, any hard-surfaced toy serves just as well.

Certain types of bones, though, are actually dangerous. Chicken, turkey, and rabbit bones are so high in calcium they cannot be dissolved by digestive juices. Splintered, they pass through the digestive system like so many sharp, little needles. If they happen to catch on intestinal linings, they may puncture this protective coating, starting nasty hemorrhages and even causing the animal's death.

No less an authority than Dr. Edwin R. Blamey, veterinarian of the American Kennel Club, says flatly, "Bones are absolutely unnecessary to the health of a dog." He also says that too much calcium derived from incessant bone eating can cake up and act as a "stopper" in a dog's elimination tract or cause autointoxication (self-poisoning) in the digestive system. Another thing, says Doctor Blamey, when bones are fed on an empty stomach, they promote a great flow of digestive juices on which there's nothing to work, with the result of causing gas, stomach-ache, and vomiting.

There's no great harm in giving a dog an occasional bone. A knuckle or shank bone, that is. But there's no particular good in it either. The point is: Don't get the idea you're packing good nutrition into your pet by filling his plate with bones. If your dog likes to chew bones, leave some meat, fat, and gristle on them.

All in all, it's best to lay off bones altogether. If you want your dog to be healthy and happy, do the same as professional dog breeders. Bones play no part in the menus of their dogs. Rather, get hold of a good feeding formula, properly balanced in vitamins, minerals, and fats. That's the thing that keeps a dog prosperous, full of life and pep.

Bones won't do it!

We are soon moving into town. My father says a dog can't be raised in town. What is your opinion, and what kind of dog would be best?—H. B. P., Illinois.

Millions of America's dogs live and thrive in towns and cities. In fact, a recent survey shows that more dogs live in cities than on farms. What's more, the city dogs outlive the country dogs by more than a 20-percent margin, because they get better care and food. As to the best breed, a medium- or small-sized dog seems to get along best in the city.

We have a Collie pup, but because of having only a small lot, we do not want a large dog. Is there any way we can hold down his size?—R. G., Oklahoma.

There is no safe "method" to hold down normal growth and size of any dog. Any deliberate effort to restrict normal growth and development will only penalize your dog's health.

At times the fish in my aquarium lie close to the bottom as though they are sick. They do not eat well and are not normally active during such periods. What can cause this?—H. W. W., Indiana.

The condition is probably due to an excess of carbon monoxide in the water, which is caused by decomposition of uneaten food, dead snails, or other circumstances which come from an unclean tank. Change of water, plus care to feed no more than the fish will eat, should remedy the situation.

I'm told a dog shouldn't eat pork. Is there any truth in this?—J. J. Mc., New York.

There is nothing against pork, provided it is boiled or roasted and does not contain too much fat. It is known that pork contains 7 to 8 times as much vitamin B as beef does. Dogs need vitamin B.

Furniture you can use indoors or out

Metal chairs and glass-topped tables are deceptively practical—and versatile, too. Sturdy enough for porch or terrace, they're equally appropriate in dining room

Spills are nothing to glass table tops; tablecloths—even place mats—are unnecessary. Bamboo blinds filter morning sun for owners Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Konigslow of Tucson, Arizona. Teacart is versatile, too. Load it with plants and push it to sunny windows

← Light and airy styling of metal furniture is cool looking. When you choose fabrics to cover chair cushions, consider where you'll use them. Here, Decorator Alfred Messner uses lime green and a washable sand color: keeps them soft and muted so as not to detract from the view of the garden. Incidentally, muted tones increase the illusion of coolness

You can change the character of wrought-iron furniture with slipcovers. On their porch, the Herman R. Sutherlands of Kansas City have used a bright plaid on seat cushions. Indoors, the same furniture would be more formal-looking with chair pads covered in wide-wale corduroy or heavy, textured cotton as possible after a crash, knew what was at stake for Timmy. If the lad didn't go back into the lake, he might fear water for a lifetime. In knee-deep water near shore, his father emptied small change from the pocket of his swim trunks and called Timmy to help him recover the "lost" coins.

In splashing around for pennies and nickels, Timmy soon forgot about his fear. Before leaving, he and his dad made plans to return the next weekend, when they would go out to a deeper level. Timmy's dad promised to teach him to swim under water and dive for coins.

A little imagination can go a long way in devising means of uprooting fear. A small girl became almost hysterical when put in a dark room to sleep. A number of efforts to cure her failed. Then her mother got a hunch and followed it. She bought a book on simplified astronomy, and pointed out the various stars from her daughter's bedroom windows.

Soon this became a nightly game in which Mother would test Sandra to find out how many stars she knew by name. The little girl developed a habit of putting herself to sleep by counting and naming stars. The game not only overcame her fear of darkness but gave her a fondness for it. When the lights were on, she couldn't see the stars clearly enough.

Another imaginative mother used a simple yet effective system to cope with her daughter's fear of darkness. She sat in the unlighted bedroom, telling pleasant stories in which she compared the black of night to something smooth and soft that the girl liked—a piece of velvet. Her well-chosen words made young Betty feel the darkness rest soothingly on her skin—a comforting friend.

Although fear of lightning and thunder may be transmitted to your child by you or some other family member, these phenomena can of themselves draw a fear response.

Thunder, especially, frightens many boys and girls, for fear of sudden loud noise—along with fear of falling—is one of the two fears with which all of us are born. However, that doesn't mean that you can't help your child if he be[comes] alyzed with terror at ea[ch] rumbles.

Unfortunately, many youngsters hide anxieties. An excellent way of relieving tensions is to encourage your sons and daughters to talk about their hidden fears. Doctors Reusch and Prestwood maintain that everyone—infant as well as adult—needs to share anxieties, preferably with a loved one. You can help Johnnie immeasurably by listening to him calmly and reassuringly, and explaining the things he fears and how best to deal with them.

If you pooh-pooh Johnnie's fears, you are only handicapping his readjustment. There may be no such things as ghosts or witches, but they can be real to Johnnie if he has been exposed to fantastic folklore without first being informed that the characters are fictional.

Some mothers and fathers still use fear as a disciplinary stick. Actually, there are enough elements of danger in daily living without adding to your boy or girl's difficulties. It is almost criminal to make a youngster fear the dark by talking about Bogey Men who lurk in shadows "waiting for bad boys who won't mind their parents." It is barbarous to do what one mother often does to keep her small daughter in line. She has made her youngster believe that the dragon fly is a "darning needle" that sews up the mouths of "little girls who talk too much." That's an old, old superstition and particularly harmful in this case.

If you have ever tried to make your youngster behave by threatening to take him to the doctor or dentist, you already know what a problem it is to bring him there when treatment is necessary.

Thoughtless remarks by grown-ups may create fear in your children—comments such as "I've always been afraid of dogs" (or horses, water, or high places, doctors, or the dark). These confessions, overheard by your boy or girl, who considers Dad and Mother as solid as Gibraltar, may transfer your anxiety to them.

Let's face it: In repeatedly warning your boy or girl against climbing trees, using a hard ball, playing football, you reveal yourself as afraid. You are displaying your own anxieties to the gr tators of all—your chil must exercise self-cont wish your sons and daug come normal adults.

Inasmuch as you are their models, you owe it to your children to follow a positive course of action. A positive course would be making an honest, adult effort to adjust to home, business, and world conditions. Only when this is done can confidence grow—confidence in self, in one's fellow man, in the future—despite the hydrogen bomb, threat of war, press of debts, ill health, or threatening tomorrows that make for anxious todays. The fortunate part of such a policy is that you as well as your children will reap the reward of healthier, happier living.

little as 50 cents) while a searchlight is turned on one island after another. This will make an excellent appetizer for tomorrow's longer ride.

Third day. This morning take the Two Nations Boat Tour, winding through narrow channels between these wonderful islands. It lasts about 2½ hours, costs $1.75, adult or child. You'll stop on Heart Island to walk through Boldt Castle (50 cents per person). This is a remarkable reproduction of a medieval castle of 300 rooms, begun by rags-to-riches George Boldt, once president of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, as a present to his wife. Her death in 1907 caused him to abandon the project and it remains now a crumbling, unfinished memorial. In addition to the longer tours, there are special boats that just go to the castle.

What a collection of islands this is! Some are small, bare rocks to which a single tree clings uncertainly. Others are so large they contain whole villages. Still others are handsomely landscaped places with beautiful summer homes and enormous, barnlike boathouses, built for steam yachts of a bygone era. There are 12 state parks here, and you can park free on an island and just relax if you want to.

Maybe you'll have an extra day for a Thousand Islands Shore Dinner. It begins early in the morning! You hire a guide, a fishing launch, and try your luck for bass, pike, perch, pickerel, or muskellunge. Fishing is generally excellent, but even if you don't get a bite, your guide will have plenty of fish for your shore dinner on some inviting island. He'll supplement it with a steak, salad, vegetables in season, lots of coffee, and French toast. For a family of four, it will cost around $35 for everything. However, if you want to economize, the Chamber of Commerce, in addition to telling you how to get a guide, stands ready to recommend a boatman who will rent you a boat with a about $5 a day. Ethan Allen's famous surprise attack won it for the Colonists. In the waters below, Benedict Arnold assembled our first fighting fleet. Drive slowly down the 30 miles beside Lake George, because it is truly one of the most beautiful lakes in the world. Now and then it lies right beside you, crystal clear, deep blue, and with mountains all around. Many of the 183 islands are state-owned. You can get a free permit and camp on one for two weeks. Complete outfits including canoe, tent, and cooking equipment may be rented along the lake. As you drive along, you see all kinds of summer homes and magnificent resort hotels.

Several boat rides are available at Lake George Village. They range from a $1 speedboat trip to a leisurely tour the full length of the lake and back (adults, $2.60; half fare for children of 5-12; children under 5, free). It's an elegant outing, with the boat making interesting stops along the way. The lake is from ¾ of a mile to four miles wide. From docks and islands, happy vacationists wave at you. The brook trout is excellent at the Sky Harbor Cafe, and while you eat you can get another panoramic view of the lake through a big picture window. Before the sun sets, drive up French Mountain. This "Top of the World" drive ends with a spectacular view of the southern end of Lake George, and though the land is privately owned, there is no entrance fee. You sleep in Lake George Village in whatever accommodation suits you.

Sixth day. 207 miles. This would be a good start-before-breakfast day. It's only a 9-mile drive to Glen Falls. The caves immortalized in The Last of the Mohicans are here. You can get a good breakfast at the Queensbury Hotel.

At Saratoga Springs, get out and walk about. Don't miss seeing the fabulous old Grand Union Hotel. This town has two gastronomic inventions to its credit: the club sandwich and potato chips! George Washington and Alexander Hamilton drank the waters here. Today, modernized and beautifully planted, Saratoga Spa ranks among the best in the world. At the State Drink Hall, admission free, you can sample the waters for a small charge.

The famous battleground where General Burgoyne was decisively trounced by General Gates in 1777 lies to the east, beyond Saratoga Lake. It's not on your direct route to Albany, but is worth a short detour. At Albany, whose skyline is dominated by the $25,000,000 state capitol, you cross to the east side of the Hudson and drive through pleasant little towns with Dutch names. Kinderhook, for example, means "Children's Corner." In Rhinebeck, notice the homes with band-saw decoration, some of it Gothic, and as authentically folk art as a ship's figurehead. On your right is the beautiful Beekman Arms, built in 1700, and said to be the oldest inn in America. If you didn't make that early start, you can enjoy a fine lunch here and browse around among interesting old furniture and guns.

Now three of the most exciting homes in the state await your inspection. Since all of these are closed on Mondays, plan your trip so that your sixth day falls on some other day of the week.

You come first to the Mills Memorial State Park containing the magnificent 65-room French Renaissance home of Ogden Mills, former secretary of the treasury. Interiors by Stanford White include the green marble dining room, gold parlor, oak-paneled library. Original furnishings are all there. Admission, 25 cents, adult or child.

Next comes the Frederick W. Vanderbilt Italian Renaissance mansion now owned and maintained by the federal government. Since the 1700's, the grou been an arboretum culti a succession of gentlemer so even if you haven't tim side the house, you shoul (no charge) to see sup mens of different trees, biggest of their kind. You're launched among the sely varied shipping of this international port with its rvboats, husky tugs, huge liners, rust freighters. You'll ire oil barges, and a mis- ellaneous craft that defy you what they've used for.

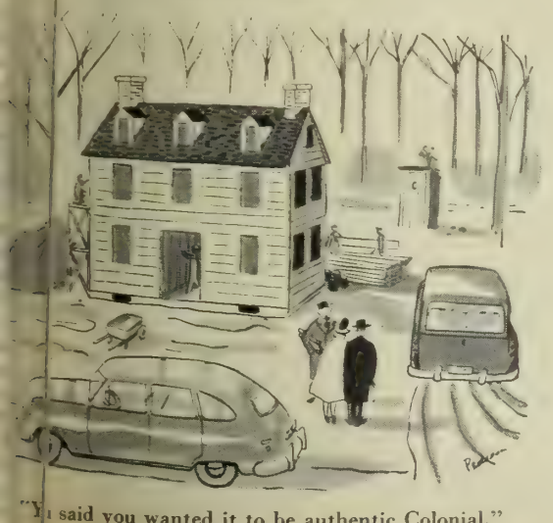
Farther down you may ight the Queen Mary ilhouette being nosed into its erth by a pair of officious tug- oats for the trip around Man- ttan's first possible intro- to the city. Adults: $2.50 ach for the hour ride; children, 5.

The best bus tours is the New York ride, leaving Times Square. On it you pass the Empire State Building, see Washington Square, City Hall, the Civic Center, Wall Street, Trinity Church, Custom House, Chinatown, the Bowery, and other sights you've heard about. Fare: $3.50, whatever your age.



Another good trip is the Upper New York and Harlem tour, which goes north on Fifth Avenue past swank stores, St. Patrick's Cathedral, famous churches, fashionable hotels, homes, and apartment houses. You see Central Park and enter the second largest cathedral in the world, that of St. John the Divine. You go through Harlem, visit Columbia University, ride down Riverside Drive past Grant's Tomb and Riverside Memorial Church with its 22-story tower. Fare: $3.

There are combinations of these two trips, also an 8-hour combination which adds to them a boat ride to the Statue of Liberty with an hour to get up in the forehead and look out upon the harbor. It also takes you to the top of the Empire State Building, world's tallest, and includes lunch and a tour of Radio City. Fare: $8.95.

The least expensive sight-seeing trip is still a ride on one of Fifth Avenue's double-decked busses. For 12 cents, you can ride all the way to the Cloisters, a branch of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, near the north tip of Manhattan.

Of course, you can take in most of these sights separately. A boat leaves the Battery for Bedloe Island and the Statue of Liberty; the fare is 70 cents for adults, 35 cents for children, plus a nickel apiece for the elevator ride up to the foot of the statue. Rates for the observation tower of the Empire State Building: adults, $1.20; 12-16, 45 cents; children under 12, 30 cents.

Grand Central Terminal, on 42nd Street, is another huge show which includes an art gallery, a famous oyster bar, and interesting across the Hudson River to see, on a clear day, the long profile of the Taconics, the Berkshires, and some of the Green Mountains in Vermont—"all creation" as James Fenimore Cooper put it.

Return to Windham for the night. The Thompson House, an old-fashioned hotel that will surprise you with its modern appointments, is an excellent place to stay and to eat. It's a good idea to have reservations.

Eleventh day. This day's 195 miles take in some of the most rugged Catskill scenery, especially around Grand Gorge. Spanish names embellish many hotels because wealthy Cubans and South Americans have made this area their favorite summering place for generations. After Stamford comes Delhi which was given that name because long ago its leading citizen was nicknamed "The Grand Mogul!" Here's rich dairy country and busy upland farming. You go through Binghamton, largest city in the southern part of the state, to Waverly. In Montour Village, Chequagua Falls seem to tumble right into Main Street.

For dinner you might go to Seneca Lodge, just outside Watkins Glen where you will put up for the night. If you're not too tired, sample Watkins Glen by artificial light after dinner.

Twelfth day. You can swim this morning in Seneca Lake at Municipal Lakeside Park. Then world-famous Watkins Glen awaits your inspection. Take Gorge Trail over numerous bridges, crossing the stream which has carved grotesque formations out of the rock. There are 18 waterfalls. At the end of your walk, you will be 700 feet higher than when you started. There is no admission charge, but you'll pay a quarter to park.

There's also a boat ride on Seneca Lake, largest of the Finger Lakes, 36 miles long and more than 3 miles wide. (Adults, 75 cents; children, 35 cents.) The third deepest body of water in the United States, 35 different species of fish have been taken from it.

Your first 35 miles of today's 140 are beside this serene lake. The landscape is verdant with nurseries, farming, and vineyards growing grapes which make fine wines and champagnes. A look at your map shows why the Indians called these long, narrow lakes "finger" lakes; they believed they had been made by the imprint of the hand of the Great Spirit, Skaneateles Lake being the thumb, Canandaigua the little finger. This region has nine state parks with scenic glens, high falls, beautiful streams, and batches of forest.

In both Geneva and Canandaigua, you will see fine examples of the Gothic Victorian and Greek Revival homes and public buildings of the early 1800's. Le Roy, another city on your route was the birthplace of the stringless bean!

Lofman—Pix

Biggest cause of hard soil at Yankee Stadium is the fact that crowds leaving the stands step off the walkway shown in background and onto the grass. Here Owens uses a tamp with spikes to loosen packed spots punch holes in the packed earth. Spots where wood platforms have been used are handspiked immediately after the event. After the handspiking, rain makers are turned on the cleared field.

Here's where your lawn and Yankee Stadium are alike. Soil compaction differs only in degree.

When ground is packed, water, air, and plant food enter it slowly, if at all. Root growth is shallow, and a thatch of dry roots and stems at the surface only increases the problem.

Need for aeration varies with the soil and the use the grass gets. Heavy soils pack more easily than sandy kinds. You can loosen soil with good results in spring or fall, if done when the ground is neither soggy nor dry. In mild weather, if soil isn't too wet, you can aerate into the winter months. If you do it in hot, dry weather, follow immediately with a thorough watering. Under normal conditions, soil loosening twice a year is enough.

Because plowing up a turfed area and reseeding is expensive, and you lose the space for immediate use, your best answer to soil compaction is newly designed soil-aerating equipment now available for home lawns. With it, or with a common fork if your space is small, you can cultivate under packed areas of your lawn with little or no damage to existing grass.

Fletcher

The simplest way to cultivate the soil under the packed spots on your lawn is with the tines of a common fork. Insert the tines and loosen soil gently so the sod isn't broken

The new equipment uses hollow tines or curved, hollow spoons to loosen soil to a depth of about three or four inches and to remove soil cores. Enough room is left so water and fertilizer can move into surrounding soil. Less rain runs off the aerated soil, and need for extra sprinkling is cut sharply.

Hollow-tined tools are even more effective than mechanical spikers with solid spikes which force holes in the ground by squeezing adjacent soil.

Here's how other phases of grass growing are handled at Yankee Stadium—full of leads you can use to keep good grass on the busy spots around your home:

Mowing. "In order to produce the best playing turf," says Owens, "we generally do not let the grass

Lofman—Pix

Biggest cause of hard soil at Yankee Stadium is the fact that crowds leaving the stands step off the walkway shown in background and onto the grass. Here Owens uses a tamp with spikes to loosen packed spots punch holes in the packed earth. Spots where wood platforms have been used are handspiked immediately after the event. After the handspiking, rain makers are turned on the cleared field.

Here's where your lawn and Yankee Stadium are alike. Soil compaction differs only in degree.

When ground is packed, water, air, and plant food enter it slowly, if at all. Root growth is shallow, and a thatch of dry roots and stems at the surface only increases the problem.

Need for aeration varies with the soil and the use the grass gets. Heavy soils pack more easily than sandy kinds. You can loosen soil with good results in spring or fall, if done when the ground is neither soggy nor dry. In mild weather, if soil isn't too wet, you can aerate into the winter months. If you do it in hot, dry weather, follow immediately with a thorough watering. Under normal conditions, soil loosening twice a year is enough.

Because plowing up a turfed area and reseeding is expensive, and you lose the space for immediate use, your best answer to soil compaction is newly designed soil-aerating equipment now available for home lawns. With it, or with a common fork if your space is small, you can cultivate under packed areas of your lawn with little or no damage to existing grass.

Fletcher

The simplest way to cultivate the soil under the packed spots on your lawn is with the tines of a common fork. Insert the tines and loosen soil gently so the sod isn't broken

The new equipment uses hollow tines or curved, hollow spoons to loosen soil to a depth of about three or four inches and to remove soil cores. Enough room is left so water and fertilizer can move into surrounding soil. Less rain runs off the aerated soil, and need for extra sprinkling is cut sharply.

Hollow-tined tools are even more effective than mechanical spikers with solid spikes which force holes in the ground by squeezing adjacent soil.

Here's how other phases of grass growing are handled at Yankee Stadium—full of leads you can use to keep good grass on the busy spots around your home:

Mowing. "In order to produce the best playing turf," says Owens, "we generally do not let the grass

← Tool above weighs 4 pounds, is built of tubular steel. Hollow tines 4 inches long are wider at the top. As tines are forced into ground, a core of soil is forced out the top

Seeding. Seeding at the Stadium goes on continuously throughout the year, except in January and February when the field lies idle under a light cover of marsh or salt hay.

"We put in our spring stand of grass—a mixture of Kentucky blue, Colonial bent, redtop, and perennial rye—immediately after the last football game—last year on December 10. The seed lies dormant on the ground during the winter, and begins to germinate after the first big thaw in late February or early March," says Owens.

"We get a head start by seeding then because we don't have to wait until the frost is completely out of the ground before we put on our seed. We never seed through the snow, as the ground is too moist to work on. The hay is taken off to let the ground dry about March 1, and we seed the field lightly again.

"Our method of seeding is quite conventional," Owens continues. "In four standard hand spreaders, we place a top-dressing mixture of seed and topsoil brought in from the outside."

The soil mixture varies with the quality of the topsoil which Owens tests by "the feel of it" to see how much sand and humus to add. Average top-dressing mixture contains 5 parts topsoil, 3 of ordinary soil, and 1 of humus, all mixed in large bins under the stands during the winter.

Before the seed-soil mixture is put on, the ground level is built up where needed with topsoil. In one application, the top-dressing of seed and soil is spread evenly over all the Stadium grass about ¼ inch deep. Once over with a light roller finishes the job.

young Alan did The Falkland Times.

It won't be of professional caliber. Your home can become the office and city desk, and his friends the reporters. Encourage your youngster to canvass the neighborhood for pertinent news bits. The Falkland Times reporters solicited ads. They got 10 cents a line for boxed ads and 5 cents a line for classified ads. If your child has any love at all for the newspaper field, you'll be surprised at the way the circulation of their weekly newspaper increases. Alan jumped his to a 300 circulation in a short time. You might even get the children a book on journalism from the library. Once you start this project, you'll have no more bored children on your hands for the remainder of the summer.

Throughout the country, boys and girls are paying their own way through novel businesses or just working at hobbies for the fun of it—most instigated by their parents for the purpose of keeping them from under parents' feet and to develop in the children a sense of responsibility and interest in some project.

If you are alert, you will notice certain tendencies in your child toward some special field. Your boy or girl might enjoy tinkering with clocks, like David Moore of Cleveland, Ohio. You could clear out an old pantry or other room, provide him with some disabled clocks and watches and let him proceed with his tinkering. He might, like David, amaze you with his results and really fix the clocks. David, although just 12, has a small business, which is taking care of his schoolbook bills.

By interesting your child in some type of work or hobby, you are not only working off the youngster's abundant energy but even helping your own cause when he proceeds to make a few dollars out of the work.

Suppose you live in a pine-cone district. You might, like the parents of young Ann Kerr, suggest that she put to use the great number of pine cones found near her home. The girl thought this a good idea. She added heads and feet to the cones, producing strange-looking birds, and now sells them to scores of novelty shops all over the United States.

If your young girl gets jittery a few days after the vacation season opens, give her some scraps of colored yarn and bits of metal dust. Show her how to fashion these bits of colored yarn into quaint little character dolls. The dusting with metal gives them glamour. Elaine Weinstein of Massillon, Ohio, is doing just that and is selling her dolls as fast as she can make them.

There's almost bound to be a mechanically minded boy in every family. Young Dick Spere of Los Angeles was one. Sent to bed for an indefinite period, Dick saw only a long summer ahead. One of his buddies brought in the ignition system of his car and asked Dick to fix it. Since that time, Dick has been making extra dollars by repairing racing-car motors and other types of engines in a sickroom that strongly resembles a garage. But his parents are happy. When you see your boy poring over science books, urge him to visit the local garages and watch the men at work.

Maybe the youngster in your family makes a few extra pennies by cutting lawns. That's good. But why not interest him in teaming up with another lad, as did Leonard Sears with Richard Cornish of Westlake Village, Ohio, in a grass-cutting combine? They'll not only be active, and outdoors, but make enough for many school expenses. Loan them money for a heavy roller and a power mower. Suggest that they make a canvass of the neighborhood and line up lawns to be cut. It will be amazing how many neighbors agree to this arrangement for an entire summer. The Westlake Village lads made enough to buy a small tractor to pull their heavy roller and even lined up two rototillers to speed the work of preparing garden soil for seeding. In one summer you'll have a boy who will know the value of a dollar and will not have vacation boredom.

Children are generally eager to go through with a project—particularly when a reward is in sight. Even the straight hobby with no remuneration, if sufficiently interesting, has its appeal.

By all means, don't despair of thinking of some project to keep your child busy during the summer months. Offhand it might seem silly, but why not buy five used baby strollers for your boys? Have the boys paint them and let them set up a small stand in the corner of a downtown parking lot. Your teen-age boys could rent the strollers to mothers for 25 cents an hour. The mothers place their babies in the strollers, pile packages in the bottom, and run the strollers all over town. Don't scoff. One family of youngsters operated just such a rental service with success.

You'll go far to beat photography for its ability to fascinate. Your older child could learn to develop pictures quickly. But don't stop there. Let him pay for his equipment as a New Jersey boy did. He was convinced that householders were not interested in purchasing photo-post cards of their homes, and so he made photographic match books. He snapped a picture of the home, made a print, stapled the print onto a packet of paper matches in place of the original cover. Few homeowners could resist this appealing packet, and ordered boxes of 50 packets. In six weeks the boy cleared $100. It's not as difficult as you think, and you'll get an occupied child for the summer.

Naturally, you might not be in a position to suggest that your child start a business. But worl someone else is a good particularly for your teen-a dren. Your boy might be on a construction job, a between $40 and $50 a w gaining a good appeti muscles in the bargain. you never thought about your daughter in the local feed store—feeding the and canaries. She'll avera week, depending on the your daughter likes to Mother's hair and is a make a few dollars, why her to one of the loca shops? She might land a receptionist and may co later to be a beauty ope

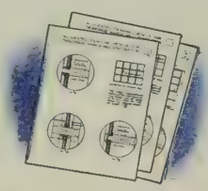
HOW TO GET MORE ROOM IN A ROOM



A window wall like this will do it.

By opening the room to a generous view of the outdoors, it adds space that you both see and feel. The room literally grows.

In winter it adds usable space, too, because this window is *Thermopane insulating glass. You don't have to move away from it to avoid chilly drafts. All the room is more comfortable.

Thermopane makes windows self-insulating. It saves fuel. It helps avoid frosted or steamed windows. No storm sash needed—that chore is off your list for good.

The cost? Only a local estimate can answer that exactly. But we'll gladly send you drawings which show how some builders are using an inexpensive method of framing to keep costs down —comparable in some cases to the cost of an ordinary wall with ordinary windows. Write us for these drawings. They're free. You'll want a set to discuss with your builder. And ask for our book, "Self-insulating Windows of Thermopane". Libbey·Owens·Ford Glass Company 361 Nicholas Building, Toledo 3, Ohio.

Corkscrew carrots

Q My carrots aren't straight and smooth. What makes them misshapen? K. S. T., Illinois

Carrots develop into grotesque shapes when you let them grow too close together.

The carrots here were winding around each other but were separated to show the deep dents. Some varieties of carrots in heavy soils often branch into two root tips, like the top carrot above.

You can avoid this by growing the shorter or stubby-rooted varieties, such as Oxheart. If your soil is light, you can grow longer-type carrots, like Tendersweet and Nantes Coreless. You can plant carrots from now through early July.

Photographs: Stanley

To avoid twisting, or flat sides, and for better-quality carrots, you can be ruthless and pull out the excess carrot seedlings in a row when they are 3 or 4 inches tall. There should be no less than 3 inches between them. With this spacing, each carrot will have room to expand while growing without touching its neighbors. You'll get straight, well-formed carrots you'll be proud of.

Try to select strong seedlings to remain. Add the pulled seedlings to your compost heap.

You can thin even more by pulling some of your carrots when they are just barely big enough for eating, young and tender. You sacrifice production temporarily.

HOW TO KILL CRABGRASS

THERE is good news for those who enjoy a lawn of verdant velvet but who detest the tedious task of keeping it free from crabgrass. The diary of a plain dirt gardener

By Harry R. O'Brien

June 1 After a long and loud oration by me, the family task force sallied forth after supper tonight. David went to work to get more ground ready for late vegetables. Donald cultivated earlier vegetables coming up and also went over prepared ground not yet sown. His idea was to kill out a few million little weeds now germinating.

Then Donald put the shovel plow on the garden tractor and made furrows as good and as deep as he could. Down on knees, I followed with my glad corms in a flat. These I set in the bottom of the furrows as deeply as I could, in hopes they will be down 4 to 6 inches. I spaced them mebbe 8 inches apart. It took four rows for all of them.

After they were set, I took the wheel hoe and ran it alongside to throw about two inches of soil into the trench to cover up the corms. The trench will be filled in further as I cultivate.

Now this may sound a little late, but not so. Glads hereabout in Ohio can go out any time from along in April to early July. In fact, GOOD gardeners plant them in relays, some every two weeks or so, to have a succession of bloom. But I seldom get it done that way. When the right day for me comes, I just stick 'em all out.

But as a matter of fact, mine will not all bloom at the same time, anyhow. Different varieties bloom at different times. And last fall I dumped all of my varieties in together, so I am really putting out about 30 varieties in all. Glad fans will hoot at me, but I recommend my method to Mr. and Mrs. Joe Doakes, who love pretty flowers but don't have time to do it the hobby way.

In a flower bed up toward the front, I put in a row of Fire Chief petunias. This was the All-America gold medal petunia in 1950. By now, I vouch that it is one of the best petunias to come along in many a day, especially for its rich red color.

June 2 "This is the prettiest time of the year," murmured Maggie, as she sashayed down the path with the garbage, bound for the compost pile at the back. At the moment, I was digging out some weeds in the west rose bed.

Maybe she is right. The iris which came on belatedly, is now at its best, and its stately bloom is hither and yon. The Siberian iris is out, too. Great blooms of Oriental poppies add glamour. Roses are beginning to pop all over the beds, though the real tide isn't here yet. Color is appearing in the peony rows.

Maggie spied some bloom on the Sweet Briar Shirley poppies and on some California poppies. Four of our five daylilies are in bloom by now. The Highbush cranberries are covered with white in the shrubbery.

"What's this?" asked Maggie on her way back to the house. "That is gasplant, Dictamnus," says I. I have two plants of this, both white. They have lived and ive- mebbe 15 years now. But why go on? All iris are lovely. Yet so few gardeners have the newer, finer varieties in their gardens. There is certainly no law agin it; the catalogs of the growers are on hand by now, and this is the time to make selections—while the varieties can be seen in bloom.

So few people have any of the finer peonies, either. And the peony is one of the greatest of all flowers. Give it a good location, in sun, not too close to a building or shrubbery. Plant it right, in early fall. Then, it lives for 20 or mebbe even 50 years, faithful and fine every year. Now is the time to see peonies, as they bloom; then send off the order for fall planting.

Our new duck that David brought home about Easter has grown up. First, David moved it to a pen in the back yard. As it grew, he turned it loose from time to time, and now it roams the lawn and the garden paths. It is so big and oh, so happy as it paddles around in the rain.

June 1 Bright, chilly—down to 48 degrees when I got up. In late afternoon, Maggie and I went down to the rose show being sponsored by our men's rose club. And with guilty feeling, too, because I hadn't been down there helping! We saw all the pretty posies, in cases, and others in arrangements.

One of the finest arrangements was an informal one—a bit of Birdie Blye in a copper bowl. This is one of the loveliest, dwarfish, climbing roses in the world. It should have had a gold medal, but all it got was a second prize. That's what sometimes happens when wimminfolks do the judging by book rules instead of by common sense.

Back home and into my overalls, for the ground had dried out. Then, out to emulate my grandmother. That is, I sowed annual seeds the way she always did. I put the seeds in the ground in rows where I want the bloom. In a bed that David had made ready, I sowed dwarf French marigolds, zinnias, and a few others, including a row of Tithonia Torch.

Come night, Maggie was in the kitchen pressing dresses and her new spring suit. I was packing my bag, making sure I had an ample supply of smokin' tobacco in my brief case. We're going off on a trip tomorrow—business—but with some posy-looking as we go along. Maggie is just going along for the buggy ride. [Turn to next page

Aphids (plant lice) are those tiny insects that cover the tender stems, buds and young leaves of plants. There are many varieties of aphids...some are green, others are black, brown, pink or yellow. Some have wings, others cannot fly.

Aphids attack and damage almost all kinds of plants. They thrust their sharp beaks into the plant, deforming it, sucking its vitality. And they transmit numerous plant diseases in much the same way that mosquitoes carry malaria. A heavy infestation of aphids will destroy the beauty and yield of your garden.

BLACK LEAF 40® kills aphids quickly and efficiently—by contact and by fumes. It's economical—one teaspoonful makes two quarts of spray. Also kills leafhoppers, most thrips and other soft-bodied sucking insects. Black Leaf 40 is selective—it spares friendly insects that help in pest control...also spares bees. Never stains or burns and leaves no objectionable residue on foliage or bloom.

Directions in package.

June 5 Our first stop was just over the way, in the garden of Mrs. Stephan, to see her iris. She and Mr. S.—who foots the bill for the iris—have one of the best collections in our vicinity. Now in full bloom. Dozens of the finest new varieties.

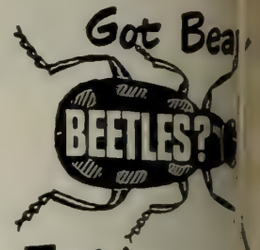
I went to work with my little camera, loaded with color film. One I photographed was the white Spanish Peaks, which I've already mentioned. But I failed to get one of Cherie, the fine new pink, for it was just too far gone to picture. This is one I don't have at home. Still too high-priced for me.

In midafternoon, we stopped at the garden of Mary Williamson in Bluffton, Indiana. Here, I made more pictures.

Then, out to the garden of Paul Cook, near Bluffton. As always, his garden was full of color. I was astonished at the beauty.

June 8 Maggie and I have now arrived at Davenport, Iowa, in our travels. And so naturally, out to the municipal rose garden in Vander Veer Park. Here about 3,000 roses are planted. The garden was dedicated at the time the American Rose Society met here in 1950.

It's a lovely garden, gets good care, and is worth going a long way to see. Most of the newer varieties of roses, and a goodly collection of the old-time kinds, are growing here. Then we found time to visit some of our rose friends around Davenport, Rock Island, and Moline.



Maggie was entranced with the roses at Doctor Plagman's, which grow on a slope in terraces—and those of Doc Evans and the missus. Doc knows how to grow 'em, too. His roses have stamina. At Johnny Hanssen's place, we saw artistic arrangement of rose beds. Tom Clark and his wife have their roses planted in front of white fences. Looks just like a picture in Better Homes & Gardens.

The Tri-City gardeners have started mulching their rose beds the past year or two. Some of them are using chopped-up tobacco stems. Others are using ground corncobs.

June 10 Late tonight, Maggie and I arrived back home. Joyful reunion with the boys. The lights were lit upstairs and down. But all was dark in the garden, and nothing could be seen. Indoors, papers and mail were strewn all around. There was an odor of cooking, but the dishes were all washed.

June 11 Good to be home. Out betimes this morning and found the roses came out while we were away. The beds are full of bloom. Old friends to greet me and some new ones to say, "Howdy." So naturally, I went to work recording them on color film.

After that, first chore was to pick a quart of strawberries. Next, I hand-hoed the new strawberry bed, while David came right after and cultivated between the rows with the little garden tractor. A lot better than when I used to do it by pushing the wheel hoe.

In the annual beds, the seeds sowed the other day are up, but tiny. Here I used the wheel hoe to cultivate between the rows. Over in the early vegetable bed, I hand-weeded the sweetpeas—then used the wheel hoe to throw more soil around the seedlings that were coming up. David and I cultivated all the rose beds.

I got my dahlias planted. These went into a trench, just like the glads

June 12 As I paraded the garden paths this morning, what did I spy but blooms on Vogue, the 1951 All-America floribunda. It came out of the same seed pod as Fashion, and like Fashion, is virtually a new color, leaning more toward red than pink. It's a bit taller than Fashion, though.

I also spied a bloom on Bravo, new for me this year. It's a large, rich, dark red, double hybrid tea. There is bloom, too, on Frensham, a dark reddish floribunda I hadn't grown before.

As I went out front to pick up the morning paper, I spied large, double pink blooms right in the top of a viburnum bush in the shrubbery by the drive. What the heck? No viburnum ever had such bloom. Then I realized it was the climbing rose, Spanish Beauty, that had grown off the fence and onto the viburnum.

Today, it dawned on me that while planting the dahlias I failed to put a circle of plant food out a few inches around the tubers before I covered them up.

Out to work in the evening, and sad news is that flea beetles and leaf hoppers are both on the potatoes. Dust that contains DDT and fixed copper in it is indicated here. Dust is needed on the roses, too, and here I used a general-purpose mixture that has DDT and Fermate in it.

June 13 I stopped at the seed store and bought ammunition for Maggie! One, a can of chlordane for ants; two, a can of DDT; three, a can of weed killer which contains 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T. The latter is recommended for poison ivy.

Well, Maggie sprinkled some chlordane where the little ants had been traveling across the back steps. "It didn't kill 'em right away," she reports. "They just ran around in circles as though they were crazy." But come night, none could be seen.

A long account could be written about my war on weeds this late p.m. You know how I love them. They give me exercise—reduce my circumference. My soul is uplifted every time I finish digging out a row.

June 17 Dark and dismal, this a.m. I looked at the thermometer —57 degrees. But you can't fool me. I know it is still summer. Why, I can see the cheerful, little yellow coreopsis in bloom out back.

Put on my winter coat and out with camera to photograph more roses. But Donald had gone off with my exposure meter! There was a fine bloom on the new, stately pink Juno and a group of gorgeous Red Pinocchio. There was my new white floribunda, Irene of Denmark. And no light meter!

Some of my glad corms were dug up inadvertently the other day, and I had to plant them again. Today, some of my dahlia tubers were on top of the ground and had to be replanted. Now, I see that about half of my second planting of sweet corn has been taken. Wonder who the guilty parties are—crows, squirrels? Or maybe the pixies don't love me any more!

June 19 Went to work on the sweetpeas. Hand-hoed. Then cultivated with wheel hoe. Dissolved high-analysis plant food at rate of one tablespoonful to a gallon of water and poured liberally along the row. This gives them a good boost. Hand-hoed the first planting of potatoes. Curiosity got the better of me, and I pulled one up—the size of a walnut. The peas are filling out.

June 29 Donald and I are going off on a long trip tomorrow. So played hooky most of the day. Set out and watered in more mum plants. Cut off old bloom stalks of iris, down at the rhizomes. Made third planting of sweet corn. Cut off tops of Memorial Day daisies, now through blooming. Went all over the place with David and pointed out what I'd like to have him do while I'm gone.

How to be successful with bedding plants

"Bedding plants" is a term long used to designate those used for the sake of flowers, foliage, or both to produce masses of color. Usually they are set in bands or beds when in bloom or almost so, and make up some of the brightest of the summer displays. Best-known of those grown for their foliage are the highly colorful coleus; the bright red bloodleaf; the red, green, and yellow alternanthera; and the silvery-gray lavender-cotton.

Dwarf lobelias and ageratum will give you blue; the semperflorens-type of begonias, English daisies, and dwarf petunias will give you pinks and reds. With Begonias, gloxinias, achimines. These are the showiest summer-flowering plants for shaded positions. All grow from bulbs or tubers and do best in a deep soil made loose and rich with leafmold or peatmoss. The tuberous begonias have the most spectacular flowers; those of the achimines are most appealing. Gloxinias, with their huge leaves and beautifully rich bells, respond when given the same care as African-violets.

At this season, it is best to buy started plants. Set each tuberous begonia with its largest leaf pointed to the front. Plan to stake your begonias to prevent sprawling.

How to feed and water. Because they can be allowed no time off, bedding plants should all be watered and fed so that flowers are unspotted and unbattered by water. Use plant food as you would for side-dressing vegetables, a pint of balanced plant food for each side of a 25-foot row. Dissolve in water, then apply to soil after plants show definite growth. Repeat after four weeks.

You could show the kiddies how to bake cookies—even furnish them with cooks' caps. On another day, it would be handcraft day at another home. The girls would weave, work with clay, sew and place doll wardrobes in order. The boys would carve and paint. Another mother could conduct a reading day, where she would read about the adventures of Tom Sawyer. If this program is followed for the summer vacation, you will find that much more has been accomplished, that the children have developed more solid friendships, and have acquired a liking for doing practical things.

For your smaller child, you might need several hobbies to keep him interested. You could take him into the garden, allow him several short rows of flowers or vegetables, show him how to seed the ground, and then let him care for the tiny patch. You'll find him out there each day, hopefully watching for the results of his watering and care. The same lad might be also fascinated by an aquarium in the house. SK-SD: New enzyme combination

In both these cases, the trouble was traced to a single culprit—pus. Which may surprise you.

A common idea is that pus is always "laudable." And, true enough, it does have a useful function—to mobilize the body's white cells so they can engulf invading bacteria. But when pus doesn't drain off freely, it's no longer laudable at all. Then it may become an actual barrier, walling off the infected area so that other needed white cells and even antibiotic drugs can't get near the disease organisms. The pus may become so thick and sticky that it won't even flow out of an open wound or can't be withdrawn readily when surgery is done.

SK-SD has a magic touch with such infection. It's a combination of streptokinase and streptodornase (that's where you get the SK-SD, of course), two of a vast group of substances called enzymes. Enzymes are biological catalysts—natural chemicals that start or speed up living processes, yet aren't themselves used up or changed.

Fascinatingly enough, these two particular enzymes are plucked from streptococci germs—which are among man's deadliest, disease-producing enemies, It's as if science had reached deep into the heart of enemy country and made the foe yield up the weapons needed to defeat him.

When the new enzyme combination gets next to pus, it just simply dissolves it. It turns the thickest masses virtually into water. It does the same to clotted blood and to other debris. Once SK-SD gets rid of these barriers, disease-fighting drugs or even the body's own defenses alone can win the battle.

You can get an idea of just how important SK-SD can be if you go back for a moment to the case of the elderly man with the lung abscess. For the woman with pneumonia, surgical or other complicated procedures might have been tried—with some risk, of course—in the hope that the infectious material could be removed. In her case SK-SD avoided surgery and risk and delay.

But for the man, the new enzyme combination was virtually the only hope. Before it was used, surgeons had been called in to determine whether they might operate to open up the chest and get the waste out that way. But when they saw the man—he was not only 68 years old; he was also down to a weight of 68 pounds—they didn't dare operate.

Here are two different but equally dramatic cases from the records of hundreds in a New York hospital—that of a woman with a heart inflammation and a young girl with a deep bone infection.

The woman's trouble, known as pericarditis, is an infection that affects the covering of the heart. It can happen at any time of life—result of an infection that spreads from elsewhere in the body and settles down in the Pericarditis is dead cause it interferes w ability to fill with bl licked and becomes pericardium, the he may calcify and, in the heart in a sort of young man, weeks after being wounded by a bullet, was making no progress. And a few beds away, there was a 53-year-old man who'd fallen down a flight of stairs and suffered multiple rib fractures and now, after weeks in the hospital, was also getting no better.

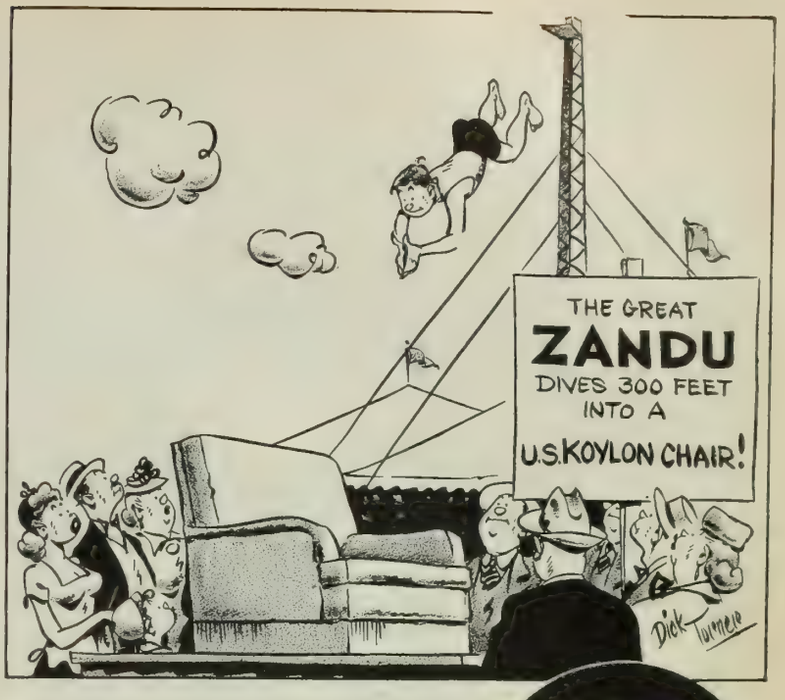
In both cases, a massive blood clot had formed between lung and chest wall and, although surgeons had punctured the chest wall in each case, they hadn't been able to clear out the clot.

Injections of the enzyme combination quickly did the trick. In the latter case, within 48 hours after injection, over a quart of fluid that had formerly been a thick clot had been drawn off. Both men were soon out of the hospital.

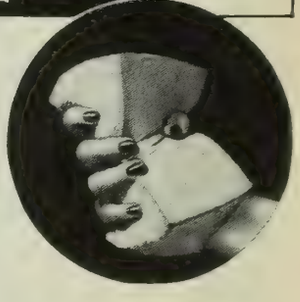
Chronic middle-ear infections also have been cleared up by SK-SD. A teen-age youth had had almost continuous trouble ever since a mastoid operation 10 years before. Troublesome secretions kept draining out of his ear. They came from a hard core of debris in the middle ear which remained as a breeding ground for bacteria.

SK-SD was instilled in the middle ear and allowed to sit there for four hours. In two days, the discharge was ended. In 10 days, the infection had been completely eradicated. For the first time in 10 years, the boy was free of trouble.



Sinus trouble has been helped, too. One man who'd had a chronic condition for three years suffered an acute flare-up recently and, after 10 days of exquisite pain, was admitted to a hospital. Penicillin did no good. X-rays showed the sinus choked with pus. After an SK-SD injection right into the sinus, the infection began to drain satisfactorily. It must be emphasized here, however, that SK-SD has no value—at least, so far—in sinus cases where mucus rather than pus is a source of trouble.

On the other hand, some doctors believe the enzymes may help to prevent development of chronic sinusitis. It can be used, when necessary, in acute sinusitis to establish rapid and complete drainage. In combination with antibiotics, it promotes healing and helps avoid thickened scar tissue in the sinus lining. The scar tissue has been blamed as a cause of chronic sinusitis because it shelters germs.



All of this doesn't begin to exhaust the important applications of the new development. It was Dr. William S. Tillett, now 59 and chairman of the department of medicine at New York University, who first discovered the enzyme, streptokinase, in the deadly streptococcus bug back in 1933. There were innumerable problems involved in isolating, purifying, and then testing the chemical. In 1939, Tillett was joined in his experimentation by Dr. L. R. Christensen, a young bacteriologist, now an assistant professor at New York University. The two men finally determined that streptokinase would dissolve fibrin—which is the main constituent of blood clots.

Eventually, in collaboration with

SK-SD: New enzyme combination

Dr. Sol Sherry, a young internist on the Bellevue staff and now, too, an assistant professor of medicine at N.Y.U., Tillett and Christensen isolated from the streptococcus bug a second enzyme—streptodornase. It was found to be effective in dissolving pus itself.

It took more years of patient work before it became clear that when the two enzymes were combined, they did a rapid and effective job of thinning and dissolving not only blood clots but pus cells and other debris that delay healing.

At Bellevue Hospital, doctors began to try the enzymes on a wide variety of patients only a few years ago. After results on 250 patients proved highly significant, one of America's great pharmaceutical houses stepped into the picture to help by turning out the enzymes (under the name "Varidase") in quantity so that researchers all over the world could test them.

At the Hospital for Sick Children in London, doctors tried the enzymes on tubercular meningitis. This terrible disease that tends to strike youngsters between the ages of 5 months and 12 years, was almost invariably fatal until the antibiotic streptomycin was available. But even with streptomycin, the death rate is high, and many who do recover are left with deafness or mental deficiency. The trouble, according to some doctors, may be that a tough, stringy, fibrinous material forms in the spinal canal and in the spaces around the brain and prevents streptomycin from getting to the germs.

At the London hospital, doctors gave streptomycin alone, as usual, to 14 children. To 19 others, they gave streptomycin and the enzymes. Eleven of the 14 children in the first group died; 11 of the enzyme-treated 19 recovered.

But the London doctors were "greatly encouraged" by other results. Of the three children who recovered in the first group, one is deaf, the second mentally deficient. But of the 11 recovered children in the enzyme-treated group—and they've been observed now for at least 9 months and, in some cases, for as long as 23 months—only 1 seems to be mentally deficient; the other 10 appear entirely normal.

In London, too, other doctors have had excellent results in bronchiectasis—a chronic infection marked by violent coughing. Bronchiectasis is more frequent in children, but adults may have it, too. Drippings from chronic sinus trouble may cause it—providing a constant irritation in the lungs. After years of this, the sufferer, in addition to having a chronic cough, is generally weak and fatigued.

One London man, a long-time victim of the disease, was given the enzymes by inhalation. Then, for the first time in years, he was able to walk upstairs. He slept better and when he woke up, could breathe more easily. There's good hope that early use of SK-SD may help cut short bronchiec is and prevent it from becomint

What's wrong with this family?

What's right

Every youngster of school age should have an allowance which is his money to spend as he chooses. Danny's parents do seem to recognize that he should have his own share, however small, of the total family income. His dad appears to be an affectionate father who wants to provide his son with some of the things all boys want. The Thomas family seems the kind which talks things over together, and Danny isn't afraid to speak up for what he wants.

What's wrong

Danny's father seems to have confused two very different things—giving Danny a regular weekly allowance and buying him presents. One can't take the place of the other. There is certainly a place in a youngster's life for gifts, but interrupting a weekly allowance because of something which you, the parent, decide to buy for him is poor practice for two reasons: (1) It breaks an agreement between you and your youngster; (2) it interferes with his chances of learning to manage his own money. Once agreed upon, an allowance ought to be as dependable a source of weekly income for a boy or girl as Dad's salary check is for the family.

It's hard to tell whether the Thomases are allowing Danny as much money as he needs for legitimate recreation and saving. Why is Danny usually broke? Is it because his allowance is too small? Or does it prove that Danny needs to receive his allowance with "no strings attached" so that he can learn by his own experience (some of it sad) how to handle money.

A youngster can learn the value of money only by having to make choices as to what he will buy. A boy Danny's age should be learning what it means to buy an outboard motor, or something of the sort, by having some part and responsibility for its purchase. There is no indication that the Thomases have encouraged Danny, like Joe, to work and earn toward some of the bigger purchases he would like—a good experience for any

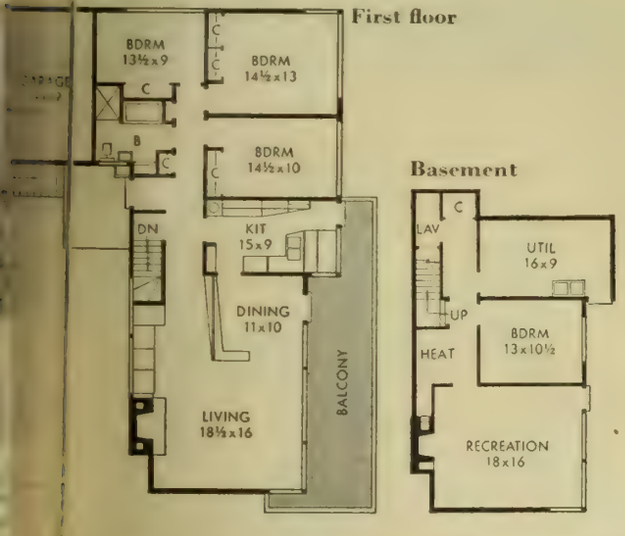
Why did the Carl Pruzans build a balcony? As a place for eating out in warm months, and as a remote crow's nest for watching the children's play yard below.

Because of its precipitous site, house is on three levels—garage at street level, major rooms almost a full level below, recreation and laundry a full floor below that. Balcony is at ranch level.

Below the balcony and half sheltered by it is a concrete terrace opening off the laundry and the recreation room. Here is an intermediate space for the children which is easily supervised from the balcony above.



Living and dining areas share a window wall which overlooks the balcony and its view beyond. Because the view is below eye level the railing is open so that it won't block the view from these rooms.

Should your youngsters travel alone?

On his own, but he knows what to do from careful planning and trips with D[illegible]

By N. E. Cutts and Nicholas Moseley

Has your youngster made his first independent trip or visit? Are you afraid when he sets out on his own?

The parents in our study group had a hot debate about when a child was old enough to travel and visit without his parents. An uncle had invited the 12-year-old son of one member to Michigan to fish. If he went, he would have to cross Chicago from one terminal to another changing trains, a thing he had often done with his parents but never by himself. This time no one was free to go with him. He was eager to accept the invitation and sure he would have no trouble.

"I wouldn't let my boy do it," one mother said. "You can't pick up a paper without reading of assaults on children."

Others began to tell all of the things that might happen to youngsters. These dangers ran from kidnaping to losing baggage and money. They included sudden sickness, getting lost, traffic accidents, and falling in with bad companions. And even if the young visitor arrived safely, there were the chances of homesickness, spoiling, upset digestion, interruption of schoolwork, and strained family relations. It began to look as if no wise parent would even let a youngster stir anywhere unless he were accompanied by some g[illegible] peoples' adventures followed then.

Should your youngsters travel alone?

A 5-year-old boy had traveled by air from Frankfurt, Germany, to Idaho.

Two brothers, 11 and 15, had been allowed to detour en route home from camp to visit Niagara Falls.

Two 17-year-old girls had spent the summer between high school and college bicycling through France.

A 12-year-old girl, who had qualified in a National Junior Sailing Championship, was to stay with friends of her family over the races. Her first night, she was so homesick that she begged to be taken home.

"Janet," her wise hostess said, "of course we'll take you home if you insist. But just think. You'll have to learn to visit alone sooner or later, if you are going to be a champion. And soon you'll want to go to college. If you lick this now, you'll be glad for the rest of your life."

There was a long pause; then in a wee, small voice, Janet said, "I'll stay." She did not win her race, but she had won something more valuable, her independence.

Certain precautions, the parents in the study group agreed, are in order. It pays to teach the 4-year-old his name and address. If he knows this, and is sure that uniformed policemen are his friends, he and his parents have less fear as he explores the neighborhood.

When a child begins to take a bus to school or downtown, he should be given an emergency fund to keep in a different pocket from his tickets.

Young travelers should be told about the Traveler's Aid, and if opportunity offers, they should be taken by their parents to the Aid's desk in a big terminal and given a chance to talk to the agent.

Changing trains, particularly when this involves crossing from one terminal to another in a strange city, is a big mental hazard for even a teen-ager. If a friend cannot meet him, it helps to tell the youngsters to use "porter-taxi-porter." Both porters and taxi drivers are well supervised and eager to help.

How to order meals and how to tip are posers for the inexperienced. It gives a child a good start to allow him to choose, order, pay, and tip when he is still traveling with his elders. (One teen-ager solved the ordering problem by telling the waiter, in what he hoped was an offhand manner, "Give me the best meal you can for a dollar." Another reports, "I always look to see what other people are having. If a lot of people are eating one thing, I guess it's the cheapest and best.")

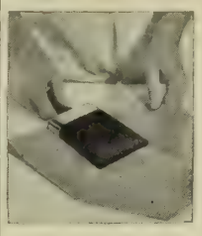
How to improve your paint jobs... make your brushes last longer



Start in corners of walls, ceilings and floors, and paint away from them. Use a strong stroke and work steadily so paint does not set before adjoining strip is applied.

Don't let your brush "fishtail" (see insert) by painting narrow or round surfaces with a large brush. Use small brush—one designed for the job—bristled with Du Pont nylon.

Clean brushes with thinner after daily use. Suspend brush in thinner overnight. Bristle tips should not touch bottom of can. Work out thinner before painting again.

When you store your brushes for longer periods, clean thoroughly and wrap securely in the manner shown here. Brushes stay in better condition when kept in shape.

For best results use

NYLON PAINT BRUSHES

Job after job, you'll get best results with a nylon paint brush. Tests made by an independent research laboratory prove nylon brushes paint smoother. And durable Du Pont nylon bristles don't break off, even on roughest surfaces. They last 3 to 5 times longer than ordinary bristles . . . are clean and sanitary. Nylon paint brushes are made by leading manufacturers in all types and sizes. Look for the word NYLON on the handle.

parents ahead of time. Don't try to cut off privileges that are allowed at home. If the radio irritates you, arrange to have a receiver which the visitors can use out of your hearing.

It helps if your young visitors come two or more at a time. If there is only one, arrange dates with youngsters of his age in the neighborhood.

Talking it over. Half the fun of a party is in reminiscence. And when reminiscence starts—when the parents have come to fetch the youngsters, when other members of the family ask how the visit went, when the lonesome hosts are reminding each other of what their young visitors said and did—think only of the happy events. If the youngsters boast until they seem to be telling a story about Paul Bunyan, back them up. After all, a visit is an adventure and should be glorified.

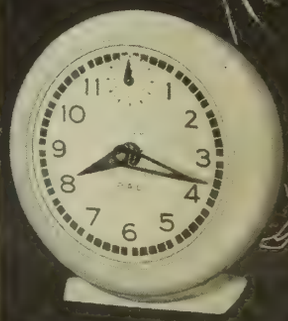
youngster. Danny seems to be kept in the position of a much younger child, almost completely independent upon the gifts of his parents. True, as Mrs. Thomas says, if Danny's allowance is increased, he still may not save money. But he will only learn by living through his own mistakes.



How should you decide the size of an allowance? There is no simple rule or standard. It should, however, be done in a democratic way, with the whole family discussing the size of the family income, the expenses that must be covered, and the fair proportion of the income that each member should have to spend on himself. An adolescent's allowance should be big enough to permit him to stand on his own feet with his own social group. There should be some understanding of what items the allowance is to cover. Young people of Danny's age can usually be entrusted with full, or partial responsibility, for buying their own clothing, taking care of their own school expenses, and paying for their own recreation. If your youngster makes serious mistakes in the process, the answer is not to take away his allowance, but to talk with him about the trouble he is having and see if a little guidance will help him.

Handling money is an important part of life, and too many of us grow up ill-prepared for it. An allowance may at times seem wasteful to you, the parent; but you may feel less impatient if you realize that it can be insurance for your boy or girl against unhappiness and incompetence when you are no longer around to help him.

kites. You can find directions in most encyclopedias or in a book on kite making from the library.

Or you might suggest to your child that he do something with some old wire coat hangers. Using cotton stuffing and old rags, he can make dolls of the hangers. Show him how to shape the wire into a figure. Next, cover the figure with the cotton and then dress the dolls with clothes made from rags. Finally paint on facial features.

Other project ideas can be found in the Boy or Girl Scout craft books.

Of course, you might be the parent who wants complete rest for at least a brief time during the summer months. If so, why not consider a camp or summer school for your youngster? He might pick up in health and responsibility at a camp. He'll become more self-reliant, acquire skills, learn how to get along with others, and most of all, learn what to do with leisure time.

Before you pack Johnny or Jane off to camp, check carefully on the one you select. You'll find that the average enrollment at camps runs from 40 to 200 and that at the larger camps the children are generally divided into groups with each subdivision operating under a complete staff. Since camping will be such an important phase in your child's life, make the most of it. Don't necessarily send your child to the nearest camp. If you can afford it, see that the youngster gets a change of climate. He will profit from the experience of living in another part of the country.

Keep in mind also that at camps where the campers range from 6 to 16 years of age, your child will not be the only 6-year-old there, nor will he be the only 16-year-old. And don't think that a younger child should pay less. Actually, he will require more care by the expert staff.

What will it cost for this camp adventure for your child? Anywhere from $10.50 weekly charged by the Campfire Girls, to the sky. At one camp in Maine for instance, you would shell out an average $30 for a week of camp fun. This includes side trips and the child's laundry. You might also investigate a boys' club camp, a Y.M.C.A. Camp, or a K. of C. Camp. If your older child is qualified, he or she might even land a job as a camp counselor as did 14-year-old Sandra Rubinstein of Pittsburgh, who worked as a junior counselor at a day camp.

If your tastes lean toward summer schools, you might check with your school board. One school in Cleveland Heights, Ohio, for instance, caters to young children. They use the school's equipment and build items like birdhouses, bows and arrows, and the other childhood loves. You might prefer that your child soak up both camp fun and schooling. Such school-

If your child joins such an organization, you will see that these tours of the poor areas not only take up the summertime but inculcate in your child charity for his fellow man. Armed with a line-up of hobbies, jobs, businesses, camps, and social work, you'll welcome summer vacation with open arms. Don't wait for vacation months to surround you. Plan now, note your child's abilities, and prepare him for his full summer.

kites. You can find directions in most encyclopedias or in a book on kite making from the library.

Or you might suggest to your child that he do something with some old wire coat hangers. Using cotton stuffing and old rags, he can make dolls of the hangers. Show him how to shape the wire into a figure. Next, cover the figure with the cotton and then dress the dolls with clothes made from rags. Finally paint on facial features.

Other project ideas can be found in the Boy or Girl Scout craft books.

Of course, you might be the parent who wants complete rest for at least a brief time during the summer months. If so, why not consider a camp or summer school for your youngster? He might pick up in health and responsibility at a camp. He'll become more self-reliant, acquire skills, learn how to get along with others, and most of all, learn what to do with leisure time.

Before you pack Johnny or Jane off to camp, check carefully on the one you select. You'll find that the average enrollment at camps runs from 40 to 200 and that at the larger camps the children are generally divided into groups with each subdivision operating under a complete staff. Since camping will be such an important phase in your child's life, make the most of it. Don't necessarily send your child to the nearest camp. If you can afford it, see that the youngster gets a change of climate. He will profit from the experience of living in another part of the country.

Keep in mind also that at camps where the campers range from 6 to 16 years of age, your child will not be the only 6-year-old there, nor will he be the only 16-year-old. And don't think that a younger child should pay less. Actually, he will require more care by the expert staff.

What will it cost for this camp adventure for your child? Anywhere from $10.50 weekly charged by the Campfire Girls, to the sky. At one camp in Maine for instance, you would shell out an average $30 for a week of camp fun. This includes side trips and the child's laundry. You might also investigate a boys' club camp, a Y.M.C.A. Camp, or a K. of C. Camp. If your older child is qualified, he or she might even land a job as a camp counselor as did 14-year-old Sandra Rubinstein of Pittsburgh, who worked as a junior counselor at a day camp.

If your tastes lean toward summer schools, you might check with your school board. One school in Cleveland Heights, Ohio, for instance, caters to young children. They use the school's equipment and build items like birdhouses, bows and arrows, and the other childhood loves. You might prefer that your child soak up both camp fun and schooling. Such school-
